NEW MINISTER ARRIVES

REV. L. H. S. CHAPPELLE AND FAMILY RECEIVE CORDIAL WELCOME.

Saturday morning last not a few of the Clanton Methodists were at the depot to welcome to the city Dr. L. H. S. Chappelle, his excellent wife and attractive daughter, who for the next Conference year, at least, is to have charge of Methodism in this city. Dr. Chappelle had expected to arrive from his recent home at Brewton the night previous, and a number were anxiously awaiting the arrival of the train to greet him, but it was soon learned that No. 4 would keep its regular schedule and not stop at Clanton. The disappointed crowd went to their respective homes to await the arrival of the 10:20 train upon which they felt confident the minister would come.

The ladies, in anticipation of his arrival, had made the home quite comfortable and had prepared an appetizing lunch, but again they were to be disappointed, for Dr. Chappelle, feeling that it was an unseasonable hour to arrive in a strange place, had decided to remain in Montgomery over night and come to Clanton the following morning.

Nevertheless, not a few braved the chilly night and the stygian darkness which enwraps the depot after the departure of No. 11, hoping that Dr. Chappelle would come.

One little incident occurred which dulled the sharp edge of disappointment: Postmaster Dudley had been to Montgomery and returned on number 8; in the blackness of the night, and, with expectation at fever heat, a certain good lady whose Methodism sometimes bubbles over with exuberance, rushed up to the postmaster who had alighted, satchel in hand, and exclaimed: "Are you the new minister? So glad to meet you!"

Those who know the genial postmaster can best imagine his looks. It is not our purpose to attempt to describe them. He had the opportunity of his life, however, for in the inky darkness he could have gained some hearty hand-shakes; but big hearted, jovial fellow that he is, he gave one of those well known haw-haws which betrayed him completely. Nor will we say how the good lady almost fainted when she discovered her mistake. Imagine that, if you can! Mr. Dudley stated to a few friends that it was bad enough for folks to be trying to get his job, but that it was simply awful that a fellow could not leave home for a few hours without being taken for a Methodist preacher when he returned.

But to the text: Dr. Chappelle, his wife and daughter came on Saturday morning; they received a most cordial welcome and were escorted to the parsonage (we hate the word!) by several who busied themselves in making things pleasant for the minister and his family. But, did we say family? That's a mistake, for besides Dr. and Mrs. Chappelle and Miss Marguerite, his winsome daughter, he has three sons. However, none of them will be here for some time as the youngest son is now in college at Greensboro, another is in the ministry stationed at Bay Minette while the third is connected with the Pensacola Journal.

Dr. Chappelle is a gentleman of most pleasant address; Clanton is indeed fortunate in having him with us; his wife, a most estimable lady will, without doubt, prove a great inspiration and blessing to the Methodists here and Miss Marguerite, by her grace and charm of manner has already won for herself a secure a place in the admiration of her new acquaintances.

EMPHATIC DENIAL

Editor of the Clanton Press,

Dear Sir:—The writer, on his arrival in Clanton today from the dam was much astonished at being informed that common report credited our Camp at Lock 12 with being infested with a contagious disease; furthermore that our men were dying daily. I desire as Resident Engineer on behalf of the Alabama Power Co. and McArthur Bros. Co. to emphatically deny all such reports, and brand them as absolutely false. There is not now, nor has there been at any time, any contagious diseases at our camps. I would call to your attention the fact that we now have at the dam some six or seven families of women and children for whom we feel no alarm whatever. Further we intend keeping them there as we consider our camps a far more sanitary and healthy a place than any other similar community in the county. Many of our workmen, I understand, are being kept from returning to Lock 12 by the above reports. This of course, is very harmful to the general welfare of the county at large and also to the progress of this work which must necessarily benefit not only the whole county but the State at large. I wish to assure those who have been influenced by these reports that we welcome any sanitary or medical inspection that may be made by reputable physicians or disinterested parties, knowing full well that only one verdict can be returned, namely, a clean bill of health.

A. C. Polk,
Resident Eng. Ala. Power Co.

CHURCH SERVICE SUNDAY LAST

EXCELLENT MUSIC, SPLENDID SERMON.

Last Sunday was a "housewarming" occasion at the Methodist church. In anticipation of the arrival of the Rev. L. H. S. Chappelle, who was appointed by the recent Conference as pastor in charge of this work, a special musical program had been prepared which was rendered in a most creditable manner,

The expectations of the congregation were pitched high for Mr, Chappelle's reputation as expounder of the gospel had preceded him; nor was the expectation disappointed in the least.

The reverend gentleman selected as a basis for his remarks the 14th verse of the 2nd chapter of Paul's Epistle to Titus: "Who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works." In a masterly manner did the minister present his theme and many were the congratulatory expressions of the congregation.

To say that the minister captivated his audience is but expressing a truth.

Immedaitely after the close of the service many went forward to meet the new minister to thank him for his helpful sermon and to bid him welcome to Clanton.

The next service at the church will be held on the second Sunday, January 12th, at which time, doubtless, even a larger congregation will greet the able divine.

AN APPEAL FOR HITCHING POSTS

Editor Press:—I ain't been a [illegible] paper, but since I like [illegible] town once and a while, I'm pressed to try my hand in behalf of we country crackers a hitching place fur our "hard tails" when we goes to Clanton.

Ise been a hearin' about them city laws Clanton has; 'tis agin de law to turn our "hard tails" a loose, and 'tis agin de law to hitch um to de post along de sidewalk and there ain't no hitching places, and some of us country crackers ain't got no wives and chillun to hold um for us. So what's we gwina do?

Now, I wants to 'peal to de lawyers, merchants, doctors, bankers, and police, who may ain t got no "hard tails" to hitch, but who is pending on us country crackers fur a liven, to fix us a place to tie our "hard tails" when we goes to town if you want us, and if you do not we will go to de little towns what ain't got so many laws, but few a more hitching places.

Country Cracker.

WHAT IS IT? WHY IS IT?

When Physicians Disagree To Whom Must The Layman Apply? Some Say Meningetis, Some Say No!

Not a little excitement has been created upon the streets of Clanton within the past few days, by the reports that MENINGITIS existed, in epidemic form, in the eastern part of the county. It is known that two well developed cases of this dreaded disease have developed and that the victims have died within a short time, as is usually the case in cases of meningitis, if the diagnosis of some of Clanton's leading physicians are to be depended upon.

The Press has thus far hesitated to make any comment upon the malady, waiting patiently for the medical fraternity to determine for certain just what the disease is that seems to be prevalent in the easter part of the county; but since there seems to be no indication of the physicians "getting together" we feel it our duty, not only as a news medium, but as a guardian, to some extent, of the people.

Persistent rumor has tried to connect the camps of the Alabama Power Co., eight or nine miles from here, with the disease, whatever it is, but the Press feels that this is doing the Company a great injustice and is an attempt to place the blame where it does not really belong.

The consulting physician at the camps and the attending physician have both made a written statement that there is no contageous or infectuous disease at the camp and that none, except a mild case of small pox, has ever been at the camp; this statement we are publishing elsewhere; it is entitled to full credence. Mr. Polk, the resident engineer. also has a signed statement which we are publishing and to which our readers should give attention. He has no motive whatever in trying to deceive the people or to create a wrong impression.

Nevertheless, the Press feels constrained as a newspaper, to give to the people the facts and rumors as it has been enabled to gather them, and allow a discriminating public to differentiate for themselves.

We would be faithless to our duty, to the people who have trusted us if we permitted these rumors, which so vitally effect them, to go unpublished. We do not wish to create a panic or in any way to effect the great work that is going on out at the river dam. It is the one great thing which has taken place in Chilton county, it will do more for the developement of this town and counts than [illegible] things which have [illegible] half a century.

After talking with Dr. Hopkins and Mr. Polk, the Press is convinced that there is no contageon at the camps—or was not at the time of the conversation. After talking with Dr. Gragg and other physicians, we are convinced that there is an infectious disease in the eastern part of the county. We are convinced that this disease is known to medical science as meningitis or "spotted fever" and that it is extremely fatal; we are convinced that immediate steps should be taken to stamp it out to prevent other sections from becoming infected; we are convinced that unless immediate steps are taken Clanton and Chilton county stand in great danger of being bottled up for a season; we are convinced that if the disease spreads many homes will be in mourning and many hearts made desolate. But the story—Read it and then decide for yourself. Do not place blame upon any one or any corporation till you have read the whole story. We would be recreant to our duty if we failed to give in full all the facts and rumors we have heard; we have traced many of them to their fountain head, having spent the day in the search. The Press is going to call a spade a spade and a shovel a shovel—the people are entitled to know the facts. If in giving these rumors, or these substantiated facts, we tread upon the toes of any one kindly remember that it was not intentional; it came within the scope of our duty to our constituents—the public—and we tried to do our duty

Some days ago a certain young man living in the eastern part of the county was struck in the head by a "cant hook;" the wound did not, at first, seem to amount to anything, at least the young man did not cease his work. The next day he reported for duty and worked till in the afternoon when he was taken with a chill followed by violent suffering at the back of the head and in the spinal column. The stroke over the eve was at first associated with this suffering but when the force of the stroke was explained this theory was dismissed and the case diagnosed as malarial fever. Two days afterward Dr. Gragg was called to attend the case as consulting physician. He agreed with Dr. Wilson that it was a case of fever.

Dr. Gragg called upon him but once and gave but slight attention to the "cant hook" stroke. Two days after this Dr. Hopkins was called upon and the young man brought to a local infirmary for treatment. It was discovered that the young man had a fractured skull. He was treated for a clot on the brain. An operation was performed by a skilled Birmingham physician, but no clot of blood found; however the pressure upon the brain was removed and the young man seemed to progress nicely.

Several days after this Dr. Gragg was called upon to wait upon Mr. Geo. Mims, he seemed to have all the symptons shown by the first young man except the stroke on the head; he had a violent chill followed by pains in the head and contraction of the muscles, a maniacal spasm and other symptons. In two or three days meningitis of a pronounced type developed and Geo. Mims died. It is proper here perhaps, to say that the symptons of the two cases were almost identical; it is proper also to say that Dr. Osler, one of the world's most famous physicians, states that the symptons develped by Mr. George Mims are the identical symptons which are prevalent in cases of meningitis—they are also the symptons which would develop in the case of a fractured skull.

Several days after the death of Geo Mims Dr. Gragg was called upon to treat Sam Mims, living in the same neighborhood. He developed the same symptons as did the other two and died of a pronounced case of meningitis—more than one physician having passed upon both the Mims cases. Both died and were reported to the county health officer, as cases of well developed meningitis or spotted fever. Under the law, as given to us, it becomes the duty of health officers to report cases of infectious and contagious diseases to the health officer; this we presume has been done—in fact we know it has for Dr, Hopkins is a faithful officer and a good physician. It then becomes the duty of the health officer to make investigation, but as the two cases reported have been so recent it is probable that investigation has not been started.

Aside from the three cases mentioned above, there seems to have been no other cases of meningitis or even suspected cases; each of these persons was a native of Chilton county and were not connected with the camps tho' they leved in that immedicte section, hence it is not proper or even fair to conclude that the cases originated there.

However, there has been more or less sickness at the camps; it seems to be hard for the operating companies to get their employees to "stick" to their jobs. This is but natural where there is a large number of men gathered from all sections of the country are congregated. Some work a few days and leave; others stay till they are well fed and have made a few dollars then they leave. As many go out to the camps for work as leave, so that it is natural to conclude that the company is unfortunate in its selection of workers.

Several cases of "suspicious" illness have been reported from the camps, but the attending and consulting physicians deny that it is contagious or infectious diseases; nevertheless these rumors will not "down" and stay down. Tuesday, after an all day search for confirmation of rumors as to the prevalence of infectious diseases at the camps or elsewhere, the following information was gleaned from more or less reliable sources:—

A machinist asked for his "time" and it was refused till he showed "fight;" then he was paid and asked to say nothing of conditions at the camp. A young official telephoned into Clanton that he was ill and wanted to leave before his trouble became serious; those attending him asked if he was to be carried to Lomax or to Jemison and put on the train; the prompt response was, "Bring him to Clanton, we must do no dodging or else we lay ourselves liable to criticism for attempting to dodge." We are informed that a young man who frequently goes to the camps on business states positively that there is undoubtedly "something wrong out there;" another piece of information comes to us to the effect that one of the carpenters was arranging to leave his job when an office job at $125.00 per month and board was offered him provided he would remain.

We give these as significant facts, but not as confirmed facts; they can, however, be confirmed by competent witnesses if not by the parties themselves.

On the contrary, those who are most prominently connected with the construction work have their wives and children at the camps and it is not reasonable to suppose that this would be the case if inflection existed. Surely these men would not expose their loved ones to such a deadly disease when they could as easily move them to places of safety.

A large party of Birmingham capitalists were invited to the camps less than a week ago and another party of distinguished citizens from Montgomery are to visit there this week; if inflection or contagion existed, and the officials knew of it, it would be worse than criminal for them to issue such invitations or to permit visitors at the camps at all, and the Press does not believe that these worthy gentlemen would do such a thing.

The unfortunate situation arises over a disagreement of the physicians; it is true that several of them agree on the Mims cases near the camps, but on other cases there is a disagreement.

The power company has promised to do its full duty in safeguarding the health of the camp and the surrounding sections; the town authorities if they are not busy, and perhaps all these wild rumors would soon die of their own weight.

One thing is certain, and be it said to the shame of Clanton, the camps are vastly more sanitary than is the town of Clanton. The negroes out there have more protection from infectious and contagious diseases than have those "who live in king's houses and wear purple every day" in the town of Clanton. Let an outside disinterested expert physician be called to settle forever the question of meningitis or spotted fever—if we have it outside of the camp let the citizens know—if it is in the camps let us know it. There is nothing to be gained by deception. The great probability is that the excitement is all over, except in the minds of a few, but till this is alloued persistent rumors will continue, much to the damage of the county and to the great work that is going on out at the Power plant.

CONTRARY PEOPLE

From the Ohio State Journal

That is people who look up objections to a proposition and, when they have found one, they are against it. It makes no difference how many good reasons there are for it. That one objection looms up into mountainous magnitude.

If the world were full of such people it would not advance a barley-corn.

To be so phsychologically equipped is a great misfortune to any one. Everything is under suspicion. Proclaiming some positive reform is like shaking a red rag at a bull. "He's agin it" and that's all there is of it. This is an individual question. Do I object to a thing because it is my disposition to object? And do I shut out the affirmative by hiding it behind a great big "no?"

A generous mind is the best product of an education; not a mind that agrees to everything; that is as bad as a mind that agrees to nothing, but a broad mind that takes in the truth from every quarter and bases conclusions upon that. A whim, a conceit, a predilection are poor tests of judgment. A lofty aspiration, a sincere purpose is better—it is an antidote for pure contrariness.

There was a man in our town,
And he was wonderous wise;
He swore (it was his policy)
He would not advertise.
But one sad day he advertised,
And thereby hangs a tale,
The ad. was set in quite small type
And headed "Sheriff's Sale"!

Miss Mary Curry returned Mondey morning from a pleasant visit to friends in Montgomery.

DAIRY INDUSTRY IN ALABAMA..

Census Bulletin Shows That in 1909 the Value of Milk and Cream Sold was $6,396,000.

Montgomery.—According to the bulletin from the census department on Alabama farm products, a partial total shows the value of milk and cream sold as such was in 1909 $6,396,000. The butter made on Alabama farms in the same year amounted to $5,658,000.

In 1909, the value of the cattle, including the calves sold, amounted to $5,544,000 and that of the animals slaughtered on the farm, $7,606,000, making an aggregate of $13,150,000. In 1889 the value of all cattle sold or slaughtered was approximately $7,000,000. This shows the doubling of the agricultural product of cattle in Alabama in 10 years.

The value of the crops raised in 1909 was 97.1 per cent greater than value of the crops in 1899. The increase in farm acreage was 7.3 per cent, although there was decrease in the farm acreage in some of the states east of the Mississippi. There was a decrease in Alabama of the acreage devoted to cereals, but an increase in the acreage devoted to cotton, hay and forage. Cotton holds the leading place among agricultural products of the state. The value of the coton crop constitutes 60.3 per cent of the total value of all crops raised in the state.

Inspector Oates Writes the County Officials of the Validity of the Law.

Montgomery.—Letters setting forth the constitutionality of that section of the state prison law relative to janitor service for the jails of the state, are being sent out by Dr. W. H. Oates, state prison inspector to the boards of revenue and other officers of the various counties of the state.

The purpose of the circular letter is to correct an impression which obtains in some of the counties to the effect that the prison inspection law is unconstitutional in so far as it pertains to the payment by the county for janitor service for the jail.

To Dr. Oates' letter is attached a copy of the atorney general's opinion, bearing on the constitutionality of the act. Dr. Oates urges a strict compliance with the law, and requests that in payment for janitor service all warrants be drawn payable to the janitor and not to the sheriff.

"The law requiring panitors is explicit, and imperative that the court of the county commissioners, or board of revenue, shall provide adequate janitor service for the jails," says Dr. Oates' letter.

Section 30, page 365, general acts of 1911, reads as follows: "That the expense incident to the construction, maintenance, sanitation, healthfulness and hygiene of each county jail, prison and almshouse in this state shall be paid out of the funds of the county in which such institution is located, if the institution be a county institution, and of the town or city if institution be a town or city institution."

"This letter is to urge a compliance with this law, and to notify you that, in paying for this service the warrant should be dawn payable to the janitor, and not to the sheriff. If this service is paid for to any person other thar the janitor, it will not be allowed by the examiners of public accounts."

FISH FOR STOCKING.

Game and Fish Commissioner J. H. Wallace, Jr., Will Supply Demands.

Montgomery.—Commissioner John H. Wallace, Jr., of the department of game and fish, has made arrangements with the bureau of fisheries at Washington, D. C., to place in Alabama waters a large number of young fish. Mr. Wallace is desirous of supplying every citizen of Alabama with fish, without cost, that will agree to place them in suitable waters and see that the waters in which said fish are planted not vandalized. Persons desiring fish for stocking purposes will receive application blanks for same by writing to the state game and fish commissioner, Montgomery, Ala.

TO DISCUSS TICK ERADICATION

Kolb Will Appear Before House Committee on Agriculture in Interest of Bill.

Montgomery.—Capt. Reuben F. Kolb, commissioner of agriculture and industries, left Montgomery on January 1 for Washington, D. C., where he appeared before the huose committee on agriculture in the interest of tick eradication bill, which was approved by the commissioners of agriculture in annual session in Raleigh last month. Captain Kolb was accompanied by Dr. C. A. Cary, of Auburn, who is the chairman of the committee on tick eradication in the south, appointed at the Raleigh convention.

In addition to Captain Kolb and Dr. Cary, representatives from all the southern states went to Washington for the conference with the congressional committee,

The bill for the eradication of ticks carries with it an appropriation of $400,000, and it is understood that the strong sentiment favoring its passage will probably result in securing favorable action by the House and Senate committees.

CORONER RESIGNS.

Montgomery.—Governor O'Neal received the resignation of Henry Hammons of Escambia county, who was recently elected coroner for that county. In his letter of resignation Mr. Hammons declared that his business would engage too much of his time to attend to the duties of a public office. His successor will be named by Governor O'Neal.

TO FORCE ISSUE OF LICENSE.

Russell Mandamus Proceedings Hearing on January 6.

Montgomery.—Dr. W. H. Sanders, state health officer, has been notified that the hearing on mandumus proceedings to require the medical board of examiners to issue a license to practice medicine to T. P. Russell of Gainstown, Clark county, will come up in the circuit court at Mobile on January 6.

Russell took the examination some months ago, but for various reasons the board of examiners refused to issue him a license, assigning no definite reason for their action. Russell then filed mandamus proceedings to require the board to issue him a license.

ALLEGED VIOLATORS FINED.

Anniston.—Two alleged violators of the prohibition law were heavily fined in police court. Frank Walls was fined $300 and given three months and Lawrence Hopkins was fined $100. Walls appealed.

WILL BE SHORT LIVED

SENATOR CULBERSON'S OPINION OF THE NEW PARTY.

Texas Statesman Tells Why He Sees In It No Menace to Either the Democrats or the Republicans.

Senator Charles A. Culberson of Texas, one of the Democratic leaders in the senate, sees no menace to either the Democratic or the Republican party in the new third party movement launched by Colonel Roosevelt. The senator from Texas, who is a careful observer of political sentiment, was discussing with some colleagues the probable effect on future politics of the recent conference of Colonel Roosevelt and his friends in Chicago. Senator Culberson did not share the anxiety of some of his political associates that Colonel Roosevelt would make trouble for the Democracy in 1916.

"There are some fundamental considerations which convince me that the new party will be comparatively short lived," said Senator Culberson. "This party rests in the first place on the personal and political fortunes of one man. This is manifest, and no amount of loud contrary assertion can change this patent fact. He fought for the nomination of the Republican party, would have accepted it if he could have obtained it, and only organized the new party in sheer desperation to reach the presidency again.

"The party was proposed and established to gratify his dangerous and vaulting ambition and necessarily will perish with it. Its dissolution will be hastened by the fact that it is founded on false principles and revolutionary doctrines which are destructive of sound and stable government. Thousands of people voted for Roosevelt at the last election who as an independent proposition object to the character of government he would erect. The man was stronger than the form of government he would establish.

"Such basic and enduring party principles as a centralized general government and a protective tariff, which are hinted at but not stressed in its platform, will naturally be monopolized by the Republican party. This will be so because, among other reasons, the Republican party has pre-empted the ground and really believes in these principles more strongly than the Roosevelt party, especially as to a protective tariff.

"In addition to this there will always be something to thousands and their descendants in the name Republican party, just as there will be to thousands in the name Democratic party, which they will not throw off. Effective appeals will still be made to the memory of Lncoln, to the abolition of slavery and to the overthrow of secession. The Republican party, therefore, as I view the situation, has about it and in its origin and history far more of an enduring and appealing character, and in the end will reassert itself as the natural and logical foe of its old antagonist, the Democratic party.

"The only thing which could prolong the life and make the Roosevelt party dangerous in 1916, and that is not to be thought of, is the failure of the incoming Democratic national administration to meet public expectation and to redeem its obligation to restore their government to the people."

THIS ARGUMENT IS ABSURD

Champions of Privilege Say Wilson, Being "Minority President," Must Not Disturb Tariff.

Newspaper champions of privilege are still repeating the absurd argument that Woodrow Wilson will be a "minority president," and therefore has no right to disturb the sacred tariff swindle which has fattened bloated fortunes and built up trusts.

Tariff gluttons forget that there have been other "minority presidents." Abraham Lincoln was one. Lincoln got only 39.9 per cent. of the total popular vote in 1860. Wilson got 43.5 per cent. of the total vote of 1912.

The argument which denies Wilson's right to recommend and sign bills revising the tariff would condemn Lincoln for saving the Union and abolishing slavery. Comment is needless.

Must Swallow All Radicals.

There is permanently room in this or any other democratic country for only two great parties. The Progressives desire to be one. They can be by linking to themselves the rest of the radical and revolutionary factions.

Only to Retain Offices.

The Democrats at Washington are justified in condemning the partisanship which leads the president to extend the civil service when that extension had no higher purpose than the retention of Republican appointees. —Mr. Bryan. in the Commoner.

A Master Stroke.

"I would to have you know, sir, we came over with William the Conqueror."

"It must have been some kind of a conqueror who could make you come over with anything."

Easily Flattered.

"I don't understand why Mrs. Pilkins looked pleased when you said her husband was a modern Munchausen."

"All she knows about Munchausen is that he had the title of baron."

WOODROW WILSON WELCOMED HOME

STAUNTON, VA., EXTENDS GREAT WELCOME TO HER NATIVE SON UPON HIS RETURN

PEOPLE GLAD TO SEE HIM

President-Elect Reaches Little Parsonage Where He Was Born 56 Years Ago.

Staunton, Va.—Virginia welcomed home Gov. Woodrow Wilson, the eighth of her native sons to be chosen president of the United States.

From the moment the president-elect crossed the state line at Alexandria, after he had a ten minutes' glimpse of the national capital until he reached the little parsonage here, where he was born fifty-six years ago, the reception given him was one of great enthusiasm, noisy demonstration and spectacular display. Escorted by troops of cavalry, militia companies and a torchlight procession, in which practically the whole town participated, the governor and Mrs. Wilson motored through the streets of Staunton to the home of the Rev. Dr. A. N. Fraser, pastor of the Presbyterian church, where Rev. Joseph R. Wilson, father of the president-elect, lived in 1856.

With Mrs. Wilson, the president-elect paused for a minute on the illuminated portico of the house and greeted Doctor Fraser. The band struck up "Dixie," the governor turned and waved his hat to the crowd and a spontaneous shout of welcome echoed in the winter air.

"It's fine to be back again,' exclaimed the president-elect as he stepped indoors.

Outside the crowds surged the streets, which were alive with color and flags and electrical displays. From far and wide, native children of Staunton had come to greet their fellow-townsman. Except for an informal visit a year ago, Mr. Wilson had not been here since he was three years old.

Staunton was not alone in celebrating the arrival in Virginia of the distinguished visitor. Bonfires blazed the way, fireworks shot across the skies and red lights threw a festive glare at all stations along the route, though the train glided by most of them without stopping.

WOMAN CONFESSES MURDER

First Attempt to Get Rid of Husband by Poisoning Whiskey Failure.

Macon, Ga.—A complete confession of how she had forced Nick Wilburn to murder her husband, Jim King, in cold blood in order that she might collect $2,000 insurance on his life was told to Detectives C. P. Moore and J. W. Kea by Mrs. King, following her arrest at the home of her sister at Round Oak, and confinement in the Jones county jail at Gray.

The story of the deliberate plot to remove the husband is one of the most graphic that has ever been revealed. The woman leaves nothing untold.

The confession of Mrs. King coincides exactly with that made by Wilburn himself, though it is much fuller and goes into detail.

The woman tells of the first attempt on the life of her husband, when he was given strychnine in a drink of whiskey by Wilburn, and when he came home complaining of being sick that her love for him returned for the moment, and she at once gave him something to make him vomit and saved his life. The very next day, however, she and Wilburn had begun their plotting again, and the murder was finally committed by Wilburn, while King was hunting in the woods near his home.

$71,719.58 For Convict Cotton.

Jackson, Miss.—A cheque for $71,719.58, proceeds of the sale of cotton and cotton seed from the big convict farm in Sunflower county, was received by the state treasurer. The sum of $69,865.73 represented the sale of 956 bales of cotton by a Memphis firm at 14.37 and 14.25 cents per pound.

Wants U. S. to Raise Own Sugar.

Washington.—With the declaration that the United States should raise all of its own sugar, the department of agriculture issued an appeal to the American farmer to go in for the cultivation of the sugar beet. There are 2,000,000 short tons of beets now imported annually, says the department, which should be raised at home. "The average American consumes 12 pounds of sugar each year," says the report, "and only ten pounds of that is produced in this country. The farmer should keep that money."

12-Year-Old Boy Kills Brother.

New Orleans.—"You're not dead. After saying this Joseph Howell, aged 12, who had been playing "Indian and Cowboy," with a harmless air rifle, picked up a shotgun and shot and killed his brother, Henry, aged 5, in the front yard of their residence, 2911 Annunciation street. Neighbors hurrying up found Joseph sobbing. "I killed my brother and I want to be punished for it. Call a policeman." An officer took temporary charge of him, but no arrest was made.

COL. GEORGE W. GOETHALS

As reward for his services as chief of the Isthmian canal, Colonel Goethals will be made a major general, if the bill introduced by Senator Sanders, creating an additional major generalship, becomes a law. President Taft probably will offer the post of governor of the canal zone to Colonel Goethals.

CASUALTIES OF CHRISTMAS

GRIM TRAGEDY STALKS IN WAKE OF CHRISTMAS

Two Killings Usher in Day in South Carolina—Other Fatalities Reported.

Columbia, S. C.—Two Christmas eve killings have been reported in South Carolina. Both were tradgedies involving white men of some prominence in their respective communities.

In Dillion, Lawrence Wiggins, a young man was shot and killed by Walter Turner, also a mere youth. Wiggins and Turner had words in a store on the main street of the town and Turner followed Wiggins out on the street, the shooting following Turner was locked up.

In McBee, a Roman candle battle, began in a spirit of fun, resulting fatally for J. P. Wallace, who was shot and killed by Dr. Clyde McManus, after a struggle for the posession of a pistol which Wallace drew on McManus Savannah, Ga.—R. B. Gaskins of Nashville, Ga., a member of one of south Georgia's wealthiest families, committed suicide today by shooting himself twice through the head. Gaskins' death is the climax of a series of sensations in which he has figured recently.

The state court of appeals confirmed a sentence of six years imposed by Judge W. E. Thomas upon Gaskins for firing several shots from his automobile at Judge Buie, of the city court of Nashville. When Gaskins was told of the decision he declared he would never serve the sentence.

Died in Want With $5,604.

St. Louis.—Examination of the body of Mrs. Sarah Johnson, who died with her sister, Miss Mary Scott, died of pneumonia, apparently in direst want, revealed that a bag around her waist contained $5,604 in cash and three gold watches. In Miss Scott's effects were found deeds and papers showing bank deposits. Little is known of the sisters. They arrived at the address where death occurred, both suffering colds which developed into pneumonia.

65 Persons Are Rescued.

New York.—The 57 passengers and 18 of the crew of the United Fruit company steamship, Turrialba, ashore at Brigantine shoals, nine miles north of Atlantic City, N. J., arrived here on board the United States revenue cutter Seneca.

Ex-Congressman Robertson Dead.

Baton Rouge, La.—Samuel Matthews Robertson, 60, for twenty years a member of congress from the Sixth Louisiana district, is dead at his home here. Mr. Robertson had been ill for a long time, never having recovered from an operation performed two years ago. For the last several months he had been confined to his bed. On his retirement from congress at the end of the Fifty-eight session he was the ranking member of the ways and means committee of the house.

Wilson Plays Santa Claus

East Orange, N. J.—When Charlie Conroy, eight years old got up Christmas morning he found that letter he sent to "Santa Claus, state house, Trenton," had been answered by Governor Wilson. Charlie asked for a sweater, a pair of gloves, a necktie, a cap, two books, a train of cars, a box of blocks and some candy and fruit. President-elect Wilson was so impressed that he had one of his stenographers send Charlie all the things he asked for.

Happy New Year to all our readers, and many of them.

Wonder if our councilmen are going to wait till next Christmas to pass an anti-fireworks ordinance?

Some people are comparing the sanitary conditions out at the camps with those of Clanton; we just won't stand the comparison; we never did like to be on the losing side anyway.

The Press had hoped to have something interesting to say about the road proposition this week, but the discussion of the meningitis problem has crowded us out; perhaps next week we will be able to present something that will be of deep interest to all who travel the county roads.

Now. if you happen to sneeze a a time or two and then have a little pain in your neck or head, don't take it for granted that you are ready to cross over the great divide—it isn't necessarily meningitis, tho' it might be for those are the symptons—chilly sensations and pains in the neck and head.

Since there is so much division among the physicians of Clanton, why can not some outside expert be called in to settle the great question; if we have meningitis we want to know it as quickly as possible; if there is no such thing existing we ought to know it and the outside world ought to know it.

We know of a certain widower-editor—a popular scribe of the pen—who wrote his best girl nine letters during the seven days she was away from home attending Christmas festivities. Why the extra two letters? Come clean, brother, or we may tell your name.

We are printing this week quite a long article prepared after consultation with the outgoing health officer and the incoming health officer. The two seem to disagree as to the malady prevailing in the eastern part of the county. Some interesting developments are liable to take place within a short time. In the meantime hold your breath; don't go up into the air; don't become unnecessarily alarmed.

Senator Joseph F. Johnston has announced that he will be a candidate to succeed himself in the upper house of Congress.

Senator Johnston has made an ideal representative and deserves to succeed himself, having served but one term.

Our section once enjoyed the distinction of sending to both branches of Congress its brainest men; that was because we selected wisely and kept the same representatives in office. When the time arrived that we changed so frequently our reputation deserted us.

Senator Johnston is a brainy man, an able representative and should by all means be returned to the Senate.

SIGNED STATEMENT.

To quiet unnecessary rumors prevalient in the county, and in justuch to McArthur Bros. Co. and the Alabama Power Co., we wish to state that beyond one mild case of small pox, (now well) and this being in Brown's camps, there has not been, or is not now, any contageous or infectuous diseases in the above camps.

A PERSONAL INVESTIGATION

GIVES CLEAN BILL OF HEALTH. POWER PLANT'S CAMP MORE CLEANLY THAN CLANTON.

Believing it to be the duty of a newspaper man to get at the very bottom of rumors which effect the general public or which relate to the transaction of a great concern such as the Alabama Power Company now erecting a dam across the Coosa river, and with a view to being able to speak positively when he spoke at all, the Editor of the Press made a personal visit to the camps of the Power plant Wednesday afternoon after the article on the first page was put into type and printed.

Had we gone before, perhaps, the article would never have been printed, or if printed it would have been in a much different strain.

We admit that when we undertook the trip we felt that we were courting death and that we expected to return with a first-class case of cerebro-spinal meningitis, which would soon put us beyond this vale of tears—it may have been a fool hearty trip viewed in this light, but nevertheless we went because we felt that it was our duty to the reading public, as well as to the Power Company to go. The trip was made in company with Dr. V. J. Gragg, County Health Officer, and at his invitation. The trip was an exceedingly rough one, the roads in places were almost impassible; we stopped at several places along the route to visit sick folks who called for Dr. Gragg. The condition of the roads and the calls which Dr. Gragg had to make required us to take a road which led directly to the back of the camp, after crossing Yellow Leaf creek at its junction with Coosa river—this route was taken, not to "slip up on" the Power Company people and catch them unawares but because the exigences of the case demanded it. Crossing the creek we "footed" it three quarters of a mile to the "Dago" camp where we questioned several of the "Dagoes." The information elicited was meager indeed for the men seemed not inclined to talk. Those who volunteered information could scarcely make themselves intellgible. From there we went to the negro quarters and found things about as at the Dago camp, tho' the negroes volunteered the information that but one man was sick and he was suffering with grippe. We then went to the resident physician's office (Dr. Wilson) who seemed glad to receive us. He telephoned for Mr. A. C. Polk, the resident engineer, who in a few minutes, in company with Messrs. G. H. Penglase, General Superintendent, and E. A. Yates, Chief Engineer, soon came to the physician's headquarters; in a few moments the six of us were on an inspection tour of the camps.

We visited the negro quarters again and talked with many of the negroes. All seemed to be contented and happy; they were eating supper when we arrived and were enjoying themselves in boistrus hilarity; we entered their sleeping apartments and examined their bedding; it was scrupulously clean and the quarters better kept than nine tenths of the negro quarters in any city—better than any camp we have ever visited; we went into the kitchen and noticed the preparation of the food; sanitary methods are used here as elsewhere. Here we found one negro suffering with a slight attack of grip but he will be at work today, he said.

Next we returned to the Dago camp; they were enjoying themselves beyond measure, New Year's day, they said, was their "Big Sunday" and they were passing the hours playing cards and in other amusements; their beds were examined, their kitchen examined, the manner of preparation of their food examined and in fact a minute inspection of these quarters made. The Press unhesitatingly states that these quarters are more cleanly than simular quarters in any other camp ever visited by the editor; they were exceedingly cleanly, considering the people who were quartered there; it was a mystery to the editor how they could be kept so cleanly.

From the Dago quarters a visit was made to the "Hobo" quarters; this, as the others' was minutely and carefully examined; as with the others it was found in perfect condition. Those quartered there were in good health and seemed to be happy. The beds and bedding were clean, the floors in a cleanly condition and the men disclaimed any knowledge of sickness among them; here too, the kitchen and dining room was examined and found to be in excellent order. From the hobo quarters we went to the white quarters, where everything was in perfect shape; the men were eating supper here, and an abundant quantity of good variety seemed to have been supplied them; they were happy and merry. As elsewhere the kitchen, dining room, beds, bedding and floors were examined and found to be in a most orderly and cleanly condition.

In the white quarters a number of familiar faces were seen; these men, together with all the others, seemed to be perfectly satisfied with conditions and spoke highly of the treatment accorded them.

From the white quarters a trip was made to the ice plant and refrigerating quarters where the meats, vegetables and other edibles are kept, A ton and a half of ice is made each day and is used not only for medical purposes but for preserving meats, milk and vegetables. The hospital was empty insofar as patients were concerned—there being no sick at the camp except the two mentioned heretofore.

The officers' quarters were not forgotten, but here it was not necessary to make much of an investigation for everything was as neat and clean as a new pin; as scrupulously clean as the drawing room of a newly made bride. The dining room was tastefully arranged and handsomely furnished; the Christmas and and New Years decorations had not been removed, for in three long lines hung beautiful Japanese lanterns giving their soft mellow light and adding to the brilliancy of the already well lit room; at the windows were large Christmas wreathes showing that those at the camp had not forgoton the signifigance of the day which we celebrate as the birth of him who said "Peace on earth and good will toward men". Of course the private homes of Messrs Penglase and Polk were not visited, though, we were kindly invited to go to these homes and meet the wives and children of these estimable gentlemen. From the windows we could see happy wives and children reading, enjoying music or games attesting in the most forcible way that no danger lurked within the camps.

The sanitary conditions of the camp are superb; fire plugs are placed at convenient distances to which are connected long lines of hose to be used in case of fire. Each camp house sleeping apartment, dining room, kitchen has water connection so that at a moment's notice fresh water can be obtained. The out houses are well kept; sanitary arrangements are perfect here. We were informed, and believe that every morning all refuse matter is incinerated so that no filth of any character remains more than twenty four hours and no stench can possibly exist. Watchmen are kept at every camp, or quarter, to keep order and to insist upon cleanliness; a police station is maintained and disorderly persons are immediately incarcerated and held for trial.

The guests quarters, to which the Heath Officer and the Editor were given free access and in which they were invited to spend the night, are handsomely and expensively fitted. Here there are excellent shower baths, with hot and cold water, convenient toilets, lounging rooms, bed rooms and library—a place fit for a king.

As stated before, we went out doubting Thomases, expecting to return with a well developed case of meningitis or some other dreadful disease; we expected the worst and prepared for it. We came back convinced that the Power plant camp is about the cleanest place in Chilton county and undoubtedly the most sanitary We were struck with the good cheer that obtained among the workmen of all classes.

Each camp house is placed upon the very top of a hill, so that the drainage is excellent; there is no accumulation of waste or filth to be seen anywhere.

The rumors which have been afloat all seem to be grouudless; no doubt they originate in the fertile brain of those who go out expecting to get easy work and big pay; they find the work commensurate with the pay and are not satisfied, hence they leave, and give as an excuse, in order to make it appear that they are not "quitters," the prevailing sickness or the unsanitary condition of the camps. Others are just mere rumors that magnify as they travel. Many of them are pure fiction, while others seem to be falsehoods, manufactured out of the whole cloth.

Had the writer the choice of health and sanitary conditions, as between the camp visited and many of the best cities of the country, he would unhesitatingly make choice of the camps. He would not now hesitate one moment to take his best loved ones to the camp and permit them to partake of their hospitality, drink of their water or breathe the delightful fresh air which the workmen there enjoy.

Our readers can take it from the Editor of the Press that in so far as the camps are concerned they need have no fear of infectious or contagious disease at this time—if there was sickness further than mentioned above it was most successfully concealed—and this we do not believe, for the gentlemen who escorted us seemed to be more than anxious to have us pry into every nook and cranny and to investigate fully every condition; they afforded us every opportunity and facility for doing so.

This, however, must not be construed that there is not some contagious disease in the county—it is not at the camp. Reputable physicians have stated emphatically that there are, or has been, cases of meningitis in the eastern part of the county; this we believe, but it is not connected with the camp and should not be charged to them.

There is but one thing for which the Editor censures the camp people—and this, perhaps, is not chargable to those in immediate control of the camp. We wrote to other state papers that the Mims home in which young Geo. Mims died was in close proximity to the camps; Mr. Freeman Vice President of the Company, residing now in Birmingham, seems to have made a change in this report and stated that it was about three miles from the camp; yesterday we "stepped" it off and found it just 150 yards from the front gate of the Mims home to the Dago quarters.

But this has nothing to do with the cleanliness of the camp. We gladly, unhesitatingly give them a clean bill of health.

The Mr. Hinton, reported to have been stricken with meningitis, we found walking about his place and holding conversation with his friends as usual, having had a slight chilly sensation he became alarmed and sent for a physician, but when he arrived Mr. Hinton was joking with his friends over his scare.

The trip was altogethor a pleasant one; the roads should prove an object lesson to anyone and make thousands of converts to a bond issue proposition.

But, we have said enough. The rumors afloat are false alarms and are doing the Power people incalculable injury—no credence should be placed in them.

Outside the camps meningitis doubtless exists—inside it does not.

IT DIDN'T GO OFF!

PIPES AND STANFIELD GREATLY DISAPPOINTED; PRESS MAN ELATED.

Although December 25th is a sacred season, commemorating the birth of the Saviour of man, it is nevertheless looked upon as so joyous an occasion that all classes, saint and sinner, feel constrained to make merry on that particular day.

Anything and everything that offers amusement or furnishes diversion is brought into requisition for the pastime, hilarity and delectation of the maid and matron, the boy and old man, the abstimeous and convivial; all classes in fact partake of the joys of the day and find pleasure not only in dispensing good cheer among their fellows, but sometimes playing pranks upon close friends.

Christmas 1912 was not an exception to the rule. There was a Christmas tree at the Methodist church and big-hearted John Stanfield, fearing that the Press man would be forgotten in the shuffle, provided him with a gift which was to be placed upon the tree. Stanfield, generous as he is, reckoned without his host, however, for the Press man was generously, even bounteously, remembered by good friends. This does not mean that the Christmas tree present was received with ungrateful heart. Ah, no indeed; just the reverse. It was thoughtful, generous and kind in Stanfield; an unique little ornament, which we highly prize, and for which he has received our profuse thanks. But to the story. It all leaked out and came to the Press man by grape vine wire; or perhaps, 'twas a little bird that twitted it in his ear. Anyway, when Stanfield was "doing up" his present for the editor another free-hearted, magnanimous friend of the newspaper man, in the person of that prince of good fellows, Henry T. Pipes, stepped forth and said: "Here, Wood loves a cigar—good ones—put this in for him too; but, as I'm rather shrinking in my nature and never care to advertise my Christmas generosity, just leave my name off!" The cigar and ornament were neatly wrapped, securely tied to the tree with the editor's name written in bold chirography upon the precious bundle, It happened that the news scribe did not attend "the tree" so the package was not delivered that night. Although his name was called repeatedly and lustily, the package remained hanging high upon a branch of that tree.

Not to be cheated of the carnival, both of these kind spirits looked the editor up on Christmas day, the one telling him that a present had been "hung up" for him and the other incessantly saying, 'yer gotta quit kickin my dorg aroun." so intense was their desire to have the presents delivered that one of them volunteered to send immediately for them, which kindly offer was accepted. However, suspicion is an apt scholar, and those who know John Stanfield and Henry Pipes needs must keep their wits about them, their suspicions aroused or else fall a victim.

Their furtive looks, one at the other, aroused suspicion and when the pretty little ornament had been safely tucked away, the "Superba" was the next to receive consideration. Magnanimous Henry Pipes drew forth a number of "Lucifers" which he offered to the editor; Stanfield chuckling in anticipation, turned his smiling countenance away each time the editor glanced his way. Good luck helped the editor out, for the "smoke end" of the cigar was broken, hence he reversed it and lighted the smaller end. "You are lighting the wrong end" exclaimed both in chorus! But the editor, being a sly old fox, kept puffing away. The cigar didn't explode; the fuse was never reached for it was near the end which the editor had in his mouth. He enjoyed a good smoke; Pipes and Stanfield followed him about to see the "fire works" go up but they never "went." We enjoyed the smoke and appreciate the "Hound Dog." Come again friends and don't wait till Christmas!

REPORT OF DR. GRAGG

HEALTH OFFICER'S REPORT AGREES WITH PRESS.

January 2nd, 1913

To Whom it May Concern:

In pursuance of the instructions from the State Health Officer, I visited the Camps at Lock 12 yesterday afternoon and spent more than an hour in going through the various parts of the camp.

I wish to state that I found sanitary conditions there to be excellent. I found everything to be scrupulously clean, and must say that I never saw a more healthy and contented lot of workmen anywhere.

Dr. Wilson, the camp physician, showed me two whom he assured me were the only two sick men in camp; these were suffering from lagrippe.

However, I do not wish this statement to apply to conditions in the entire county, since we have had two deaths of natives from cerebro-spinal meningitis, or "Spotted fever"; one of these was in less than a couple of hundred yards of the camps, the other two miles away, and I am, at this writing called by physician to another part of the county, to see three cases which he says are extremely suspicious.

V. J. Gragg, County Health Officer.

MILL ON OLD BATTLEFIELD

Still Standing at Bladenburg, a Hamlet in the District of Columbia —To Be Razed Soon.

Washington.—Landmarks have a hard time at the national capital, as in all other American cities. They become identified with the landscape and then progress comes along in the guise of the steam shovel or other device for making things over, and the landscape changes. The latest landmark doomed in the District of Columbia is the ancient mill on the willow and alder lined margin of the eastern branch close by the hamlet of Bladensburg, a place which a century and a half ago was accounted in the chronicles of the time a bustling city. This old mill was turning out grist before the steam engine began to hum and its product became part of the blood and bone of early Americans. It gave stamina to many of the men who carried flintlocks for the young republic.

The mill stands on the battlefield of Bladensburg where the Americans gave up the fight and the capital of the nation fell into the hands of the British invaders. American sharpshooters used this mill as cover and some of the British received their death wounds there.

OFFICER SAVED FROM DEATH

Driftwood Gatherer Rescues the Only Survivor of Small Boat Run Down by Barge.

New York.—For two hours before dawn recently Policeman Otto Schmuck, attached to the East One Hundred and Twenty-Sixth Street station, fought for life in the twisting tides of Hell Gate, and finally won, while three companions who were with him in a powerboat, run down in Hell Gate by a railroad barge, were drowned.

Mrs. Caroline Phillips, who lives at 58 Hoyt avenue, Astoria, makes a practice each morning to search the shore of the river only a few hundred feet away from her house for driftwood, and Schmuck owes his life to her.

She saw what she at first thought to be a log—"a nice, big log," as the gleaner of driftwood put it—lodged among the rocks some 25 feet out from the river bank.

As she was trying to devise some plan for the log's recovery she heard a shivering moan and she saw a movement of the black streak in the water.

Without a moment's hesitation the woman waded out into the icy water to her waist and came to a man who was floating, anchored to the tip of a rock by the grip of his two blue hands.

Though the current was swift, and the weight of the half-drowned man was dragging, the gatherer of driftwood towed the limp body ashore. The semi-conscious man was removed to the Astoria police station and thence to St. John's hospital.

INDIAN ASKS FOR DIVORCE

Ute Woman First of Original Americans to Resort to the White Man's Method.

Vernal, Utah.—County court officers were surprised some time ago when the Ute Indians from the Uintah reservation took up the civilized man's method of getting married by first applying for a license to wed, but they were more surprised when Kaibab Vasquaw filed a petition for divorce. Kaibab, in her petition for divorce, says she can no longer stand the abuse heaped upon her by her husband, Conconino. She asked for the custody of their two children. The Indians have been married for twenty years.

MY LADY OF DOUBT

BY RANDALL PARRISH

Author of "Love Under Fire," "My Lady of the North," etc.

Illustrations by HENRY THIEDE

COPYRIGHT, A. C. McCLURG & CO., 1911

SYNOPSIS.

Major Lawrence, son of Judge Lawrence of Virginia, whose wife was a Lee, is sent on a perilous mission by Gen. Washington, just after the winter at Valley Forge. Disguised in a British uniform Lawrence arrives within the enemy's lines. The Major attends a great fete and saves the "Lady of the Blended Rose" from mob. He later meets the girl at a brilliant ball. Trouble is started over a waltz, and Lawrence is urged by his partner, Mistress Mortimer (The Lady of the Blended Rose), to make his escape. Lawrence is detected as a spy by Captain Grant of the British Army who agrees to a duel. The duel is stopped by Grant's friends and the spy makes a dash for liberty, swimming a river following a narrow escape. The Major arrives at the shop of a blacksmith, who is friendly, and knows the Lady of the Blended Rose. Captain Grant and rangers search blacksmith shop in vain for the spy. Lawrence joins the minute men. Grant and his train are captured by the minute men. Lawrence is made prisoner by an Indian and two white men, who lock him in a strong cell. Peter advises Lawrence not to attempt to escape as "some one" would send for him. Grant's appearance adds mystery to the combination of circumstances. Lawrence again meets the Lady of the Blended Rose, who informs him that he is in her house; and that she was in command of the party that captured him. The captive is thrust into a dark underground chamber when Captain Grant begins a search of the premises. After digging his way out, Lawrence finds the place deserted. Evidence of a battle and a dead man across the threshold. Col. Mortimer, father of the Lady of the Blended Rose, finds his home in ruins. Capt. Grant insists that Lawrence be strung up at once. Miss Mortimer appears, explains the mystery and Lawrence is held a prisoner of war. Lawrence escapes through plans arranged by the Lady and sees Grant attack Miss Mortimer. Grant is knocked out by Lawrence, who comes to Miss Mortimer's relief and then makes his escape. Captain Grant's base villany revealed. Lawrence returns to Valley Forge, where learns more of Grant's perfidy. Washington forces Clinton at battle and Lawrence gets trace of Eric Mortimer. The battle of Monmouth. Gen. Washington again starts Lawrence on an important mission.

CHAPTER XXVII.—(Continued.)

"Major Lawrence," he began, and I noticed the face was not turned toward me. "I am sure you are not deceived, although you act the part well."

"I hardly understand."

"Oh, but I am sure you do. I—I could not permit you to go away despising me."

"But, my boy, this is a mystery—"

"Do you mean to insist you do not know—have not recognized me?"

"I—what can you mean?"

"Merely that I am Claire Mortimer," and lifting the hat, the young officer was revealed in the dim light as my lady. "Surely you knew?"

"But I did not," I insisted, earnestly, recovering from my surprise, and leaning forward to look into her face. "Why should I? General Washington told me it was Eric who came for his father. Why should I suspect in this darkness?"

"I—I represented myself as Eric," she stammered.

"And was it you also who rode into our lines yesterday, telling of Clinton's whereabouts?"

"Yes," hesitatingly, her eyes lifting to my face.

"But you must listen to me, Major Lawrence; you must learn why I did so unwomanly an act."

"First answer one question."

"Gladly."

"Is there an Eric Mortimer?"

"There is," she answered frankly; "my brother. It was for his sake I did all this."

A moment I sat in my saddle silently, our horses walking side by side through the night, while I endeavored to grasp the meaning of her confession. I knew that she was riding bareheaded, her face turned away.

"Go on," I said at last, "tell me the whole story."

"I will," firmly, her head uplifted. "I was tempted to do so at Elmhurst, but something seemed to seal my lips. There is now no longer any excuse for silence. I—I wish you to know, and, then, perhaps, you may feel more kindly disposed toward me."

"Your father is aware—"

"No, not even father. He is scarcely conscious of what is going on about him. Peter knows, and Tonepah," with a wave of her hand into the dark shadows.

"They are with you, then—keeping guard over him?"

"Yes; they have known from the beginning; not everything, of course, for that was not necessary. Peter is an old servant, silent and trustworthy. He would never question an act of mine, while the Indian has reason to be grateful and loyal to me. Whatever indiscretion, Major Lawrence, I may have been guilty of, I have gone nowhere unaccompanied by these two. You will believe that?"

"Yes, and whatever else you tell me."

"That, now, must necessarily be the entire story. As I proceed you will be convinced, I think, that only a true confidence in you would enable me to speak with such frankness. I—I know of no one else in whom I could confide, and—and the time has come when I must have help—the help of a friend. I should have explained to my father—indeed intended to do so—but now he is helpless to aid me. There is no one else I feel able to trust. I—I—you were in my thought to-night; I—I am not sure I did not even pray for your coming, and—and then God sent you."

My hand sought hers, and held it against my horse's mane.

"Tell it in your own way, dear," I whispered.

She flashed one glance into my face, leaving her hand in mine, while our horses took a dozen strides.

"It will not take long," she began, in so low a voice, that I leaned forward to listen, "and you already know many of the characters and can judge their motives. I have been strangely situated since the commencement of this war, only, surely ours is not the only family divided in its loyalty. My father was a King's officer, and felt it his duty to serve the crown. While he has said little, yet I know that down in his heart his sympathies have been with the Colonies. Those of my brother were openly from the start, and my father has never attempted to interfere with his actions. They talked it all over together, and Eric chose his own course. Only Alfred Grant made trouble, presuming on what he termed our engagement, and endeavored to force my brother to join the King's troops. The two quarreled bitterly, and Eric, a hot-headed boy, struck him. Grant has never forgiven that blow, nor Eric's influence over me. To the latter he attributes my dislike—yet this was not true; it was because as I grew older I realized the ill character of the man."

She paused a moment, gathering the threads of thought more closely. I did not speak, preferring she should tell the story in her own way.

"The two did not meet after that for many months. The Queen's Rangers, in which regiment my father secured Grant a commission, were in New York, while Eric was stationed up the river with Morgan's riflemen. When New Jersey was invaded, both commands came south, and, because of Eric's knowledge of this country, he was detailed as scout. This reckless life was greatly to his liking; I saw him occasionally by appointment, usually at Elmhurst, and became aware that his old quarrel with Captain Grant was seemingly forgotten. There appeared to be more understanding, some special commission between them. They met once, at least, and I delivered one note between them."

"Perhaps I can explain that later," I interrupted, "from something mentioned at Lee's headquarters."

"You! Oh, I wish you could, for their relationship has mystified me; has made me afraid something might be wrong with—with Eric."

"I think not, dear; say rather with Grant."

"If that be so, then it may prove the key to all the mystery. What made their intimacy so difficult to understand was that I knew the captain's dislike of Eric had in no way diminished. He spoke of him as savagely as ever."

"Perhaps he played a part—his ultimate purpose revenge."

"It might be that—yes, it might be that, and—and the consummation of that revenge may account for all which has occurred. But I must go on with what I had to tell."

I had forgotten the passage of time, the men riding steadily in advance, constantly increasing their distance, even the possible importance of the dispatch within my jacket pocket. The evident distress of the girl riding beside me, whose tale, I felt sure, would fully justify her strange masquerade in male garments, her risk of life and exposure to disgrace in midst of fighting armies, held me neglectful of all else. I realized that, whatever the cause, I had unconsciously become a part of its development, and that I was destined now to be even more deeply involved. Whatever the mystery, I must solve it for her sake. My hand again sought hers, holding it in firm clasp. There was a sound of hoofs on the dusty road behind us.

"It is Peter," she whispered. "What can have happened!"

The rider barely paused, turning his horse's head even as he spoke hastily.

"Captain Grant is with the ambulance, Mistress Claire," he reported. "He came up alone about five minutes ago."

CHAPTER XXVIII.

Before General Arnold.

I felt her hand withdrawn quickly, and the swift intake of her breath, yet there was no sharpness in the voice.

"Captain Grant, Peter? What can the man want here?"

"He claimed to be hunting deserters," returned Swanson, as calmly deliberate of speech as ever. "But that was false. He knew we were on the road, and asked for you."

"For me? And you told him—"

"Merely that you rode ahead to see that the road was clear. Then I left at once, fearing he might join you."

She sat a moment in silence, her head bowed, then looked across into my face.

"This arrival, under the circumstances, Major," she said soberly, "Captain Grant must not know that you are with me—that would mean fighting."

"Surely you do not wish me to run away?"

"Yes, this time, for my sake as well as your own. If I could have completed my confession you would realize the necessity. However, the fact that you are the bearer of dispatches should be sufficient; your duty to the Colonies is more important than any private quarrel. You will go?"

"Yes—but you? Are you safe with him?"

"Perfectly. I wish I might be clothed in my own proper dress, but with Peter and Tonepah on guard, Captain Grant alone is not dangerous. Besides, I wish to learn his purpose in seeking to join us." She hesitated. "You must not fear for me, but—but I wish to tell you all, and—and I am sure I shall need your help."

"You mean I am to join you again—at Elmhurst?"

"Is that asking too much?"

"Claire," I whispered, bending toward her, so Peter could not overhear, "nothing shall keep me from coming, dear. I will ride back the moment my dispatches are in Arnold's hands. But tell me, first, if you are not afraid of Grant himself, what is it you need me for?"

"Eric," she answered swiftly. "He has disappeared, dead or deserted. Oh, I cannot believe the last is true. It was to save his reputation that I dressed in this uniform, performed the work assigned him. I feel sure Grant knows where he is, what has become of him. I went to him in Philadelphia, but he only sneered, and said the boy had doubtless run away. I know better; that is not like a Mortimer. But I cannot search for him; I must stay with my father. But if I can only be assured you will come."

"You can be assured."

"Mistress Claire," broke in Peter, "some one is riding up the road."

"Yes, Peter, yes. Major, wait here! Don't move. We will go back and meet him."

I held my horse steady, although he made an effort to follow. Voices came back to me through the darkness—Grant's loud enough to be clearly heard.

"What, is this you, Claire?" he laughed gruffly. "By all the gods, I thought it must be Eric. I never expected to find you togged out in this style. By Jove, I wish it was daylight."

Whatever she replied must have sobered the fellow.

"Everything I say you take wrongly. Of course it's all right, for the country is full of stragglers out of both armies. Lord, I don't care what you wear, as long as it suits you. My business? Oh, I explained all that to your putty-faced servant—Saint Anne! that fellow! But I'll review the matter again. I'm drumming up Clinton's deserters, but now I've met you I'm tempted to go along with you as far as Elmhurst."

"Become a deserter yourself?"

"Oh, no, or at least only temporarily. There will be plenty of fighting yet in the Jerseys. Clinton's whipped all right, and is going to have a time getting away to the ships. In my judgment there will be richer picking for a Jerseyman right here at home, than with the army in New York."

There was a moment's silence; then the girl asked a shade of horror in her voice:

"Surely, you cannot mean to ally yourself with guerillas, Captain Grant? With—with Fagin?"

The man laughed, but mirthlessly.

"That would be horrible, wouldn't it? Well, personally I fail to see why Fagin is any more of a scoundrel than some of these other fellows in gilt epaulets. However, I've not come to that point yet. The fact is I have a private affair to attend to before I leave this neighborhood. Can you guess what it is?"

"I? Certainly not."

"Well, you will know shortly—the ambulance is coming."

I rode my horse slowly forward, keeping at the edge of the road, until assured a sufficient distance separated us. Then I gave the restive animal a sharp touch of the spur, sending him swiftly forward. My escort would have a mile or two the start, yet that was nothing. My thoughts were not with them, or with my military duty, but reverted to the little company around the wounded man. The bearing of the dispatch to Arnold was mere routine, involving only steady riding, but the relations existing between Claire, Grant, and Eric Mortimer were full of mystery. There were connecting links I could not understand; no doubt had the girl been permitted to conclude her story I might fit it together, but as it was I was left groping in the darkness. Yet my mind tenaciously held to its original theory as to Eric's strange disappearance—he had been betrayed by Grant, and was being held prisoner. But where? By whom? And for what purpose?

I pondered on this problem as my horse ploughed forward through the dust, my eyes unconsciously scanning the dark road. Grant could not have known that Colonel Mortimer was being taken home. His meeting with the ambulance party was altogether an accident. Yet I had no faith the man was out seeking British stragglers, for had he been dispatched on such a mission he would have had at least a squad of soldiers with him. Then what? The probability was that he was either riding to Elmhurst, or to some rendezvous with Fagin. Some plan had been interrupted by Clinton's sudden march, by the British defeat at Monmouth, and Grant was risking his commission, braving the charge of desertion, for some private purpose. This might be love of Claire, revenge upon Eric, or possibly both combined. The latter would seem most probable. He would use Eric in some way to threaten the sister, to compel her to sacrifice herself. She was of a nature to do this, as was already abundantly proved by her assumption of male attire to save Eric's reputation. My own responsibility loomed large as I reached this conclusion, and remembered her appeal for help. She, also, must suspect the truth, and had turned to me as the only one capable of unraveling the mystery. She trusted me, loved me, I now believed—and, under God, I would prove worthy of her faith.

Riding ahead, boot to boot with Conroy, I thought out a plan for action, and finally, in the gray of the morning, told him enough of the story to arouse his interest. Just before sunrise we passed Elmhurst, the great white mansion appearing silent and deserted. There was no halting, although we turned in the saddle to look, and my eyes swept over the troopers trotting behind us.

"Regulars?" I asked, nodding back across my shoulder.

"Not a man but has seen two years' service," he replied proudly. "Hamilton knows the troop, and he picked us out."

"I may need them for a bit of desperate work."

"They'll do it, sir, never fear."

"Good, sergeant; we'll ride hard, and trust to getting fresh horses in Philadelphia. I'll tell Arnold the story.

"Special Service, Sir! But You Are Not Assigned to My Command!"

When we arrive there have your men get all the sleep they can. I'll attend to rations and ammunition. You are simply to have the men rested and ready. Cannot we make better time? The horses seem in good condition."

We passed swiftly over the level country, meeting a few stragglers, but paying them small attention. By two o'clock we were on the banks of the Delaware, and a half-hour later, I swung down stiffly from the saddle in front of Arnold's headquarters on High street.

He was an officer I never greatly liked, with his snapping eyes and arrogant manner, but he was courteous enough on this occasion, questioning me after reading the dispatch, and offering me a glass of wine.

"You look tired, major, and must rest before you start back. I shall have my report ready by sundown."

"General Arnold," I said, standing respectfully hat in hand, "I have a favor to ask—that you will send your report by some other messenger, and give me a detail for special service."

He looked up in surprise.

"Special service, sir! But you are not assigned to my command."

"That is true, general," I insisted, "but the conditions warrant the unusual application."

"What service is contemplated?"

"An attempt to kill or capture Red Fagin, and release a scout whom I believe he holds prisoner."

"You hope to accomplish all this alone?"

"With the assistance of the sergeant and ten dragoons who came here with me. They are in camp now on the Jersey shore."

He walked across the room, stared out of the window, and then again faced me.

"By Gad, sir, this is a most extraordinary request. Damme, I'd like to get hold of Fagin all right, but I need to know more of your plan, and the reason you have for asking such a detail. It looks foolhardy to my mind."

I went over the situation carefully, watching the effect of my words in the man's face. He sat at the table now, leaning forward eagerly. Arnold had the reputation of a gallant, and my first reference to a young lady aroused him.

"The name, please—you mentioned no name."

"Claire Mortimer, sir."

"Ah! Ah! I remember her well. Danced with her myself. Now go on, sir; I can appreciate the tale better for my recollection of the fair heroine."

I was not long at it, although he interrupted me occasionally by shrewd questioning. As I concluded he kept silent a moment, looking at me from under his heavy brows.

"It looks like rather a blind trail to me, major," he said kindly, "but I'm no spoil-sport in such an affair. You might have the luck to stumble onto your party, and I'd take the chance myself if I were in your shoes. You wish to start at sunset?"

"Yes, sir."

"You need horses, rations and pistol ammunition for twelve men?"

"Yes, sir."

"Very well, major, the quartermaster will attend these details. Go and lie down. Washington may not approve, but I'll take the responsibility."

He extended his hand across the table, and I felt the firm clasp of his hand.

Looking After His Bait.

Daniel and Harvey, two old, expert fishermen, were "still" fishing for trout in deep water, sitting with their backs together, when Daniel accidentally fell out of the boat and went down. Harvey looked back and missed his companion, who at that moment appeared on the surface, pipe still in his mouth, shaking his whiskers profusely.

Harvey—Gosh, Dan! I jest missed ye! Where ye been?

Dan—Oh, I jes' went down for ter see if me bait wus all right.—Judge.

Wanted Slaves for Missouri.

On January 27, 1778, Don Bernardo de Galvez, governor of the Spanish province of Louisiana, which included Missouri, petitioned the king of Spain for aid for the settlers along the Missouri river and Mississippi river in Missouri. "The said inhabitants," he wrote, "in order to promote the culture of these plants (flax and hemp), would desire that the compassion of the king should deign to provide them with negro slaves on credit, for whom they may pay with the crops aforesaid."

STEADY HAND.

A Surgeon's Hand Should Be the Firmest of All.

"For fifteen years I have suffered from insomnia, indigestion and nervousness as a result of coffee drinking," said a surgeon the other day. (Tea is equally injurious because it contains caffeine, the same drug found in coffee).

"The dyspepsia became so bad that I had to limit myself to one cup at breakfast. Even this caused me to lose my food soon after I ate it.

"All the attendant symptoms of indigestion, such as heart burn, palpitation, water brash, wakefulness or disturbed sleep, bad taste in the mouth, nervousness, etc., were present to such a degree as to incapacitate me for my practice as a surgeon.

"The result of leaving off coffee and drinking Postum was simply marvelous. The change was wrought forthwith, my hand steadied and my normal condition of health was restored." Name given upon request. Read the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a reason."

Postum now comes in concentrated, powder form, called Instant Postum. It is prepared by stirring a level teaspoonful in a cup of hot water, adding sugar to taste, and enough cream to bring the color to golden brown.

Instant Postum is convenient; there's no waste; and the flavor is always uniform. Sold by grocers—50-cup tin 30 cts., 100-cup tin 50 cts.

38 DYNAMITERS ARE CONVICTED

HERMAN G. SEIFFERT OF MILWAUKEE AND DANIEL BUCKLEY OF IOWA ACQUITTED.

PRISONERS MARCHED TO JAIL

Sobs of Wives of the Convicted Men Fill Court Room at Verdict. Appeal Will Be Taken.

Indianapolis, Ind.—Thirty-eight of the forty union labor official accused of conspiracy in the transportation of dynamite were found guilty by the verdict of the jury returned before Judge Anderson in the Federal court here. Two of the accused men were acquitted. They were Herman G. Seiffert of Milwaukee and Daniel Buckley of Davenport, Iowa.

The sound of a pin drop could have been heard when Judge Anderson asked the jury:

"Gentlemen, have you reached a verdict?"

The answer came:

"We have."

The report of the jury as read in the court room follows:

"We hereby find the defendants (then followed 38 names, Frank Ryan leading, Hockin and Chancy following) guilty as charged in the indictment.

"And the defendants, Buckley and Seiffert, not guilty."

Seiffert and Buckley were discharged at once, and the rest told to keep their seats, and were taken in charge by United States deputy marshals and plain clothes men.

The sobs of the wome nin the court room, in addition to the screaming of the child in the outer lobby, heightened the awfulness of the scene.

The defendants were singled out one by one, and they were put in charge of detectives.

Forming a procession one city block in length, headed by United States Marshal Schmidt and Superintendent of Police Hyland, the 38 prisoners were marched safely to the Marion county jail. There was no demonstration, despite the fact that the entire distance of five blocks was lined with crowds. Each defendant was handcuffed to the guard walking at his side. As the procession left the court building, the agony of the wives and children of the prisoners were heartrending. Tears came to the eyes of many women and men, out of sympathy for them.

No break was made, and the prisoners laughed and made remarks to their friends as they walked along to jail. Deputy United States marshals were scattered through the crowds that formed along the line of march

TAFT RETURNS FROM CANAL

Voyage From Colon to Key West Was Rough—Man Fell Overboard.

Key West, Fla.—President and Mrs Taft, Col. George W. Goethals and Mrs. Goethals and a number of their friends arrived off Key West on the United Stahtes battleships Arkansas and Delaware, after a quick trip from Colon and the Panama canal zone.

The presidential party was brought ashore by the government tug Peoria and started north by special train.

The voyage from Colon to Key West, more than 1,100 miles, was made in a little more than sixty hours, over waters troubled only by a heavy swell and roughened by brisk trade winds. A spectacular rescue of a coal-passer on the Delaware who fell overboard at 7 in the morning was missed by practically every member of the party.

When the man fell overboard the big battleship turned a complete circle, put off a boat, picked up the coal passer and resumed her course in less than fifteen minutes.

Great Spy Conspiracy Detected.

London.—A Berlindispatch to the Exchange Telegraph company reports the discovery of the greatest espionage conspiracy known for years. Thirty men and women, including Germans and Russians, have been arrested, charged with spying in behalf of Russia. The German authorities decline to give out any particulars.

$10,000 in Loot Taken.

New York.—An epidemic of bold robberies and safe crackings in the Bronx borough, apparently the work of an organized band of criminals who are estimated to have realized something like $100,000 in loot from their operations, has been ended, the police believe, by the arrest of five men and two women. A chance pickup by a policeman of a suspicious character who gave his name as Harry Gillar and upon whom were found skeleton keys, sage drills, led to a raid on an apartment and arrests.

Automobile Kills and Maims.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Hal Shain, a well known automobile racer, received injuried that caused death in half an hour, three others were seriously hurt and a number slightly cut and bruised, when Shain's machine shot out of the cup-shaped track on the concession pier at Venice and plunged into the crowd. Shain had been one of the chief attractions at Venice, because of the small size of the track, on which he rode, and the great speed at which he traveled.

THE TRIAL IN BRIEF.

October 1, 1911, government authorities; exactly one year after the Los Angeles Times explosion, for first time, consider possibility of federal prosecution for illegal transportation of explosives.

February 6, 1912, federal grand jury returns indictments against 54 labor union officials.

February 14, most of the defendants scattered over the country arrested within a few hours by a telegraphic signal.

October 1, trial begins exactly two years after Los Angeles explosion, fifty defendants present; there discharged by government; Ortie E. McManigal pleads guilty, leaving 46 for trial.

October 3, jury secured, composed mostly of farmers; government opens its case.

October 5, Herbert S. Hockin accused by district attorney with having been a spy within the ranks of the dynamiters and with having given information to the prosecution.

October 7, Edward Clark, Cincinnati, pleads guilty to having blown up a bridge at Dayton, O., and accuses Hockin of having furnished the dynamite; 45 defendants remain for trial.

November 9, McManigal begins relating his confession on the witness stand; implicates iron workers' union officials as having pointed out jobs for him to blow up; names Hockin as starting him in the business.

November 23, Hockin's bond increased in default of which he is committed to jail, after more testimony that he was employed by detectives while an official of the union; court denounces Hockin as "not to be trusted by any one, day or night;" Miss Mary Field, a writer, depounced by the district attorney as an "anarchist" for criticisms published in union magazine; Olaf A. Tveitmore, San Francisco, a defendant, also denounced by district attorney for publishing "anarchistic" criticisms of the trial.

SHORT ON BROTHERLY LOVE

Luckily William Had Grace Enough to Remember That Henry Was Sacred.

William was not kind to his small brother Henry; in fact, he looked upon him as a nuisance, a scourge sent from heaven to try his spirit and spoil his fun. Especially that day was Henry a thorn in the older boy's flesh. In his efforts to rid himself of his burden, William resorted to all the methods the mind of youth suggested, but in vain. Henry continued to stick as close, if not closer, than a brother.

"William, finally said the boy's father, who had witnessed, unheard, the final paroxysm of the unequal struggle, "you should be ashamed of yourself to treat your little brother in that way! He ought to be sacred to you."

William made no reply; but shortly afterward, believing himself to be free of surveillance, he was heard to address Henry thus: "Always taggin' after me! If you weren't sacred I'd break your blamed face for you!"—The Sunday Magazine.

FACE DISFIGURED WITH SKIN TROUBLE

3107 Foster Ave., Baltimore, Md.—"About five months ago little blisters appeared on my face. They looked like blisters from fire burns. They itched and burned something terrible, which caused me to rub them and they burst, then sores appeared which disfigured my face. My face was all full of sores. The disease spread from my face to my neck and back. When anything touched them they would burn and stick to my clothes, which kept me from sleeping and made me suffer terribly.

"I used home remedies and I used a salve but it did no good. I suffered about three months then I saw the Cuticura Soap and Ointment advertised and I thought I would send and get a sample and try them. I used the sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and they helped me a great deal, so I bought some and used them about two months and they completely cured me." (Signed) Edward V. Beans in His Head.

Two beans, one of which had sprouted into an embryo plant, were removed from the head of a Mexican laborer at San Bernardino, Cal., by a physician. For months the man had complained of severe pains. The beans had entered his head through his left ear. The growing plant was nearly an inch long and apparently had flourished in the ear tube.

Backache Makes Anyone Feel Old

Nothing ages anyone more quickly than weak kidneys.

It is not alone the aching back, the stiff, painful joints, but the evil effect of bad, poisoned blood on the nerves, the vital organs and the digestion.

The condition of the kidneys makes good health or ill-health.

The kidneys are the filters of the blood.

Active kidneys filter from the blood every day over one ounce of poisonous waste and pass it off dissolved in the urine.

If the kidneys are weak or diseased, only part of this filtering is done and the blood is heavy with uric acid and other poisonous or waste matter.

Instead of being nourished by the blood, the nerves and vital organs are irritated, and the circulation, digestion, etc., are disturbed.

If your back aches constantly, if your joints are stiff, lame and painful, suspect the kidneys.

Kidney sufferers are likely to feel dull, heavy, restless at night, rheumatic, dizzy at times, subject to headaches and annoyed with sharp, piercing pains that make work an agony and rest impossible.

Doan's Kidney Pills are the best-recommended and most widely used remedy for weak or diseased kidneys. They act quickly; contain no poisonous nor habit-forming drugs and leave no bad after-affects of any kind—just make you feel better all over.

"Every Picture Tells a Story"

The following case is typical of the cures effected by Doan's Kidney Pills. Grateful testimony is the best evidence.

WISHED FOR DEATH.

Cured After Doctors Gave Up Hope.

G. W. L. Nesbitt, Marion, Ky., says: "Kidney disease had made me a chronic invalid. I couldn't get out of bed for two weeks at a time and no tongue could describe my suffering. I often wished that death might come and end my agony. The kidney secretions were thick and heavy and the color of blood. My sight had almost failed. My limbs were badly swollen and the doctors said I had dropsy. They held out little hope for my recovery. I couldn't raise my arms above my head, in fact, my side was almost paralyzed. I had lost all hope, when a relative told me to try Doan's Kidney Pills. I began to improve from the very first dose. Before I had finished one box of Doan's Kidney Pills, I was greatly relieved of the pain and as I continued using them, I was overjoyed to see the dreadful symptoms from which I had suffered so many years, leave me, one by one. In three months I was a well man, attending to my work. I am firmly convinced that Doan's Kidney Pills are the greatest remedy in the world for diseased kidneys."

As little Freddie had reached the mature age of three, and was about to discard petticoats for manly raiment in the form of knickerbockers, his mother determined to make the occasion a memorable one. The Bristol Times tells what happened.

The breakfast table was laden with good fare as the newly-breeched infant was led into the room. "Ah!" cried the proud mother, "now you are a little man!"

It was found years ago that the composition of the crop is not a sure guide to the most profitable fertilizer, but it does not take a very smart man to figure out that a well-balanced fertilizer should contain at least as much Potash as Phosphoric Acid. Insist on having it so. If you do not find the brand you want, make one by adding enough Potash to make it right.

To increase the Potash 4½ per cent. (for cotton and grain), add one bag Muriate of Potash per ton of fertilizer; to increase it 9 per cent. (truck, potatoes, tobacco, corn, etc.), add two bags Sulphate or Muriate per ton.

Talk to your dealer and ask him to carry Potash in stock or order it for you. It will pay you both, for Potash Pays

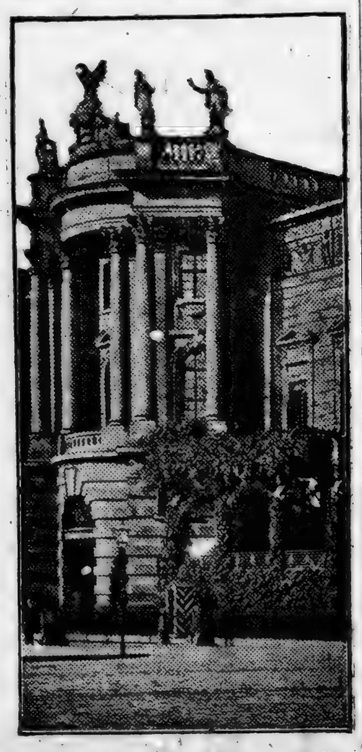
Death Lurks In A Weak Heart



BERLIN'S WEST END

Comforts That May Be Had in Kurfurstendamm.

Section of Germany's Capital as Seen in 1912—Hotels, Cafes and Business Buildings All Have Modern Equipment.

Berlin.—Our European guide books are of little help if we wish to study the pulsating life of a modern city. There is in this respect hardly any difference between the English Murray, the French Joanne or the Baedeker made in Germany. They wish to give us a full list of the old established, hallmarked sights to which frequent allusions may be found in classical literature or modern fiction, but omit to take notice of the latest actualities. We are still directed by them to the Friedrichstrasse as the center of Berlin life. Such it was more than twenty years ago. As late as ten years ago the whirlpool of modern life was to be found at the Potsdamer platz, comparable to Piccadilly Circus in London. Nowadays it has shifted farther west to the long and broad avenue called Kurfurstendamm, says a Berlin correspondent. There we are in the "new West," the up-to-date part of [illegible] modern of all European cities. Western is also the accommodation visitor may now find "Boarding Place" that [illegible] opened is neither a hotel customed style nor a boarding house, but something between the two. If you ask for a room, a plan is handed to you, from which you see what accommodation there is, with prices inserted. If you want lodging for a week, a fortnight, a month, a year, the scale goes considerably down in proportion to the length of your stay. But with your furnished room you get also the comfort of dining rooms, an elegant cafe, a first-class restaurant of the German beer garden style, and all those conveniences of an American hotel for reading, writing and passing the time. It is a big building, containing 500 bedrooms, besides the lavishly spacious suites for general use and the halls for festivities.

It is astonishing how quickly fashionable society has moved into these quarters. Already now these outskirts of the city have developed a life of their own. Kurfurstendamm is now for Berlin life what the Fosse is for Vienna or the "Stroeg" between Kongens to Nytory for Copenhagen, the promenade of the stylish part of the population. Here we find also that bohemian element and a great deal of that extravagance of high life for which Paris is famous. Of course the shops followed their best customers.

It is understood that the inclosure is in the nature of a prophecy, based on a study of present conditions.

Five forms of "permanent records" are being preserved by the association—terra cotta tablets, phonographic records made of indestructible clay, photographic positives on glass, parchments and portrait busts.

WASTED OPPORTUNITIES

It is an unfortunate but demonstrated fact that Alabama with 34 per cent. illiterates stands third in illiteracy among the states of the Union. Her total wealth per capita is only $573, there being only three other states in the Union with less per capita wealth.

And yet Alabama has 51,540 square miles of land area; she has approximately 250,000 fertile farms; the approximate value of her farm products is $137,500,000 per year; her mineral wealth makes her a leader in natural resources among the states of the Union.

Why this high percentage of illiterates and low percentage of per capita wealth?

There has for several years past been conducted in Alabama a campaign of political deception which has had as a substantial part of its strength the support of the illiterates of the state. Well-informed, intelligent citizens not actuated by selfish motives would not and could not subscribe to such political views.

This campaign of deception has been a constant drain on the financial resources of the state treasury, to the detriment of more public schools, more and better paid teachers. Also, it has diverted the thought and effort of the people from their own business so that the natural resources of the state have remained in large part undeveloped.

Public servants, such as the L. & N., have been handicapped in their effort to co-operate with the people for development. The substantial business men of the state have faith in the intentions of these public servants, but doubt of the probable action of the people.

The L. & N. is one with the progressive citizens of Alabama. It realizes the opportunities and seeks to co-operate for the development of the natural resources of the state. It has vast interests in Alabama. It prizes the good qualities of the section and knows they outweigh the bad. It states the condition as reported by the Census Bureau of the United States Government, not reproachfully, but in a spirit of helpfulness; in the hope that the people of the state will be brought to a realization of their deficiencies and by correcting them come into a rich realization of their opportunities.

The L. & N. is now, as it has ever been, pushing onward to assist in the good and necessary work.

If you want lodging for a week, a fortnight, a month, a year, the scale goes considerably down in proportion to the length of your stay. But with your furnished room you get also the comfort of dining rooms, an elegant cafe, a first-class restaurant of the German beer garden style, and all those conveniences of an American hotel for reading, writing and passing the time. It is a big building, containing 500 bedrooms, besides the lavishly spacious suites for general use and the halls for festivities.

It is astonishing how quickly fashionable society has moved into these quarters. Already now these outskirts of the city have developed a life of their own. Kurfurstendamm is now for Berlin life what the Fosse is

ENGLISHMAN AS A PROPHET

Sends Sealed Parchment to Historical Association, to Be Opened After 100 Years.

New York.—One of the unusual offerings at the annual exposition of the Modern Historical Records association here is a sealed parchment sent to the association by Frederick Harrison, English historian and economist. The trustees of the organization are directed to watch over the envelope and see that it remains unopened for at least 100 years.

It is understood that the inclosure is in the nature of a prophecy, based on a study of present conditions.

Five forms of "permanent records" are being preserved by the association—terra cotta tablets, phonographic records made of indestructible clay, photographic positives on glass, parchments and portrait busts.

REFLECTIONS OF A BACHEL.

The biggest gamble in life is being born.

The best way to make excuses is not to.

A woman gets her education teaching men to teach her.

A woman can make her hair curl even when she hasn't any.

YOUNG BANDITS IN JAIL

Youthful Desperadoes at Washington Must Stay in Training School During Minority.

Washington.—Stripped of their black masks and revolvers, three youthful desperadoes were taken to the national training school, where they probably will remain for the next seven years. The boys were Raymond Whitmire, Raymond Brinkley and Harry Hodkinson, all fourteen years old. Judge Delacy in the juvenile court sentenced them during their minority.

The three lads, inflamed by "penny-dreadful" literature, covered their faces with black masks, and, revolvers in hand, broke into a store, afterward "jimmying" their way into a private residence.

WASTED OPPORTUNITIES

It is an unfortunate but demonstrated fact that Alabama with 34 per cent. illiterates stands third in illiteracy among the states of the Union. Her total wealth per capita is only $573, there being only three other states in the Union with less per capita wealth.

And yet Alabama has 51,540 square miles of land area; she has approximately 250,000 fertile farms; the approximate value of her farm products is $137,500,000 per year; her mineral wealth makes her a leader in natural resources among the states of the Union.

Why this high percentage of illiterates and low percentage of per capita wealth?

There has for several years past been conducted in Alabama a campaign of political deception which has had as a substantial part of its strength the support of the illiterates of the state. Well-informed, intelligent citizens not actuated by selfish motives would not and could not subscribe to such political views.

This campaign of deception has been a constant drain on the financial resources of the state treasury, to the detriment of more public schools, more and better paid teachers. Also, it has diverted the thought and effort of the people from their own business so that the natural resources of the state have remained in large part undeveloped.

Public servants, such as the L. & N., have been handicapped in their effort to co-operate with the people for development. The substantial business men of the state have faith in the intentions of these public servants, but doubt of the probable action of the people.

The L. & N. is one with the progressive citizens of Alabama. It realizes the opportunities and seeks to co-operate for the development of the natural resources of the state. It has vast interests in Alabama. It prizes the good qualities of the section and knows they outweigh the bad. It states the condition as reported by the Census Bureau of the United States Government, not reproachfully, but in a spirit of helpfulness; in the hope that the people of the state will be brought to a realization of their deficiencies and by correcting them come into a rich realization of their opportunities.

The L. & N. is now, as it has ever been, pushing onward to assist in the good and necessary work.

GILLISPIE PUTS BULLET IN HEAD

DISCOURAGED OVER LOSS OF POSITION.

Tired and discouraged because he had lost a position which he had held for a period of twenty years, I. O. Gillispie, 50 years of age and a well known citizen of Montgomery, sent a bullet from a 32 calibre pistol crashing through his brain early Sunday morning, while members of his family waited around the breakfast table for his entry. The tragedy took place at his home 505 Highland avenue at 8 o'clock. The report of the pistol brought the family to his room where he lay writhing in the agony of death and unable to speak. Medical aid was immediately summoned, but he died within twenty minutes after firing the fatal shot.

Gillispie spent practically all of the early part of his life in the Bellinger Hill section, and recently he had gone to live with his daughter, Mrs. Nellie Williamson, who resides at the Highland avenue address. He was for a long number of years a painter at the Western of Alabama railroad shops, and it was the loss of that place, it is said, which brought about the breakdown and despondency the direct contributory cause of his suicide. When he was removed from the position he went about a long period seeking work but the only employment he could procure was a place as special policeman during the aviation meet here last spring. His age was against him, younger men were wanted for the jobs he sought, and he began to brood over his situation. This brought on failing health and subsequently desperation.

Members of his family stated that he seemed to be in low spirits when he came home Saturday afternoon after another day of failures, but he gave no intimation that he was contemplating killing himself. He retired early and was later than usual in arising the next morning. The family heard him moving about his room and sat awaiting his arrival in the dining room when the deadly pistol shot was fired. Those who reached his side first found him lying in the center of the floor, half dressed and blood streaming from his right temple while he writhed in the death agony. He was placed upon a bed and a physician summoned, but he was beyond mortal aid and died within the next few minutes.

He is survived by his widow, one daughter, Mrs. Williamson, and a son, George S. Gillispie.

The funeral was held Monday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock from the residence. Interment Oakwood cemetery.

Mr. Gillispie was a brother-in-law of Messrs. John W. and Sam. S. Stanfield and Mrs. R. C. Ray of Clanton, all of whom, together with their families, went down to Montgomery to attend the funeral services.

BUSINESS CHANGES

With the birth of the new year the McSwain Lumber Co., heretofore conducting a large lumber business at this point, retired from active business life, being succeeded by Roberts & Son Lumber Co., a firm composed of J. H. Roberts and B. M. Roberts.

At the same time the Pine Tree Lumber Co. was ushered into existence and is a bidder for a large portion of the lumber business of this section. The firm is composed of J. P. VanDerveer, Jr. and J. H. Roberts.

By the way, the latter firm is presenting to its friends one of the handsomest and most useful souvenirs, in the way of a calendar, that this writer has seen this year. It is a handsome clock, a good time keeper, set in extra heavy cardboard, well ornamented, and having a case in which is set a perpetual calendar.

POSTMASTER COLLINS

NEW MAN TAKES OFIFCE AT THORSBY.

Some weeks since the Postmaster General appointed Mr. Sam W. Collins as postmaster at Thorsby to succeed Mr. J. Bice removed, but the induction into office was delayed pending certain charges brought against Mr. Collins. Last week Mr. Collins received his commission and was instructed to take charge of the office, but, we understand, Postmaster Bice refused to surrender the office on the ground that his office had been placed under civil service by an order of Mr. Taft, and that therefore no man had any right to his office till charges had been preferred against him and proven. Mr. Collins immediately informed the postoffice department and on Monday Postoffice Inspector Toole of Selma went to Thorsby and put Mr. Collins in charge of the office.

You won't have very long to serve, Mr. Collins, but we greet you and congratulate you upon your winning fight.

BOUGHT LARGE TRACT

Big Timber Land Purchase Made By Mr. J. H. Roberts.

A deal was closed last week between Mr. J. H. Roberts and the Vizard investment Company of Mobile, whereby Mr. Roberts became the owner of a most valuable tract of timber land. It is the purpose of Mr. Roberts to erect two large new mills upon the tract immediately and to cut the timber as rapidly as possible. The transaction involves 2,490 acres of land, the consideration being $65,750.00.

The lumber manufactured will be handled through Messrs. Roberts & Son Lumber Company and the Pine Tree Lumber Company.

ANOTHER NEW FIRM

FERTILIZER COMPANY ORGANIZED

Some days since a new company was organized for the purpose of conducting a fertilizer business in Clanton. The capital stock is not stated but it is known that those behind the concern have sufficient capital to make a success of anything they may undertake.

The members of the new firm or company are Moses Robinson, Dr. E. A. Matthews, P. D. Wilson, J. E. Robinson and W. H. Sartor.

BERNIE THOMPSON APPOINTED

Some days since, Congressman Blackmon received a letter from Prof. J. J. Pickens, requesting him to appoint young Mr. Bernie Thompson as an alternate to West Point Academy, the great war college of the nation.

On Tuesday night Prof. Pickens received the following telegram from Congressman Blackmon: "Wire me if you desire me to name young man as first alternate to West Point, you spoke of in your letter some days ago

Fred L. Blackmon, M. C.

To this telegram Prof. Pickens returned the following message:

Kindly name Bernie Thompson as first alternate to West Point Academy. Many thanks.

J. J. Pickens.

The above is self explanitory but the Press wishes to comment upon it just a little, since it shows the magnanimity of the man who has the appointing power. We do not know what else could have actuated Congressman Blackmon in bestowing such a signal honor upon Chilton county. In the recent election Chilton voted against him more heavily than all the other counties combined. The voters in this county seem to delight in getting on the wrong side—or, to put it another way—"agin the administration." Chilton had an opportunity, by aligning itself with democracy, to place itself in line for "promotion," or at least to so place itself as to be able to make requests of the state, congressional and national officers, but it chose rather to ostracise itself and to be Mr. Nobody in the political world. Of the six counties in the district, Shelby went by a small majority for its home candidate, while Chilton, having no candidate of its own, chose to go with Shelby and cast its vote against a man sure of election and who could do them much good.

Fred Blackmon, by his appointment of Mr. Thompson, has shown himself a big man—much bigger than all his Chilton opponents combined. Ordinarily a congressman appoints young men to the war college from those counties which give him loyal support, but Fred Blackmon has risen above the plane of the mere politician and given to his worst enemy one of the best gifts he has to bestow.

We have heard of heaping coals of fire upon the heads of our enemies, but this has gone one step forward; Blackmon has taken his political enemy by the hand and led him into the banquet hall and given him a seat of honor. The question is: Will Chilton show its appreciation? Will the voters of this county ever lay aside prejudice and realize that some good can come out of Nazareth?

The appointment of Mr. Thompson was a happy one—it no doubt gave Blackmon much pleasure to make the appointment and the recipient of the honor is beyond question, deeply grateful. Will Chilton be as greatly effected?

The war college at West Point, New York is considered the best training school in the world; its graduates enter the army with rank, receiving pay from the day of graduation till death. He who receives a diploma from this college is not only a finished scholar but a well trained tactician, able to cope with the old world's war commanders.

We congratulate Mr. Thompson upon his appointment.

GOOD ROADS

From the Cullman Democrat.

At this season of the year we are confronted by the worst roads of the winter and the bad condition will continue for three or four months. Those who, in the past, voted against bonds are responsible for the bad roads. Many have had a change of heart since the last election, and we hope that if the matter is ever again submitted, that the people will authorize a bond issue.

The progressive, wide-awake farmer who has been used to good roads, would not have a Cullman county farm, if offered free. People desire good living conditions and they will have them or move on to more progressive communities.

ALABAMA NEWS IN SHORT ORDER

TELEGRAPHIC TAPS FROM ALL PARTS OF THE STATE BY OUR CORRESPONDENTS.

HIGHWAY COMMISSION IN 1912

Much Was Done—Every Dollar Expended Brought Equal Service In Return.

Montgomery.—No department of the state's government accomplished more last year in real education and economical value to the state at ithge than the highway commission. It is certain that no work was of more vital interest to the people of Alabama. In the opinion of the members of the highway commission, for every dollar expended one hundred cents in actual service was received, while the educational value resulting from such work was much greater than the actual money value.

The state highway department rounded out a good year. Handicapped at first as a result of proper lack of interest on the part of the people throughout the state, the commission finally forced recognition through the real value of its constructive work, with the result that toward the end of the year public enthusiasm was aroused and application for state aid began to flood the office of the commission.

During the last year the state highway department completed the construction of something like 75 miles of good roads. The department began operation in the summer of 1911, but practically all of the remainder of the first year was consumed in preparing for work, although several roads were begun during the summer and fall of 1911. It was in 1912, however, that these roads were actually completed. The best approximate estimate of the extent of state aid roads actually constructed in 1912 is 74¾ miles.

The counties in which state aid roads were completed last year were: Bullock, Bibb, Blount, Calhoun Colbert, Dale, Dallas, Elmore, Escambia, Etowah, Jackson, Lauderdale, Limestone, Lamar, Macon, Madison, Marion, Tallapoosa and Walker.. Most of these roads were constructed at a cost of $4,000, to which only the first year's appropriation was applied. In Tallapoosa county 10 miles of road were constucted at a cost of $10,000, of which the state paid $4,000 and the people $6,000.

Public roads are now being constructed in 26 counties of the state and the approximate extent of these roads will be 118¾ miles. All of these roads were begun in the fall of 1912, and they vary in length from 2 to 14 miles. The 14-mile road is under construction in Butler county, and will cost when completed $17,000, of which $4,000 will be paid by the state and $13,000 by the county and people.

Altogether, 59 out of 67 counties have used their state appropriation in the construction of steel concrete bridges, which have varied in length from 30 to 500 feet.

The total cost of all roads completed in the state, together with the cost of all roads and bridges that are under construction, will amount to $331,000, about one-half of which will have been paid by the state.

CHILD STRUCK BY CAR.

Montgomery.—Marion King, the five-year-old daughter of Marshall B. King, chief clerk of the city department of sanitation and health, was struck by a Highland avenue car, causing the loss of part of the right foot and serious injuries to the left leg.

CROUCH IS REAPPOINTED.

Montgomery.—A. L. Crouch, whose term as Excise Commissioner of Troy expired January 1, was re-appointed a member of the Commission by Governor O'Neal. Mr. Crouch has served one year and his term was the first one to expire.

EXPORTS SHOW GAIN.

Mobile.—The export and import business for the year 1912 for the port of Mobile, as shown by the report of Collector Ashley shows a gain of nearly five and a half million dollars as compared with the business for the previous year. The total valuation of exports was given at $32,762,072. The imports reached the high record of $4,967,219. These figures show the combined gain of the port, both in exports and imports as greatly increased over the year previous.

CONVICT BOARD TO BE NAMED.

Montgomery.—Three members of the state convict board will be appointed by Governor O'Neal shortly after March 1 to succeed three whose terms will expire March 1. The appointments will be for two years. Present members of the board were appointed by Governor O'Neal during January, 1911, and have served two years. It is believed the present members will be reappointed as the custom is to give them four years of service if their efficiency has been established.

VETS RECEIVE PENSIONS

Old Soldiers in State Will Draw $313,478 for Second Quarter.

Montgomery.—Warrants for pensions for old soldiers amounting to $313,478 were sent out by State Auditor C. B. Smith. The warrants are for the second quarter of the fiscal year, extending from October 1, 1912, to September 30, 1913.

The pension warrants, together with the amounts of each class, were sent out as follows: First class, 1,246 warrants, $31,150; second class, 3,966 warrants, $79,320; third class, 12,688 warrants, $203,008.

There will be no pension warrants for the fourth class owing to the fact that the last legislature abolished all fourth class warrants and increased the amount of the other classes.

GOES TO HIS REWARD.

Anniston.—Three days after his wife had been laid to rest in Edgemont, the Rev. J. H. Blacklock, D. D., rector of the Church of St. Michael and All Angels, died at the rectory. He had been ill for some time with pneumonia, but his death was superinduced by grief over the passing of his life mate, since which he had been in constantly failing health.

JAIL INSPECTION TOUR.

Jasper.—The Walker county board of commissioners journeyed to Tuscaloosa for the purpose of inspecting the Tuscaloosa county jail. The commissioners expect to build a new jail for Walker county at an early date and are inspecting some of the more modern jails in this state so that they can make the best of their work on the new jail.

MYSTERY IS SOLVED.

Gadsden.—The mystery of the supposed attack upon J. T. Johnson, night watchman at a North Gadsden manufacturing establishment, has been solved. Mr. Johnson dropped his gun into some coke, which, unknowingly, he put into the stove. As the fire burned the gun was fired. It was at first thought Johnson had met with foul play.

THE BEST TEACHER.
Old Experience Still Holds the Palm.

For real practical reliability and something to swear by, experience—plain old experience—is able to carry a big load yet without getting swayback.

A So. Dak. woman found some things about food from Old Experience a good, reliable teacher.

She writes:

"I think I have used almost every breakfast food manufactured, but none equal Grape-Nuts in my estimation.

"I was greatly bothered with weak stomach and indigestion, with formation of gas after eating, and tried many remedies for it but did not find relief.

"Then I decided I must diet and see if I could overcome the difficulty that way. My choice of food was Grape-Nuts because the doctor told me I could not digest starchy food.

"Grape-Nuts food has been a great benefit to me for I feel like a different person since I begun to eat it. It is wonderful to me how strong my nerves have become. I advise everyone to try it, for experience is the best teacher.

"If you have any stomach trouble—can't digest your food, use Grape-Nuts food for breakfast at least, and you won't be able to praise it enough when you see how different you feel." Clarksville, Tenn.—Mrs. H. L. Mason, of this place, writes: "I want to write you a few lines in regard to your medicine, Cardui, the woman's tonic.

Before my marriage I lived in Evansville, Ind. I suffered very much with womanly trouble. I thought, at times, that I would nearly die with pains in my stomach, and backache.

I saw your medicine advertised, and sent and got a bottle. The first bottle helped me, and I haven't been bothered with any of my old troubles since.

After my marriage, I lived in Mt. Vernon, Ind., and one of my neighbor's girls suffered like I did. I told them to give her Cardui, the woman's tonic, as it would help her, and it certainly did, right away.

I will surely recommend Cardui to all women, for I think it is a good medicine for all kinds of womanly trouble."

If you are suffering from any of the ailments peculiar to weak women, such as headache, backache, sideache, nervousness, sleeplessness, etc., we urge you to give Cardui, the woman's tonic, a trial.

It should surely do for you, what it has done for thousands of others, in the past half century, who suffered with similar troubles.

MARKET CORNERS VIOLATION OF LAW

INDICTMENT AGAINST PATTEN, SCALES, HAYNE AND BROWN DECLARED VOID.

OPINION BY VANDEVENTER

Men Were Charged With Trying to Corner Cotton Market During 1910.

Washington.—The supreme court of the United States has laid down the far reaching principle that "corners" of interstate commodities such as articles of clothing and food are in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law and held that, as far as the Sherman law was concerned, the indictment in the New York federal court of James Patten, Eugene G. Scales, Frank H. Hayne and William P. Brown for "conspiring to run an alleged cotton corner" was valid. The case against them was sent back for trial or other proceedings.

Justice Van Devanter announced the opinion of the court. Justice Lurton delivered a dissenting opinion that Chief Justice White and Justice Holmes concurred in. The majority of the court held that the circuit court for Southern New York had decided that the indictment charged a "withholding" of cotton from the market, a necessary element of a corner as admitted by the government. The minority held that the circuit court that found the indictment did not so charge and for that reason the indictment was faulty. According to all the justices the correctness of the holding of the circuit court as the indictments charging a "withholding" and as to the sufficiency of the indictment on other technical points has to be accepted at this time without question by the supreme court. The points thus left undecided may be made basis for bringing the case to the court again, if the defendants are convicted.

11,000 MILES OF FILMS.

Enough to stretch From New York to Manila Exported Last Year.

Washington—Eleven hundred miles of motion picture film, 30 million dollars' worth of automobiles, a million dollars' worth of telephones and more than a hundred thousand dollars' worth of aeroplanes were among the exports from the United States in the year just ended. The United States is the world's largest producer of motion picture film, and the quantity exported during the year aggregate more than sixty million feet, approximately 11,000 miles miles, or enough to stretch from New York to Manila.

Plans to Dissolve Not Satisfactory.

Washington.—The United States supreme court held that the plan advanced by Union Pacific attorneys for the disposition of the entire stock holdings of the Union Pacific Railroad company in the Southern Pacific company by transfer to the stockholders of the Union Pacific company would not so effectually end the Union Pacific merger as to comply with its dissolution decree.

Legislature to Meet.

Raleigh, N. C.—North Carolina's legislature, composed of 149 democrats, 16 republicans and 5 progressives, will convened here January 8 in biennial session. The general assembly is expected to ratify the action of the voters at the democratic primary held in November, which renominated United States Senator F. M. Simmons.

Transportation Concern Wins Decision

Washington.—Railroad and express companies won a revolutionary degree in the United States supreme court when it was held that contracts limiting to small sums their liability for loss of shipments were not subject to interstate laws. It was further held that contracts limiting liability to a small sum in return for a low rate were not in violation of the interstate commerce laws particularly the Carmack amendment. Scored upon scores of such contracts have been held void under state laws.

QUALITIES OF DOUBLE DAISY

Hardy Edging or Border Plant and Grows Easily From Seed or by Division of Its Roots.

The English double daisy is a hardy edging or border plant easily grown from seeds or by division of the roots, says Park's Floral Magazine. The seeds germinate readily, and if plants are started in the spring they will begin to bloom in mid-summer, and will continue to bloom till late in autumn. Then, almost before the frost is gone the following spring, the plump little buds will again disappear, and the flowers will be more numerous and handsome than ever.

Notwithstanding the ease with which the plants may be propagated and grown from seeds, there are some persons who do not succeed in their culture, as the following letter attests:

"Mr. Editor:—What a dainty little beauty the name Double Daisy calls to my mind, for mother had the flowers in abundance, pure white, and red, and white tipped with pink—a profusion of bloom and beauty. I have tried repeatedly to raise those same little flowers, but so far have failed completely. Once three or four plants came up, but did not bloom, and they froze out during the winter, though I covered them as I did the pinks and pansies. Why do I fail?—Mrs. Felton, Ohio."

It is possible the sister sowed her seeds in a garden bed, and the rain and sun destroyed the little plants. The seeds are very small and the plants that appear are delicate for a few days, until they get their second leaves. It is better to sow in a box of sifted soil, covering very lightly, and keep in a sheltered place till the plants are large enough to set out. The seeds are sure to germinate, and must be sown thinly, otherwise they will be liable to damp off. Set them six or eight inches apart in the bed, and see that the drainage is good. Boards set edgewise around the bed, with a few nude brush thrown over, will be found a better protection than straw or rough grass, which often smothers the plants. The plants are more liable to injury from wet soil, poor ventilation, and contrasts of temperature, than from severe steady cold.

Great improvements have lately been made in this flower, the newer varieties being much larger than the older ones, very double, and showing a wider range of colors. Plants well established in pots will bloom well in a cool room in winter, the chief precaution being to keep the atmosphere moist, and above the freezing point.

PEACH TREES FOR PLANTING

Growers of Experience Do Not Favor Large Variety—Young Stock Gains More Rapidly.

(By FRANK D. WELLS, Deputy Nursery Inspector, Michigan.)

Among peach growers of experience large trees are not desired for planting. Trees 30 inches to three feet high are considered large enough and better than those taller. By small trees it is not meant those stunted by starvation, but trees which have made a healthy stocky growth. Such trees bear transplanting better than overfed, overgrown trees, besides are less expensive to handle. The shock of taking up and setting out is not so severe upon a small as upon a large tree, consequently the percentage of loss is smaller. The first cost, too, is less, which is of importance when hundreds of trees are set.

Pears, plums and cherries grow more readily if young stock is used than when large trees are moved. This is not saying that larger trees cannot be successfully transplanted. Some men find no difficulty in it, but on the average it is the small tree that succeeds best.

The man of experience may prefer a small tree, but the chances are that his neighbor who wants a few trees for his garden or town lot will order the largest he can get. Of course, the nurseryman will try to satisfy him. He will plant a seven-foot peach if he can get it. Such a tree looks well and is a source of pride to the owner, but too often it does not grow, or is so slow about it that some of its lesser brethren overtake and maybe pass it.

Good Soil for Bush Fruit.

The ground between the rows and around the bushes should be kept fine and mellow. If the soil is allowed to grow up in weeds and grass, the yield will be cut short, and the fruit will be small and of inferior quality. All bush fruits should be grown in wide rows, so the greater part of the cultivation can be done with the horse, hoe and cultivator.

The Pomeroy Walnut.

This variety was originated by Norman Pomeroy of Niagara county, N. Y. The nut is medium to small; weight of sample photographed 11 grams, kernel, five grams; flavor sweet, rich and of high quality; shell rather thick, but a free cracker. This variety is particularly hardy, upright in growth, in normal seasons blossoms June 1 to 5.

NO LONGER SELECTS THE HAT

Hubby's First and Last, Experience at a Millinery Store, Was Altogether Too Costly.

Congressman Ralph W. Moss of Indiana did not care much for a hat his wife wore. He finally spoke about it. Mrs. Moss admitted that it was plain, and, instead of taking exceptions to her husband's remark, invited him to accompany her the next time she bought a hat.

"I can certainly pick out a better one than that," said Mr. Moss.

So they went to the store together, Mrs. Moss said not a word as the comely milliner displayed one beautiful bonnet after another. It was the first time Mr. Moss had ever been in a millinery store, but he appeared to be at ease, and finally selected one of the most joyful creations in the entire stock. Mrs. Moss looked well in it. She was pleased.

"I'll take that," said the Hoosier congressman. "How much is it?"

"Forty dollars," said the pretty girl without even a blink.

Mr. Moss saw blue stars, but luckily had just come from the bank and was able to produce that much in cash. Now he lets Mrs. Moss buy her own hats and he does not complain about their being plain.—Judge.

TERRIBLE ITCHING ON LIMBS

Glen Wilton, Va.—"Five years ago I was in a terrible state of suffering with blotches on my limbs, of the most intense stinging and itching. I could not rest day or night; the itching was so severe that it waked me out of sleep. I could never get a full night's rest. I actually scrubbed the very flesh so severely that in a short time the affected places were so sore I could scarcely walk with any ease or comfort. The places were a solid raised up mass. I would scratch the parts until they would bleed. I tried home remedies but got no good; the itching just kept on getting worse. I used some salve which simply was no good at all.

"I happened to see the Cuticura Soap and Ointment advertisement and wrote for a free sample. Almost like magic I commenced getting relief. I bought a 50c box of Cuticura Ointment and some Cuticura Soap and I was entirely cured from a torment that would be hard to describe." (Signed) W. P. Wood, Mar. 9, 1912.

Georgraphy of Liquor.

Mayor Gaynor, discussing city government in his wonted illuminating and brilliant way, said in New York:

"We must not have one reform law for the rich and another for the poor. It is as bad for the millionaire to gamble in his club as for the laborer to gamble in a stuss joint. It is as bad to become intoxicated on champagne as on mixed ale.

"Too many reformers, so-called think that when a man is drunk on Fifth avenue he is ill, and when a man is ill on Third avenue he is drunk."

Crushing Rejoinder

A workman sat on a curb nursing an injured foot which had been struck by an iron casting which had fallen from the top of a building.

"Did that big thing hit you?" asked a sympathizing bystander.

The workman nodded.

"And is it solid iron?"

"No," replied the victim, "half of it is only lead."

BLAME PLACED ON PHYSICIANS

Growth of Drug Habit in United States Alleged to Be Due to Opiates Ordered in Prescriptions.

That 99 per cent. of all the cocaine and morphine manufactured in this country is used by persons who have formed the drug habit through physicians' prescriptions is the startling statement made by Dr. L. F. Kebler, Chief of the Division of Drugs, Department of Agriculture. This statement, concerning the appalling growth of drug addiction in the United States, was made by Dr. Kebler in an address at Washington, before the American Society for the Study of Alcohol and Narcotics.

Dr. Kebler is quoted by Washington papers as having declared that drug using had increased 100 per cent. in the last 40 years, and that American medical men were not discriminating enough in their use of opiates. Their overindulgence to their patients, he said, is creating thousands of drug users every year.

"It is a very sad thing to say that our physicians are doing the greatest work in promoting the use of cocaine and morphine," said the doctor. "State laws are not saving the public from the grip of the drug habit, and the American public is sinking tighter and tighter into the black abyss of the morphine and cocaine fiend.

"The worst of it is that the importation of opium into the country is becoming larger and larger year by year. I have heard it said on reliable authority that 99 per cent. of the cocaine and morphine manufactured in this country is used by persons who have formed the habit through doctors' prescriptions."

Almost simultaneously with Dr. Kebler's address, Dr. J. A. Patterson, at Grand Rapids, Michigan, in a public statement said that 19 out of every 20 patients who come to an institution with which he is connected for treatment for the drug habit owe their downfall to physicians' prescriptions.

Both Vows Broken.

Apropos of the anti-vivisectionists' fight against the Nobel prize award to Dr. Alexis Carrel of the Rockefeller institute, Prof. Herbert Satterley said the other day in Jacksonville:

"These antis contradict themselves terribly when they try to prove that animal research is useless and futile. They just put themselves in the position of one of their number whom I met at my hotel the other day.

"As this anti was dining I bent forward and said to him:

"'Pardon me, but you are, I believe, both an anti-vivisectionist and a vegetarian?'

"'Yes, sir, that is correct,' he answered.

"'Then,' said I, 'you will probably be shocked to learn that you have just eaten a live caterpillar with your lettuce salad.'"

Roses in Medicine.

Roses at one time figured prominently in the pharmacopoeia. Pliny gives 32 remedies compounded of rose leaves and petals. Sufferers from nervous complaints used to seek relief by sleeping on rose pillows and one is told that Heliogabalus used to imbibe rose wine as a pick-me-up after his periodical gormandizing hours. The flower was also served at table, both as a garnish, in the way parsley is now used, and as a salad, and rose water was largely used for flavoring dishes. Roses as food have gone out of favor among western nations, but the Chinese still eat rose fritters.

Fire in Bank of England.

The first fire within memory occurred at the Bank of England, London, a few days ago. The fire broke out in the southwestern portion of the building. The flooring and joisting were considerably damaged. The outbreak was discovered by the Bank of England authorities, and subdued by their own appliances in 30 minutes. A lieutenant and a dozen men of the Irish Guards on duty at the bank, with fixed bayonets, assisted the police in keeping the crowd back from the building.

Balanced.

Representative Pujo was talking in Washington about the currency.

"It must balance," he said. "It must balance automatically and delicately. It must resemble the Christmas husband.

"'Oh, John, dear,' said this chap's wife, 'I'm sorry you've got all those heavy parcels to carry!'

"'Well, you see,' John panted, reassuringly, 'my pocket is very much lighter now.'"

No Chance to Shine.

"Tough luck," sighed Gadsby.

"What's wrong now?" questioned Gygling.

"Pursefor took me out riding yesterday in his $10,000 automobile and I saw only one person I knew."

Made a Complete Job.

"Mrs. Dungleford, has your husband been cured of his cacoathes scribendi yet?"

"I—I think so; the surgeons took that out when they removed his vermiform appendix."

Its Class.

"That was a raw deal."

"What was?"

"The plot they cooked up."

Have you paid your POLL TAX yet? If not do so today. Get busy!

City licenses and property taxes are due; five more days and you will be numbered among those who had to "walk the plank." Pay up today.

Let's make 1913 the greatest year in the history of Clanton and Chilton county. Co-operation and a desire for "big things" will bring this about.

Before the next issue of our paper, the vote of Alabama will have been cast solidly for Woodrow Wilson for President.

The twelve electors meet next Monday at Montgomery to cast the vote and to select a messenger to take the returns to Washington.

There are several other states which are going to do just like Alabama—vote solidly for Wilson and Marshall.

Comer remains quiet; Hobson is "sawing wood and saying nothing"—or at least not much—and Johnston is suffering with a cold. That puts a quietus on the senatorial race for the time being at least. But, after a while the red headed rooster from Jefferson will get busy and then things will be "doing." Mind you, now, mind you!

Though it is some time off, would it not be well for the voters of the county to be casting about for a suitable man to represent them in the next legislature?

"Just any old thing" will not do, We should have a representative; one who can and will accomplish things; one who has high ideals. The Governor may have much legislation to enact, a representative not in accord with the administration not only does not accomplish anything, but to a large degree, blocks desirable legislation.

All over the State, in hamlet, village, town and city, commercial clubs and civic bodies are holding meetings and passing resolutions requesting President Taft to reconsider his veto of the Lock number 18 bill recently passed by the House and Senate. This bill confers upon the Alabama Interstate Power Company the right to erect a dam across Coosa river at or near Wetumpka in furtherance of their scheme to furnish this state, and particularly this section, with the cheapest and best power and light it has ever enjoyed. The scheme of the Power Company is yet in its infancy insofar as actual results are concerned. It is without doubt the biggest proposition ever submitted to the South; it will, without doubt, go further toward developing the resources of the South than anything that has ever yet been undertaken. Aside from the power and light to be generated a "CYANAMID" factory is to be located within easy reach which will furnish the farmers with a cheaper and yet superior fertilizer for their farms; they propose, among other things, to expend $1,600,000.00 on the improvement of the Coosa river to make it navigable—more than the government has expended upon that stream in a generation.

All these resolutions and petitions have their weight with the President; he has already signified his intention of giving the matter further consideration. If he still adheres to his veto there is no doubt that another bill will be introduced and passed by both houses of Congress and approved by President Wilson when he goes into office. But time is money with the Power people—they want to begin work at once.

As we said, these petitions from commercial clubs and civic bodies all have their weight with the President and they are being passed by such organizations all over the State—except in Clanton!

Clanton is perhaps to be more effected, more greatly benefitted than any other town, but its Commercial Club, its civic body, is as dumb as the proverbial clam—BUT WHAT'S THE USE? WHAT'S THE USE? IT HAS ALWAYS BEEN SO—to our shame!

DR. MOSS VISITS CLANTON

NO OCCASION FOR ALARM SAYS HE. PRECAUTION ALL THAT IS NECESSARY.

In company with County Health Officer Gragg, who has for the past several days given much of his time to the investigation of suspicious cases of meningitis, Dr. P. B. Moss, State Bacterioligist, visited several homes in this county with a view to settling definitely the much discussed question as to whether ornot cerebro-spinal meningitis existed in the county. Four or five cases were visited; one was pronounced by Dr. Moss as a typical case of epidemic meningitis; others were deferred for the time being. A quantity of spinal fluid was extracted from one patient by Dr. Moss and taken to Montgomery for microscopic examination.

In conversation with the Press man Sunday, evening Dr. Moss stated that while he had no doubt of the existence of meningitis there was no cause for alarm; all that was necessary was for ordinary precautions to be taken and the disease would probably die of itself. One thing he desires to impress however:—the disease is taken about largely by visitors and in that way may be distributed over a large section of country. It is not necessary to contract the disease to become a "carrier;" in fact those who usually "carry" the disease are those who visit patients but who do not themselves contract the malady. He therefore cautions that there be as little visiting as possible in homes where there are suspected cases of meningitis. It is well nigh impossible to "quarantine" against the trouble for people will visit the sick even when they know that it is a disease in epidemic form; nevertheless, much of this visiting can be avoided, which will greatly minimize the danger of its spreading.

Dr. Moss anticipates no very serious results—especially if his instructions are carried out by those who come in contact with the disease.

Several of the cases reported as suspicious are now on the road to recovery; no new cases have developed within the past two or three days.

Montgomery, Ala., Jan. 8, 1913

Dr. V. J. Gragg.
Clanton, Ala.

Dear Doctor:—To confirm report made you over phone, the examination of the spinal fluid from Lillian Smith shows very definitely meningococci (the germ which causes spotted fever) the micrococcus intracellularis.

It was hardly necessary to have this finding in order to be sure of the diagnosis but this proves it beyond any doubt.

Thanking you for your courtesy to me and hoping to hear from you in regard to future developments,

Yours very truly,
P. B. Moss,
State Pathologist.

Now that Dr. P. B. Moss, State Pathologist, has settled the question and there is no further doubt in regard to the presence of cerebro-spinal meningitis or spotted fever in Chilton county, let us hope that by prompt action we may be able to stamp the disease out in a short time.

No one knows what may be the result. It is to be hoped that there will no[t] be another case, but the deaths may be numbered in scores or hundreds. There seems to have already been several deaths in at least three widely separated parts of the county.

The prevention of the spread of this disease is of more interest to the public than the cure.

Remember, this is a disease that may be transmitted by carriers; that is, an individual may come in contact with this disease and get the germs in his throat and nasal passages and carry it around spreading it amongst people who have never seen or been near the disease. In fact some of our leading authors believe that is the common way by which this dreaded disease is transmitted.

Therefore we should, at this time, be very careful how we visit any place where there are sick people unless we are absolutely sure we know from what they are suffering. Should we not do this we may cause a heavy loss of life as well as disturb business interest in the surrounding country.

The thing to do is not to get alarmed but to go about our business quietly and stay away from suspicious cases of sickness unless duty calls us there. I think there is no need to fear if we are careful.

V. J. Gragg,
County Health Officer.

NOTE:—Dr. Gragg has just received a communication from Dr. Eiland, stating that another well developed case had come up from Cooper.

Mr. F. M. Dobson of Birmingham, a contractor, is in Clanton to submit to the Board of County Commissioners plans and specifications for the improvement of the county jail as recommended by jail inspector Oates and the recent Grand Jury.

This is the beginning of a new year; many of our subscribers are greatly in arrears with the paper. We need the money badly; our creditors are pressing us for settlement. Can you not, will you not, pay up and help us out? Please do.

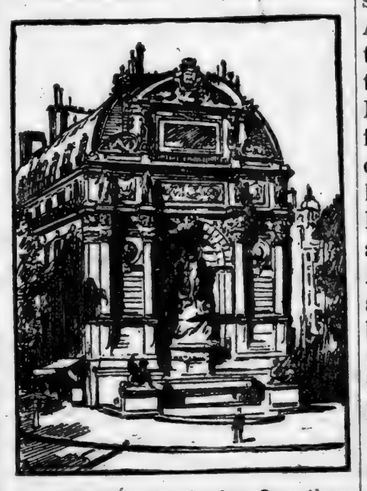
TO BEAUTIFY PARIS

Prefect Outlines Reforms Estimated to Cost $49,000,000.

Ten Million to Be Spent for Enlarging and Improving Water Supply, $2,000,000 in Precautions Against Consumption.



Paris.—"To live is the first necessity, and for such a city as Paris to live is to develop, and beautify itself," were the words used by the prefect of the Seine, M. Delanney, in calling on the Paris municipal council recently to sanction a further loan to enable the authorities to spend another $49,000,000 on the city's needs.

The largest part of this amount will, when borrowed, be applied to realize the colossal scheme of hygiene and anti-tuberculosis reforms on which Prefect Delanney has been engaged for some time.

In connection with this scheme it is proposed to spend $10,000,000 for enlarging and improving the water supply. $2,000,000 in precautions against the consumption scourge already spent, over $4,000,000 for keeping the roadways cleaner and in a better state of repair, $3,000,000 for rebuilding and enlarging the slaughter houses, and $1,000,000 for improvements in public hospitals.

In addition to this program, no less than $24,000,000 will be applied to opening new streets and widening existing ones, to solve the traffic problem, which is still the gravest before the city authorities; $2,400,000 for schoolhouses; $2,200,000 for municipal buildings, and $400,000 for walks and plantings.

These operations, it is thought, form a minimum necessary to keep Paris in a condition worthy of its position among the capitals of the world. It is also purposed to expropriate and pull down a large number of unhealthful dwellings and build in their places hygienic one, in the course of the works contemplated.

The money, which will be borrowed for the purpose, will be the second installment of the great loan of $18,000,000 which the city of Paris was authorized by parliament last year to make.

COURTED AS INVALIDS; WED

Greenwich Girl and Auburn Youth Restored to Health Elope in Auto; Forgiven.

Greenwich, Conn.—Miss Gladys Linstedt, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William E. Linstedt, has returned to her home from a trip to New York. She was bubbling over with pleasure.

"What do you think?" she asked. "While I was in town I met Win, and I've invited him to come here to morrow."

The subject of the outburst is Winthrop C. Beardsley of Auburn, N. Y. He is twenty-one, and so is Miss Linstedt. They met in Saratoga last winter. He was suffering from pneumonia, and she from another sort of lung trouble. Both are now in the best of health.

Beardsley, soon after his arrival at the Lindstedt home, suggested that he and the young woman go for a stroll. Her brother offered his auto. This was accepted, and the couple drove off.

They returned about one o'clock in the afternoon. Dr. and Mrs. Linstedt were at home together, and, leading Beardsley up to them, the girl said:

"I am pleased to be able to present to you my husband."

The parents almost fainted.

"Now I know why you made that trip to New York," said Mrs. Linstedt. "It wasn't an accident."

The parents decided that there was no occasion to become angry, so they blessed the couple and hustled them off on their honeymoon.

For a time it was thought he would recover, as he partly regained the use of his arms and legs, which were paralyzed when he was first hurt.

WALTER LAWHORN

IN MONTGOMERY COUNTY JAIL.

Friday night last quite a little commotion was created in the Arledge neighborhood near Jemison, in that section known as "Stumps' Hills," when Walter Lawhorn, a negro farm laborer who worked for Mr. Elijah Arledge, attempted an assault upon Mrs. Arledge during the absence of her husband.

From the best information obtainable it appears that Lawhorn had been working around the Arledge farm for some months and was well acquainted with all the surroundings; at the time of the assault Mr. Arledge was away visiting some friends in the neighborhood and the negro, thinking that Mrs. Arledge was alone, determined to take advantage of that fact. When he entered the room the good lady immediately gave the alarm and begun to struggle with her assailant; her little daughter rushed to her assistance and succeeded in driving him away from the house.

Lawhorn, it seems, secured a mule from the Arledge stable and intended to leave the country but fortunately the mule threw him and returned to the stable. The neighborhood was aroused and a searching party organized at once. The negro, fearing capture and summary punishment, and realizing his inability to escape from the searching party, returned to the Arledge stable and crawled into the hay loft where he remained till Sunday night. At that time Mr. Arledge went to the stable to feed his stock and in throwing down hay and fodder from the loft uncovered the hidden negro. Information was quickly sent out and the negro closely guarded. At first it looked very much as if a neck-tie party would take place, but cooler heads prevailed. Several of the men present took the negro to the large swamp near the home where he was kept till the arrival of Deputy Sheriffs Smitherman and Fallon. The negro had a rope tied about his neck and barely escaped lynching at the hands of an infuriated mob; as it was he escaped with a severe beating. The deputies took the negro in charge, landing him safely in the Chilton county jail, where he was closely guarded all night to prevent lynching. Early Monday morning Deputy Smitherman carried the brute to Montgomery and turned him over to Sheriff Hood for safe keeping till the Grand Jury meets and passes upon the case.

Lawhorn admitted his guilt and says he does not know what actuated him to make the assault.

Constipation, if Neglected, Causes Serious Illness

Constipation, if neglected, leads to almost innumerable complications affecting the general health.

Many cases of typhoid fever, appendicitis and other severe diseases are traceable to prolonged clogging of the bowels. Regarding the effects of constipation, C. E. Ayers, 6 Sabin St., Montpelier, Vt., says:

"I was afflicted with constipation and biliousness for years, and at times became so bad I would become unconscious. I have been found in that condition many times. Physicians did not seem to be able to do me any good. I would become weak and for days at a time could do no work. Not long ago I got a box of Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets, and after using them found I had never tried anything that acted in such a mild and effective manner. I believe I have at last found the remedy that suits my case."

Thousands of people are sufferers from habitual constipation and while possibly realizing something of the danger of this condition, yet neglect too long to employ proper curative measures until serious illness often results. The advice of all physicians is, "keep your bowels clean," and it's good advice.

Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets are sold by all druggists, at 25 cents a box containing 25 doses. If not found satisfactory, your money is returned.

SYNOPSIS.

Major Lawrence, son of Judge Lawrence of Virginia, whose wife was a Lee, is sent on a perilous mission by Gen. Washington, just after the winter at Valley Forge. Disguised in a British uniform Lawrence arrives within the enemy's lines. The Major attends a great fete and saves the "Lady of the Blended Rose" from mob. He later meets the girl at a brilliant ball. Trouble is started over a waltz, and Lawrence is urged by his partner, Mistress Mortimer (The Lady of the Blended Rose), to make his escape. Lawrence is detected as a spy by Captain Grant of the British Army who agrees to a duel. The duel is stopped by Grant's friends and the spy makes a dash for liberty, swimming a river following a narrow escape. The Major arrives at the shop of a blacksmith, who is friendly, and knows the Lady of the Blended Rose. Captain Grant and rangers search blacksmith shop in vain for the spy. Lawrence joins the minute men. Grant and his train are captured by the minute men. Lawrence is made prisoner by an Indian and two white men, who lock him in a strong cell. Peter advises Lawrence not to attempt to escape as "some one" would send for him. Grant's appearance adds mystery to the combination of circumstances. Lawrence again meets the Lady of the Blended Rose, who informs him that he is in her house; and that she was in command of the party that captured him. The captive is thrust into a dark underground chamber when Captain Grant begins a search of the premises. After digging his way out, Lawrence finds the place deserted. Evidenec of a battle and a dead man across the threshold. Col. Mortimer, father of the Lady of the Blended Rose, finds his home in ruins. Capt. Grant insists that Lawrence be strung up at once. Miss Mortimer appears, explains the mystery and Lawrence is held a prisoner of war. Lawrence escapes through plans arranged by the Lady and sees Grant attack Miss Mortimer. Grant is knocked out by Lawrence, who comes to Miss Mortimer's relief and then makes his escape. Captain Grant's base villany revealed. Lawrence returns to Valley Forge, where learns more of Grant's perfidy. Washington forces Clinton at battle and Lawrence gets trace of Eric Mortimer. The battle of Monmouth. Gen. Washington again starts Lawrence on an important mission. Lawrence finds Miss Mortimer in soldiers' uniform, acting as scout. Explanations follow. Washington's dispatches are delievered to Gen. Arnold and Lawrence is assigned to special service of capturing Fagin.

CHAPTER XXIX.

I Run Across Eric.

I slept three hours, the dead sleep of sheer exhaustion, but felt refreshed and strong when roughly aroused. Before sunset I was across the river, where I found my little squad of dragoons prepared for their night's adventure. Arnold had kept his word, the fresh horses being fine animals, the ammunition in excess of our needs. Conroy was enthusiastic, and somewhat loquacious, but I cut his conversation off rather sharply, and ordered the men into their saddles. With brain clarified by sleep I realized the importance of the work before us, and how imperfect my plans were. I could merely ride forth to Elmhurst, hoping to pick up some clew to aid me. As we rode rapidly along the deserted road leading to Farrell's I reviewed over and over again every remembered detail, only to conclude that I must get hands on Grant, and by threats, or any other available means, compel him to confess his part in the villainy. Dusk settled about us, succeeded by night, as we pressed steadily forward, the men riding silently, the only sound the thud of hoofs, and the slight jingle of accoutrements. As we passed the black walls of Farrel's shop, I recalled the papers found in Grant's coat, and the reference in Fagin's note to a rendezvous at Lone Tree. Probably that was the spot where the two had been accustomed to meeting. If true in the past, why not now as well? Suddenly it occurred to me that it was at a place called Lone Tree that the minute men had gathered for their attack on Delavan's wagon train. Could this, by any possibility, be the same spot? I drew my horse back beside Conroy.

"Ever heard of a place called Lone Tree?" I asked quietly.

He rubbed his head thoughtfully.

"Not just about here, sir. We camped over east of there once, maybe a year ago, down in a hollow where there was one big tree standin' all alone, kind of an odd-lookin' tree, sir, and seems to me, the guide said the place was called something like that. Say, Tom," to the nearest dragoon, "do you remember that Lone Tree where we camped when we were out hunting' Tarleton?"

"Sure; in east Medford. There was a farmhouse across on the side of a hill. I got some buttermilk there."

"Wasn't that what the guide called the place—Lone Tree?"

"Derned if I know, sergeant. Don't recollect hearin' the guide say anythin' 'bout that, but the woman at the house told me her place was called Lone Tree cottage—so I reckon he might."

This was a chance worth trying.

"We will take the first turn to the left, and have a look at the place," I said. "Conroy, you and Tom ride ahead, and keep your eyes open."

We reached the hollow where the big tree stood, about midnight, but found little reward. The house on the hill had been burned to the ground. Near the tree, however, we discovered evidence of recent camp fires, one not yet cold, and apparently there had been quite a body of men camped there lately. Conroy manufactured a torch, and scouted about, finally reporting:

"I don't know how many were here, sir, altogether, but there was a lot o' horses picketed over near the creek. I reckon the last of them didn't leave until dark tonight, an' they rode north toward the main road. There was maybe a dozen in that party."

We followed the general direction the fellows seemed to have taken, Conroy and I on foot, scanning the trail by aid of a pine knot. The dust lay thick on the clay road through the cut, where we had charged the foragers, and it was easy to see the band had turned east. There was but one conclusion possible; if this was Fagin's gang of cutthroats, as I suspected, then they were either returning to their sand caves in Monmouth county after a raid, or else were starting forth on some new project near at hand. Whichever was true, Elmhurst lay in the direction taken. Determined to learn the truth, we pressed forward, riding rapidly, yet exercising the precaution of keeping two scouts well in advance. It must have been nearly three o'clock when we reached the summit of the low hill within a few hundred yards of the house, and found the two scouts awaiting us.

My first glance across the ravine revealed the outlines of the house above the low trees of the orchard. All appeared peaceable enough, and I felt a sudden relief. There were lights burning on the lower floor, streaming through several windows, while up stairs one window was ablaze. Late as it was, this illumination was not surprising, however, as the care of the wounded man would necessitate night watchers, while, no doubt, Claire would anticipate by reaching there before morning. All this flashed over me, as my eyes hastily surveyed the familiar surroundings. Then I became aware that the older scout was reporting.

"There's quite a bunch of horses picketed down there in the ravine, sir," he said, pointing toward the right.

"How many?"

"Oh, maybe twenty-five or thirty; Joe an' I couldn't get very close, as there's a couple of men on guard on top of the bank. A hundred feet down you can see 'em plain against the sky."

"Wasn't what you saw a cattle herd?"

"No, sir," positively. "They're horses, picketed in line like a cavalry troop, and they've got their saddles on."

What this all meant could not be guessed at, but there must be some scheme of devilry under way.

"Have either of you crossed the ravine?" I asked, endeavoring to reach some conclusion.

"Yes, sir, Joe did. He was up in the edge of the orchard?"

"See any men?"

"Not a man, sir, outside," answered the other. "But I saw shadows against the curtains on that lower floor. I couldn't tell how many; they just come an' go, only they wasn't dressed alike."

One thing was sufficiently certain—we could gain little information remaining where we were.

"Sergeant," I said, determining swiftly on a course of action, "take your men, dismounted, across the ravine, and into the orchard. Keep under cover, but get as close to the house as you can safely. Picket your horses back there beside the road."

"And you, sir?"

"I'll take Tom with me, and we'll circle that horse herd, and come up to the house from the rear. I want to discover where those fellows are, and what they are up to. See this whistle, sergeant?"

"Yes, sir."

"It gives a sharp, shrill blast. If I blow it twice, get your men inside the house instantly. I'll not sound it unless I need you at once. We'll wait here until you get across."

They disappeared into the black depths of the ravine, moving cautiously and with little noise. Tom and I plunged down the steep slope, feeling our way through the darkness, but moving to the right, toward where the scouts had indicated the horses were being herded. We skirted these, creeping along the opposite bank behind a fringe of bushes, certain that the darkness concealed our movements from the two men on guard. We crossed fifty feet above, gained the top of the bank, and crawled down, sheltered from observation, until we were directly above the two guards. Peering cautiously over, we could easily distinguish the black outlines on the hillside below.

One man was standing up, leaning against the trunk of a small tree, while the other was sitting on the ground, his head bent forward, and his hat drawn low over his eyes. Neither had uttered a sound, but as my eyes strained through the darkness I began to perceive details which awakened a new suspicion. The fellow standing up wore a cap and no coat, and his hands were clasped about a short, sawed-off gun. He had none of the appearance of the soldier, but the other man apparently was in uniform, although I could not distinguish its character. What instantly attracted my attention was the fact that his hands were evidently tied behind his back. If this was true then he was a prisoner, and the other had been stationed there to guard him, and not the horses. Tom perceived this as soon as I, for I felt his fingers grip my arm.

"Creep around the edge of the rock there," I said, pointing. "That will bring you at his back, and not more than five feet away. Can you do it?"

He nodded grimly.

"Leave your weapons here," I added, "and when you spring, get hold of his gun so he cannot fire. I'll cover him the instant you strike. Go on."

He unbuckled his belt, and crept along to the right, so noiselessly that even I, watching his snake-like movement, could hear no sound. The guard did not move his head, and the other remained motionless, his face bent almost to his knees. Down below the horses stamped restlessly, and switched their tails. Watching each motion like a hawk, I saw Tom dip over the crest, and worm his way down behind the rock. Then he disappeared, until, as he cautiously arose to his feet, his head and shoulders emerged shadowy just beyond. Realizing he was ready, I got to my knees, gripping a pistol butt. Without a warning sound the dragoon leaped, his arms gripping the astounded sentinel with the hug of a bear. He gave utterance to one grunt, and then the barrel of my pistol was at his head.

"Not a word!" I said sternly. "Unclasp his belt, Tom. Yes, take his gun. If he moves, or utters a sound, shoot him down."

I wheeled to face the other, who had lifted his head, and was staring at us through the darkness. He was no longer a mere shapeless shadow, but a slender, straight figure, and my heart gave a sudden throb.

"Who are you?" I asked sharply. "Eric Mortimer?"

"Yes," he answered, in evident surprise. "Do I know you?"

"No," and I cut the rope binding his ankles. "But I was searching for you. I am an officer of Maxwell's brigade; my name is Lawrence. Tell me first what has happened—why you are being held prisoner."

He stretched his cramped arms and legs, lifting his hat so that I saw his face dimly. In the gloom his resemblance to Claire was so remarkable that I involuntarily exclaimed:

"Heavens! but you look like your sister!"

"Like Claire! they all say so; you know her!"

"It is at her request I am here; you need not fear to tell me your story."

"Oh, I do not. I can see your uniform. But damn it, I don't know any too much about what is up myself. This is Red Fagin's outfit."

"I thought so. Where did he get you? How long have you been a prisoner?"

The boy laughed recklessly, his eyes upon the others.

"Well, my story is a short one, Lawrence. I had a fellow in the British service who occasionally gave me information. Word came to me to meet him at a certain spot."

"You mean Captain Grant?"

"Hell! How did you know that?"

"Never mind; I do know—so you can go on."

"I had no intention of speaking names."

"Oh, let that pass. You may think Grant all right, but the rest of us know he is at the bottom of the whole matter."

"You mean he betrayed me?"

"There is no doubt of it. He is in with Fagin."

The lad drew a long breath.

"I half suspected it," he said slowly, "only it didn't seem possible. Now listen, and perhaps together we can make something out of all this. I went to the place where we were to meet, and had a talk with Grant—yes, it was Grant all right. He told me some things, but needed a day or two to get other information. While waiting I came over here to Elmhurst, and found Claire. She's the kind of a girl you can tell things to, and I wrote out what I had learned, and left some of my papers. Then I went back to Lone Tree. It was dark when I got there, and I rode right into Fagin and three of his men. They had me before I could lift a hand."

"Just wait a minute, Mortimer," I broke in, becoming suddenly aware there was a grayness in the eastern sky. "I want to creep in toward the house while it remains dark. You can tell the rest as we go along. Tom, take these ropes and tie your man up. Make him safe, and then come along after us."

"All right, sir. I'll fix the lad so he'll be safe enough for a while."

CHAPTER XXX.

We Attain the House.

"Come on, Mortimer, and we'll soon find out what is going on." I turned to the prisoner. "Where are the rest of your gang?"

"You'll find out fer yerself, mister," he answered sullenly, "an' maybe damn quick too."

"They are in the grape arbor to the south of the house," broke in Eric. "That was where Fagin told them to lie quiet and wait orders."

"Then we will explore along the north side, keeping the fence between us. I've got a handful of men over there in the orchard. If you are both ready we'll go."

I took a look myself at Tom's ropetying, and found it satisfactory. Indeed, in remembrance of my own suffering, I even loosened the strain a little, confident the fellow could never free himself unaided. Then the three of us, Mortimer armed with his late guard's gun, crawled up over the edge of the bank, ran without stopping across the open space, and crouched in the shadow of the fence. It was still dark, although a faint gray tinged the eastern sky-line, barely perceptible through the intervening trees. The great house, a hundred yards away, was but a blurred outline, distinguishable by the lights shining out through open windows. At that distance no sound reached us. However, if Mortimer was right, the way would be clear for our passage along the front, under shelter of the fence, even though a sentry was posted there, and we could creep up to the walls on the opposite side unobserved. All we needed to do was to advance with caution. Whispering directions into the ears of the others, I moved forward slowly, Mortimer close to my shoulder. I could see across the top rail of the fence, and the open space beyond yielded no point of concealment.

"Tell me the rest of your story," I said, speaking softly, "as we go along. Where did Fagin take you?"

"To a sand cave; we rode a night and a day to get there."

"Treat you all right?"

"Well as he could, I suppose. I had enough to eat, but was guarded closely, and the fellows were a bit rough."

"Did you gain no inkling of what they were up to?"

"No; the men I saw knew nothing, or pretended not to. I only saw Fagin twice. Once he came to assure himself that I was really myself. Somebody told him I was with Delavan in a fight over near Lone Tree."

"That was your sister."

"What! You don't mean it was Claire?"

"But I do. I chanced to be in that affair myself, and saw her. Later she, with three others—Peter, an Indian, and an Irishman—captured me, mistaking me for some one else, and took me to Elmhurst. As soon as she learned my identity she acknowledged her error. But I have not learned yet why she was with Delavan, or for whom she mistook me."

The lad drew in his breath sharply, gripping me by the shoulder.

"By the Lord Harry!" he exclaimed excitedly. "There isn't another girl in the Colonies who would have done it. I'll bet I can explain, but even I didn't think she would ever have the nerve to perform such a deed. I told you I left my papers there. I forgot them where I changed my clothes. You see I came out wearing the uniform of a British dragoon lieutenant, and had it all planned out to join Delavan, and guide him toward Philadelphia over the Lone Tree road. Just before I left our camp at Valley Forge on this trip I received orders from Washington to keep my eyes open for a courier riding from Philadelphia to New York with Clinton's plans of evacuation. Hamilton seemed to know all about this, and sent me special instructions. I talked of it with Claire, planned how I was going to waylay him, and together we fixed up those servants as soldiers to help me carry out the deception."

He paused, chuckling, and I halted, eager to learn the rest.

"And when you disappeared; when, perhaps, she heard of your capture or suspected it, she assumed the discarded uniform and went forth in your stead."

"That's it, Lawrence. She would, if she thought it was right; if she believed such an act necessary to save my reputation. I'll bet she found the papers in my pocket, and mistook you for Clinton's dispatch bearer."

"There is no doubt of it," I said soberly. "And that wasn't all she did to protect you. It was the talk at Lee's headquarters that you had deserted. She stamped that a lie, by riding into our lines day before yesterday, bringing an exact report of where Clinton was marching. I didn't see her, but I heard all about it, and you get the credit. Washington told me with his own lips, and granted her permission to remove your father, who was badly wounded, to Elmhurst."

"Good God! Are they here now?"

"They must have reached here early yesterday morning. I passed them on the road at ten o'clock. Grant had just joined their party, claiming to be hunting after deserters."

He clung to the fence rail, staring out toward the house.

"Grant! Do you know, I believe that fellow is at the bottom of this whole affair. He's in love with Claire, and—and he's working some scheme to gain power over her."

"Several schemes, I think," I returned heartily. "I've nipped two of them in the bud already. Someway, Mortimer, he got possession of those instructions you received from Washington and Hamilton. I ran into him over there on the lawn, back of the summer-house. He was threatening Claire, trying to drive her into marrying him offhand. We had a bit of a fight, and I got the best of it. When I left I wore his coat, and later found your papers in his pocket. Do you remember how they were addressed?"

He shook his head.

"Simply 'Mortimer.' It occurred to me he could turn them over to Clinton, accuse the colonel of treason, and share in the confiscation of this estate, or else hold them as a threat over your sister. I burned them."

He was silent for a long minute; breathing hard; then he thrust out his hand and clasped mine.

TAX TO RAISE PRICES

PROTECTION IS MOST INSIDIOUS FORM OF PRIVILEGE.

This Saying of the Great Statesman Cavour Is Expounded in an Illuminating Way by Henry Herzberg.

That we shall have some kind of tariff revision is conceded. The main question is now, as always under such a prospect, whether it will be the kind that shall keep the promise to the ear and break it to the hope or the kind that satisfies hunger with fulness. The great statesman Cavour said that protection was the most insidious form of privilege. In the North American Review Henry Herzberg considers the "Fallacies of Protection" practically by expounding this saying of Cavour. There is room here for only the merest outline of part of the article, yet such a statement as follows should need no proof.

A tariff levied for purposes beyond the needs of public service economically administered is nothing other than a tribute or gratuity in which are oceans of possibilities for extortion, monopoly, industrial persecution and abridgement of individual liberty. Through this government bounty consumers are forced to pay a tribute to a legally protected class. It clothes those of one station with power to tyrannise over others, and lays taxes for private purposes. There is no warrant for this in the Constitution. Yet a decision could not be got against an act which on its face is to raise revenue and not to yield tribute, though we know that the whole protective system is for the latter rather than the former purpose.

So it comes to this: "A high tariff is a privilege granted by law the practical result of which is to raise the price of the daily necessaries of life." Unless it did this it would not be levied, for it is not done merely as a matter of form. Where do the protected classes get their gains but from increased prices of the things that they sell? Here are facts that go with this. The tax must yield something to every one—on cloth, for example, to the weaver, the importer, the clothier and so on, in the end reaching an increase on the cost of a suit starting with a tariff of $1.93 and ending with a total of $5.66.

The tariff board, in its report, said that on sixteen samples of cloth taxed 184 per cent. the prices in this country were 67 per cent. higher than in Europe. Yet in spite of the enormous tribute we pay to the wool industry the wages of the workers therein are extremely low and the industry is languishing after forty years of protection. In the cotton industry in many cases the duty is three times the total labor cost. In sugar the United States treasury gets a revenue of about $50,000,000 on imports, but on what is produced here it gets nothing and at the same time it gives about $60,000,000 annually to the producers, while the American people are forced to pay about $110,000,000 annually by the tariff or at the rate of $7.25 for each family.—Indianapolis News.

Shows Up the G. O. P.

The campaign receipts of the Third-Term party, according to a statement filed by Colonel Roosevelt's national committee, totaled $669,869. More than a third of that sum was contributed by two men—George W. Perkins and Frank A. Munsey. Thirteen enthusiasts furnished more than three-fourths of it. The donations of 18 followers of the colonel account for all but about $150,000. Probably no other presidential campaign in the country's history was so exclusively financed as was the colonel's. Under such circumstances the showing of Colonel Roosevelt's party emphasizes the sorry state to which the Republican party had fallen. It is evident the G. O. P. must live down its past before it can hope for a future.

Sooner the Better.

The uncertainty as to when the revision would come is now removed, but there was very little uncertainty after all that an extra session next spring would be part of the Wilson program. The overwhelming preponderance of opinion in the Democratic party, it appears, supports the course the president-elect has decided upon. And so far as business is concerned, the sooner the better.—Springfield Republican.

Mr. Hanna's Patriotism.

You can understand just how patriotically in earnest Mr. Hanna of Cleveland, and Mr. Timken of Canton were when you learn that they contributed more to the Progressive cause in that state than the whole campaign cost. There's nothing tightwaddish about Mr. Hanna when he thinks he sees a possibility of getting things performed the way he wants them performed.

People Do the Restricting.

There is pending in congress a measure to make the president's term six years, without any possibility of re-election. Colonel Roosevelt feels that the American people can be depended upon to restrict a man to a reasonable period of service as president.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

SALONIKI IN PAUL'S DAY

Turkish City That Has Had More Than 2,500 Years of Continuous History.

Saloniki.—The city we now call Saloniki has had a continuous history for more than 2,500 years, says a writer in the Christian Herald. Even before it was refounded and renamed by Alexander the Great, in the year 315 B. C., a city had existed on this beautiful gulf, facing mighty Mount Olympus. But its known history dates from this year, when Alexander rebuilt it and called it Thessalonica, after his sister, the wife of Cassander. It is said that Philip of Macedon named his daughter Thessalonica because on the day he heard of her birth he won a victory over the Thessalians. Thus the victory of Philip and the name of his daughter, the half-sister of the conqueror of the world, are all embalmed in the name of the city.

A great city with its harbor full of shipping, its white houses rising in tiers one above another from the edge of the water to the summit of the acropolis behind the city, and around all a white wall five miles in extent. Through the heart of the city stretched forth the great artery of trade, the Egnation way. At the eastern end it passed under a magnificent marble arch, which was built in honor of the victory of Octavius and Antony over Brutus and Cassius in the battle that took place on the plains of Philippi.

Fortunately for Thessalonica she had sided with the monarchists against the republicans in this battle, and when it was over both Antony and Caesar visited the city and commemorated their triumph by erecting the Arch of Victory, which remains to this day. Under this archway doubtless Paul and Silas passed many times during their somewhat lengthy stay in the city.

It has been my privilege more than once to visit Saloniki, to enter it from the sea as one journeys from Athens, and to leave by the route by which Paul entered it on his first visit. It is interesting to note the characteristics of the city, which are the same now as in Paul's time, as well as the changes which the centuries have wrought.

YOUNG HEAVIER AND TALLER

Washington Health Officer Lays the Fact to Open-Air Schools—Death Rate Is Lower.

Washington.—Heavier and taller children were the net results of the open-air schools of the District of Columbia, according to Health Officer William C. Woodward, who presented his anual report. Dr. Woodward dwelt at length on the advantages of pure air instruction over that given in the classroom and then, without any apparent attempt to criticise, declared that the United States government in its maintenance of its personally owned "fish and oyster wharf" here was maintaining "the most insanitary establishment in the District of Columbia for the preparation of food for sale."

The death rate, despite this, was falling so rapidly, according to Dr. Woodward, that the District soon would become one of the most healthful places in the country.

LARGEST WOMAN IS DEAD

Justin Masson of Canada Weighed 780 Pounds and Was Noted for Unusual Strength.

Montreal, Que.—Justin Masson, who weighted 780 pounds, and is said to have been the largest woman in the world, died here recently.

Several months ago she became insane and was taken in charge by the assistance publique. In the institution she became notorious for exploits of strength when in a frenzy.

Even the walls of her room failed to restrain her, and it was necessary to build a round house outside the main building especially for her.

A specially built coffin was necessary to inter the remains.

THE GENTLE CYNIC.

Woman is a creature of mood; generally the imperative mood.

If it's the unexpected that happens, why should it be unexpected?

If love is really a disease, it is the most contagious one on record.

The sins that pay no dividends are the ones that shocks the world.

Some people never enjoy good health, even when they have it.

The further a man can see the less is he apt to be sure he is right.

A man's idea of an ideal wife is one who believes everything he tells her.

Music hath charms, but it isn't the songbirds that make the best pot pies.

When a girl throws a fellow over he realizes that youth must have its fling.

We never realize how much it costs to visit friends till they return the visit.

Almost as many people have been spoiled by too much money as by too little.

Every man has his price, and it is generally about twice as much as he is worth.

CONSIDER THESE POINTS.

Far better the naked truth than an overdressed lie.

Two's company—unless they are husband and wife.

The harder a woman is to please the less a man will try.

Self-control is the one thing a man always has until he needs it.

Some men find it easier to make a good living than to make good.

No matter how fast a young man may be he can be overtaken by trouble.

When it comes to making a rapid change of opinion every woman is an expert.

He is a very particular man who insists on combing his own hair in a barber shop.

Some people waste a lot of time trying to devise cures for other people's bad habits.

Lots of penitentiary cells are occupied by men who believed in reform for revenue only.

A woman would like to have a good figure in order to show her contempt for those who haven't.

Nothing shocks a girl quite so much as hearing an elderly woman laugh over the love disappointment she had when young.

LAKE GENEVA, SWITZERLAND

It Is Lovable in Calm and in Storm, at Sunset, in the Twilight That Succeeds.

Berne.—Although the summer attractions of Switzerland are voted old-fashioned by those newly informed with the more modish taste for its winter sports, there are still a few of us who prefer its July to its January. The neiges d'antan have receded to the mountain tops, and the summer tourist is lazily content to leave them there, realizing that in the sweet of the year the lake shores are at their best. Of all the lakes that which washes the quays of Geneva, Lausanne, Evian and Montreaux, and the shores of two countries, is perhaps the most hackneyed, yet to myself—maybe from old associations; coetus dulces, valete!—it is the most lovable. There is varied lure in the curious variety of its scenery, half French and half Italian, geographically as well as politically in its primitive fishing and ancient sailing boats.

Its colors may be less chameleon in their changes than those of Tahoe, its trout less accessible to the angler than those of Lake Louise, its traditions less solemn than those of Gallilee, yet it is an inland sea that the traveler may learn to love for its own sake, even though it may not move him, like Rosseau, to drop his tears in it. Byron made verse on its shores, and here, too, Gibson finished his greatest work; yet such associations count for little in the sum of its magic. It is lovable in calm and in storm, at sunset, or in the twilight that succeeds. The long reflections of cumulous clouds seen of an afternoon from the hotel balcony at Evian are unforgettable.

The fisheries of Lake Geneva are unsatisfactory from the standpoint of sport. Of angling, properly speaking, there is none, save for small perch and roach, which are caught on long bamboo rods and coarse float tackle, with a worm.—The Field, London.

THE GOLDEN RULE

The Louisville & Nashville Railroad does not, and never has, taken the position that it is infallible.

It is an organization composed of human beings, with the human characteristics common to the people with whom it works and to whom it supplies service for the mutual benefit and advancement of the people and the railroad.

It wants to be considered on a basis of oneness with the people. It requests that consideration accorded by one fair individual to another fair individual.

Every precaution is taken to avoid mistakes, because mistakes are expensive to both the people and the L. & N. Are similar precautions taken by those individuals, careless of the welfare of their fellow-citizens, who denounce the L. & N. from one end of the state to the other?

The L. & N. had rather suffer imposition at the hands of an individual or state than to impose upon an individual or state. But it will exert every effort at its command to safe-guard the interests of its stockholders from unfair, selfish, designing individuals.

We are busy in our work of public service, and are willing to give in full measure of our co-operation for mutual advancement. We promise the people of Alabama the same measure of consideration we ask for ourselves. We believe a vast ma-ditor Press:—A few words ough your columns on the road stion and oblige. First, I want ay is, the public roads are the thing that the public needs, they can't travel without them. ow, last year the roads got in ighty bad fix—so bad that peo- could hardly travel them. The ne was laid on the Commis- ers and charged up to the ocratic party in the last cam- gn, which was wrong, for ex- ive rains was the cause.

entlemen, my judgment is that roads are in worse condition ay than they were during the st of last year. You may rge it to the democratic party in if you wish, but I say again, excessive rains is the princi- cause. But remember the mise made on the 21st day of January if they would return the old plan of working the ds. What is being done on the ds today? I don't know how it other places, but I don't know even one overseer that has hit lick on the road for some e, although the roads are al- st impassable. What we ought lo is to work the roads, but the stion is how will we work m? Some say issue bonds, e say no, that will place us in t and we will have to pay in- st. I don't know what plan ld be best to get the money. I one am ready to do anything will give us roads that we can l our produce over. I know men that live in 20 yards of the lic road that in front of their d gate is up to a wagon axle in d, and holes in the road that a e could be buried in, yet some them would go and vote against change in the old plan of work- the roads.

ow, in regard to the bond is- I don't know whether that is best or not, but if we don't do something and the rain continues much longer we can't travel them at all. I am like Mr. F.A. Gulledge, if it takes issuing bonds let us have them. If men who own as much property as does Mr. Gulledge don't mind paying interest to have roads, why should I and many others who have but little mind to pay our small mites in order to have good roads? Understand, that if we can have good roads without issuing bonds, come on with your plan and come now, for we need them now. The thing to do as I see it, is to not let a few politicians butt in and confuse the minds of the people and let us country people have to pull thro' the mud up to our wagon axle and our children be deprived of an education, for they can't get to the school house for the mud. I want to repeat that we should not listen to politicians on the road question.

Yours for good roads first, last and all the time.

Returns To Montgomery Jail For Safety.

Walter Lawhorn, the negro brute who attempted an assault upon Mrs. Elijah Arledge some days ago, and was captured by Deputies Smitherman and Fallon and subsequently carried to the Montgomery county jail for safe keeping, was brought to Clanton Monday morning for preliminary trial.

Deputies Smitherman and Van-Derveer went down to Montgomery on the early morning train to accompany Walter Lawhorn back to the county in which his crime was committed. It is said that, tho' Walter had on no top shirt, his body being protected by a heavy cotton undershirt only, he succeeded in getting up a first class "sweat" after leaving Verbena enroute to Clanton. It is presumed that, nearing the county seat where he was to be tried for his heinous crime, put the brute to thinking of the probable outcome of his dastardly attempt to ravish and that this was the cause of the ready perspiration.

Walter wash eavily manacled but walked the streets to the jail as if he were but an ordinary individual.

Immediately upon his arraignment he waived his case to the Grand Jury and was returned to jail.

Sheriff Jones, upon advice from several living in the Stumps Hills neighborhood, suggested to the Governor that it would probably not be safe to keep Lawhorn in Chilton county jail, as the "men folks" in the section where the crime was committed, were greatly "worked up" and that a probable lynching would take place if he remained too close by.

He was therefore returned to Montgomery and lodged in the "Hotel de Hood."

A "SUPERBA" UMPIRE

SCOTT CHESNUTT THE PEER OF THEM ALL

Genial, jovial Scott Chesnutt, who numbers his friends by the length of his acquaintanceship, has been spending some days with relatives in Clanton. Tho' he says Birmingham is the place of his domicile he still claims Clanton as his "home." For a number of years Scott has nursed an ambition to enter the practice of law and he says, when he does—which he vows, will be soon—evil doers needs must stand aloof. He wants no clients who are guilty of the charges brought against them to appeal to him for defense; he is constitutionally opposed to defending anything which has even the appearance of guilt. So great are the woes, calamities and willful wrongs of the world that he feels he will have his hands full protecting the right, defending the weak and guarding those in distress.

It is his ambition to become an umpire in the Southern League for one season, after which he proposes to devote himself entirely to the legal profession. By the way, Scott has an excellent past upon which to depend. He has made an enviable record in the Appalachian, the Carolina and the Cotton States Leagues as an umpire. Possessed of an attractive personality, a Websterian voice and the manners of a Chesterfield, he is well qualified to grace any baseball field upon which dignity, perfect equipoise, a thorough knowledge of the baseball laws and an ability to command and control men is required.

With all these qualifications added to his perfect honesty and sobriety Scotty Chesnutt stands an excellent chance of calling the strikes and balls in a class "A" league the coming season.

He deserves it and his friends would rejoice to see him arrive at the goal of his first ambition, as well as that of his second—to become a great constitutional lawyer—the defender of the rights of the people.

REV. S. M. ADAMS WRITES A LETTER HOME

Dade City, Fla., Jan. 4th.

Editor Press.

Having been asked by a few of my old neighbors and friends in Chilton to write them, permit me to ask the Press to publish this as a letter to all; first, I desire to say that the ties of friendship and good will can never be stronger in any other country than among my friends in Chilton, and, but for my health in winter I would not undertake to live in any other country.

We have not needed fire but on two or three occasions, and the men are in their shirt sleeves every day. This section of Florida is noted for good health, good water, good land, good churches, good schools and good people.

Thousands of acres of good land not cultivated, but few people farm regularly; they sell everything they raise and buy everything they consume, but, wherever you find a farmer who raises his own corn, hogs and cattle, that farmer is doing well. They do not feed dry cattle here in winter, and I have met one or two men that raise horses without ever feeding them a pound of hay or grain; but these are exceptions they are men who have fine pasture lands either on creeks or lakes.

We have a settlement of Northern people seven miles from Dade City called Zeffer Hill—the town is two years old and contains two thousand people, a high school, a bank, a newspaper, several good churches, water system, and in a word, it is an up-to-date town.

Dade City is the County seat of Pasco County, has a fine Court house, a high school with some half-dozen teachers.

Now, a word about myself: I bought the best 10 acres of hammock land that I could find in all South Florida, and paid $100 cash per acre for it. You can buy good land for $10 to $25 per acre, while the land I purchased adjoins the city limits, and is especially suited for growing oranges or citrus fruits. It will make 40 or 50 bushels of corn per acre, without fertilizer, and it will make all the sweet potatoes that a man will dig. The soil in this section is the native home of the sweet and Irish potatoes; in fact the land will make anything that a farmer cares to grow.

The farmers do not work much here—they hunt and fish and take life easy. If they worked here as they do in Chilton County they would get rich. The only reason that thousands who live in Alabama and Georgia do not come to this country is that they do not know about it. People come here on excursions and return, and see nothing but forest. They note the white sand and scrub palmetto, and then return kicking Florida. They never see or know that this State has thousands of acres of land with clay subsoil, and thousands of acres of hammock that is as rich as soil ever gets.

Dade City is 238 feet above the level of the sea, and is virtually clear of insects. With best wishes for you all, I am, as ever, yours.

S. M. Adams.

BADLY INJURED.

UNKNOWN NEGRO FELL FROM TRAIN.

A negro man whose name is unknown, but who in his unconscious remarks says his name is Evans Thompson, and that he lives at 428 John street, Birmingham, was found in an unconscious condition near the side of the L. & N. railroad track between Clanton and Lowndesboro Tuesday morning, was brought here by a road crew and placed in charge of Dr. N. S. Johnson, the surgeon for the L. & N. at this place.

It appears from the best information obtainable that the negro was attempting to "beat" his way—north or south is not known—and that he fell from the top of a freight car while it was in motion.

Evidently the negro was asleep at the time he fell and sustained injuries which rendered him unconscious.

Upon examination it was found that aside from his facial bruises, he had a fractured skull.

Some efforts were made to have the county care for the negro, but as there is no provision of law for such cases Judge Deason very properly refused to assume any responsibility in the case.

Dr. Johnson rendered the unfortunate negro all the aid possible and on Tuesday afternoon he was conveyed to Birmingham to be cared for by the railroad authorities.

RAILROADS AND PEOPLE

It is still the habit of the demagogue to perpetrate the friction between the people and the railroads. These office-hunters just keep on hounding and hounding and trying to excite the passion of the people as they did some years ago.

This continued agitation on their part bodes no good, either for the state or her people.

Railroads are civilizers. They are builders also; and the state which passes laws that come in direct conflict with the best interests of railroads is only furnishing a knife with which its own throat will be cut.

But for railroads south Alabama would be today not much more than a howling wilderness. The hundreds of towns in this section which now give every evidence of civilization, thrift aud progress, but for the advent of railroads, would be only a rendezvous for the hoot owl and the bat.

And yet these demagogues still, with their syringes filled with political self-aggrandizement, inject it into the minds of the masses in the hope that the masses will turn and smite their real benefactors—the railroads.

Railroad builders are only people who put their money together in the hope of making an interest on the investment. These people run more risk in the building and equipment of railroads than in any other business. And when there is added to this the spirit of venom and hatred that is nurtured by the wily politician, it is no wonder that many sections of the state are now lying dormant, with no prospect of improvement.

Capital, when invested in railroads, should receive the same degree of protection in law as any other sort of corporation, whether big or little. To deny this protection is to single out railroads, and on the pretext that they are public carriers, persecute them. This is unjust and when the people are apprised of the fact they will sit down hard on those who would pursue such unfair methods.

The Standard is in favor of railroads. We want to see railroads make money, for it is only by this method that any business can prosper and railroads are no exception to the rule. When railroads make money they spend money in the betterment and extension of their lines. When they do this they benefit every man woman and child anywhere in cannon-shot of the territory they traverse.

If the people of Alabama would put the railroads on the right then the railroads and the people would soon come together in unity and harmony, and, working together for the commonweal of all, Alabama would double in population within the next dozen years.

Let's silence the demagogues.

OLD FENNO HOUSE

Structure Erected in New England 208 Years Ago.

First Settler of Canton Astonished the Natives by Putting a Second Story Upon the Dwelling—Structure is Still Standing.

Canton—The Fenno house, on Farm street, Canton, is one of the venerable old dwelling houses of New England whose age is fully authenticated by documentary evidence as well as by family tradition. This rather small structure, two stories in height, painted red, and upon whose sides are still the original clapboards of 1704, was built 208 years ago by that John Fenno who was the original Stoughton, now Canton, settler of that name. It was John Fenno's father, also John Fenno, who was a resident of Old Dorchester, who purchased the Roger Clapp farm in 1694. This original Clapp property, which was a part of the lands of the Penkapoag tribe of Indians, contained 500 acres, and John Fenno bought the whole area for 100 pounds, or at the rate of five acres per pound. Upon this land, before a road of any description ran alongside of it or through it, the second John Fenno built this 1704 house, and he astonished the natives by putting a second story, a then unheard of luxury, to his new home. In this house there were born nine children who, with the wife and mother, who was Rachel Newcomb of Dedham, constituted the original family which lived on the premises. This second John Fenno died in 1761, and he was succeeded by Isaac, his son, who was born—in the same old house—in 1699. Isaac Fenno was twice married. His first wife was Hannah Puffer, who in 1731, died at the age of twenty-one and left a son and a daughter, Elizabeth—Mrs. Matthew Beck—and a junior Isaac. The second wife was Mary Miles of Canton, and she became the mother of three daughters. The son, Isaac, by the first wife, married Mary Davenport of Canton in 1754, and he made his home in the same old house, with his father, the first Isaac. But young Isaac was killed by falling from "a steeple of a meeting house" in October, 1762. Two sons were the fruits of this marriage of Isaac, the younger, with Mary Davenport, and both of them, Enoch and Elijah, became Revolutionary soldiers. Elijah was the son of a soldier veteran who maintained the family line in the old red house, for Elijah and his wife, Abigail Smith, became the parents of five children who were all doubtless rocked to sleep in the same old ancestral cradle which is still a part of the original furniture of the place. Among the five children of Elijah Fenno was Jesse, who was born in 1795. But Jesse, when he reached man's estate, while he chose to remain on the family farm, built for himself a new house in 1810, near the old red homestead, and which is today the abode of the descendants in the seventh generation of the original 1704 John Fenno. So far as known this 1704 house has not been regularly tenanted, at least by the Fennos, for a great many years.

Altogether this old 1704 family shelter is an interesting house for the inspection of antiquarians and all other persons whose attention might be attracted by the venerable landmark.

Mr. J. D. Sims of Fairview returned Monday afternoon from Montgomery whither he had been for some days past attending Federal court as a juror. J. D. says that, though present some days, there was no cases tried on account of the illness of Judge Jones. But one burr head was on the jury.

Quite an interesting meeting of the official Board of the Methodist church was held Monday night in the auditorium of the church.

SOUTH AMERICAN STATES MAY HELP

WILL BE ASKED TO JOIN WITH ALABAMA IN CENTENNIAL CELEBRATION.

WOULD HELP STATE'S TRADE

Centennial Committee Will Hold Meeting in Birmingham for Definite Action.

Montgomery.—Those South American nations lying on the Pacific coast obtained their freedom during the same year that Alabama was admitted into the Union, according to a State official, and it is probable that they will be asked to join this State in the celebration of its 100th anniversary in 1919.

In case Alabama holds a centennial exposition in 1919 these countries will be invited to take part in the affair and to erect buildings in which to display their exhibits.

It is also pointed out that direct communication by way of the Panama Canal will be established between Alabama and the Western coast of South America in 1919, and that by inviting these nations to celebrate in her centennial Alabama will establish cordial trade relations with them.

The leading countries who have enjoyed a century of freedom from the Spanish sovereignty are Bolivia, Peru, Colombia, Ecuador and Chile. These are the greatest nations on the Pacific side of South America and their trade means much to the United States.

General San Martin and General Bolivar were the two leaders who enabled the South American nations to obtain their freedom, and it is likely that tributes to their memory will be included in the general celebration in 1919.

A meeting of the state committee will be called for Birmingham sometime soon, at which time the question of holding the Alabama centennial will be finally decided. Birmingham and Montgomery are the leading contenders for the exposition, and a warm fight between them is expected at the Birmingham meeting.

Dr. Thomas M. Owen, chairman of the committee, says that no action has yet been taken by the Executive committee, but that something definite would be done within the next few days.

COMMERCIAL MEET AT MOBILE.

Arrangement is to Have Woodrow Wilson and President Taft Speak.

Montgomery.—Clarence J. Owens, managing director of the Southern Commercial Congress, spent a day in Montgomery endeavoring to make arrangements with both Governor O'Neal and F. G. Salter, president of the Business Men's League, for the annual meeting of the congress, which is to be held in Mobile in September.

President-elect Woodrow Wilson will preside over the deliberations of the congress, according to Mr. Owens. Mrs. Woodrow Wilson will be the leading spirit of the ladies' auxiliary, according to information. William Howard Taft, the President, will be the principal speaker.

Mr. Owens foresees the biggest Southern commercial meeting in the nation's history. He talked with Governor O'Neal on the subject and urged President Salter to have an amount appropriated for the meeting.

ROAD MEETING IN MONTGOMERY.

Following Session Highway Commission Holds Conference.

Montgomery.—John Craft, of Mobile, was the principal speaker at the second annual meeting of the Alabama Association of Highway Engineers, which was held at the capitol. Mr. Craft talked on road building in Alabama and the work of the State Highway Commission during the last two years.

Among the topics that were discussed are: "Bituminous Material in Road Construction," "Results from Use of Drag" and "Needed Legislation for Road Building."

W. S. Keller is president of the association, and Prof. G. N. Mitcham of Auburn is secretary.

Following the meeting of the association, the State Highway Commission held its quarterly session. At this meeting the quarterly report of the State Highway Engineer was read and contracts let during the last three months approved.

BROKE OUT IN HEAT RASH

822 Georgia Ave., East Nashville, Tenn.—"My baby was about two months old when he began to break out in small red pimples like heat rash, afterward turning into festers. They gradually spread until his little head, face, groins and chest, his head being most affected, became a mass of sores with a great deal of corruption. It became offensive and gradually grew worse. I kept a white cap on him to keep him from scratching, it seemed to itch so badly. It made him cross and his chest and groins would often bleed.

"Nothing seemed to help it, and I had almost come to the conclusion that my baby's case was hopeless, when hearing of the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, I decided to try it. I noticed at once that baby rested better. I continued it for a few weeks and my baby was entirely cured by the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. They cured where all others failed." (Signed) Mr. E. O. Women Avoid Operations

When a woman suffering from some form of feminine disorder is told that an operation is necessary, it of course frightens her.

The very thought of the hospital operating table and the surgeon's knife strikes terror to her heart, and no wonder. It is quite true that some of these troubles may reach a stage where an operation is the only resource, but thousands of women have avoided the necessity of an operation by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. This fact is attested by the grateful letters they write to us after their health has been restored.

These Two Women Prove Our Claim.

Cary, Maine.—"I feel it a duty I owe to all suffering women to tell what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. One year ago I found myself a terrible sufferer. I had pains in both sides and such a soreness I could scarcely straighten up at times. My back ached, I had no appetite and was so nervous I could not sleep, then I would be so tired mornings that I could scarcely get around. It seemed almost impossible to move or do a bit of work and I thought I never would be any better until I submitted to an operation. I commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and soon felt like a new woman. I had no pains, slept well, had good appetite and was fat and could do almost all my own work for a family of four. I shall always feel that I owe my good health to your medicine."—Mrs. HAYWARD SOWERS, Cary, Me.

Charlotte, N. C.—"I was in bad health for two years, with pains in both sides and was very nervous. If I even lifted a chair it would cause a hemorrhage. I had a growth which the doctor said was a tumor and I never would get well unless I had an operation. A friend advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I gladly say that I am now enjoying fine health and am the mother of a nice baby girl. You can use this letter to help other suffering women."—Mrs. ROSA SIMS, 16 Wyona St., Charlotte, N. C.

Now answer this question if you can. Why should a woman submit to a surgical operation without first giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial? You know that it has saved many others—why should it fail in your case?

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No one sick with woman's ailments does justice to herself if she does not try this famous medicine made from roots and herbs, it has restored so many suffering women to health.

Write to LYDIA E. PINKHAM MEDICINE CO. (CONFIDENTIAL) LYNN, MASS., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

DRIVEN FROM HOME BY WATERS OF OHIO

HOMELESS FAMILIES SHELTERED IN VACANT HOUSES AT LOUISVILLE, KY.

RAILROAD SERVICE IMPEDED

River Rises Over Sixty Feet at Cincinnati—Invades Territory of Surrounding Cities.

Louisville, Ky.—Between 700 and 1,000 families have been driven from their homes along the water front here in the past 24 hours by the rising waters of the Ohio.

The homeless families are being moved moved to vacant houses with the aid of the fire and police departments. The cellars and first floors of a number of store houses and business houses along the river front have been made

Railroad service throughout the state is impeded, though not suspended.

Dispatches from many points in the state tell of damage to homes and other property. Allen McKenney, a farmer near Hopkinsville, was drowned when his skiff, colliding with a submerged bridge pier, capsized in the swollen waters of Pond river.

Rises Sixty Feet.

Cincinnati.—The Ohio river passed the 60-foot stage here and continued to rise at the rate of two inches per hour. In the lower parts of the city and in Dayton, Newport and Covington, suburbs across the river in Kentucky, 2500 persons have been made temporarily homeless by the invading waters. In the Kentucky towns, school houses and churches have been thrown open and are filled with refugees. The property loss will reach into the thousands.

Cincinnati commission merchants and warehouse owners whose places of business are along the river front, have suffered heavy loss. In some buildings facing the warves the water is up to the second story.

VESSEL STRANDED ON SHORE.

Hurried Assistance Effects Rescue Without the Loss of a Single Life.

Halifax, N. S.—The steamer Uranium of the Uranium Steamship company, bound from Rotterdam for Halifax and New York, stranded on a reef during thick weather near the Chebucto Headlight station, nine miles below Halifax. Her 800 passengers, 100 in the cabin and the rest in the steerage, were taken off the steamer by the government steamer Lady Laurier and a small fleet of harbor craft and were safely landed at Halifax.

Although surf boats had to be used in transferring the hundreds of passengers to the rescue boats, the work was safely accomplished and not a life was lost.

There was much alarm, especially among the steerage passengers, when the ship struck, but officers and sailors succeeded in restoring calm. The lightkeeper at Chebucto, who had telephone communication with Halifax, sent immedi te news of the steamer's plight to the port authorities, who dispatched Lady Laurier, the steamer Bridgewater and several tugs to the scene.

Three surf boats from the life saving station and the life boats of the Uranium were used. The L dy Laurier took women and children first and then the men were transferred to the Bridgewater.

A heavy southeast wind was blowing when the Uranium ran ashore and the steamer was therefore fortunately protected by Chebucto Head. If the wind veers to the opposite direction the steamer will be exposed to the sweep of the Atlantic and in peril.

Lumberman Makes Reappearance.

Alexandria, La.—After being mourned as dead for more than three months and believed to be the victim of assassins bent upon robbery, Nelson McManus, a prominent lumberman of Jena, La., appeared at the home of his brother in this city. Leland Walker, of Pollock, La., after a "third degree" killing shortly after the disappearance of McManus, confessed that he and Robert Harp had murdered the lumberman and thrown his body into a creek near Jena. Harp was acquitted and the trial of Walker was to come off this week.

LAST OF THE MAINE.

Work of Removing Remnants of the Old Battleship Completed.

Washington.—The work of removing the last remnants of the wreck of the old battleship Maine and the mound of earth that gathered about it on the bottom of Havana harbor is completed. Colonel Balke of the corps of engineers, who was detailed to carry out the undertaking, has submitted a general report on the subject and a detailed account of expenditures will be forthcoming.

LEPERS ARE SLAIN ON FUNERAL PYRE

THIRTY-NINE PERSONS ARE DRIVEN INTO PIT AND SHOT AND BURNED.

WERE KILLED BY SOLDIERS

Bayonets Drive Them to Death Is Story of Chinese Atrocity.

Shanghai, China.—Thirty-nine lepers recently were put to death in an atrocious manner by order of the provincial authorities of Nanking, province of Kwang-Si. The sufferers were shot and their bodies were burned in a huge trench.

These advices were received here in letters from the Catholic mission at Nanking, dated December 14. They said the lepers lived in the woods a few miles outside of Nanking. The mission sought permission to build at its own expense a lazaretto for them and the provincial authorities pretending to consent dug a pit in which was placed wood soaked with kerosene.

At the point of the bayonet and lepers were driven into the pit and shot and the pyre was lighted and their bodies burned in the presence of a large crowd. The authorities offered rewards for the discovery of other lepers, and this resulted in the shooting of one man afflicted with the disease.

The governor, after the massacre, issued a proclamation in which he accused the lepers of having committed outrages. The letters from the mission say there is no foundation for this charge.

WHISKEY COST FORTY LIVES

Public Service Commission Places the Blame for Wreck.

Albany, N. Y.—The engineer had been drinking the night before and had slept less than three hours, hence the wreck on the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad at Corning, N. Y., last Independence day, in which forty persons lost their lives and seventy-five others were injured. The state public service commission so declared after a careful investigation.

William H. Schroeder, the engineer thus accused, was indicted for manslaughter, but never brought to trial, the indictment being dismissed upon motion of the district attorney.

"The primary cause of the wreck," reads the commission's report, "was the entire failure of Engineer Schroeder to observe signals. The train into which he ran was protected by a full stop signal 250 feet east of the rear of the train, by a flagman 2,550 feet east and by a caution signal nearly 4,500 feet east. All three signals were disregarded.

New York.—The will of the late Whitelaw Reid, ambassador to Great Britain and owner of the New York Tribune, leaves his entire estate with the exception of specific bequests of $110,000 to his widow, Elizabeth Mills Reid. The will, filed for probate in the surrogate court at White Plains, N. Y., makes Mrs. Reid sole executrix. Regarding the control of The Tribune the will says: "Should my son, Ogden Mills Reid, display capacity and aptitude for the work, it is my desire that he should ultimately succeed to the control of The Tribune, but this and the disposition of the property must be left to his mother."

Over $16,000,000 was added to the banking capital of the South by 308 new institutions in 1912. This total was compiled from official reports to that periodical by the banking departments of the several states and by the comptrollers of the currency at Washington.

Three Prominent Men Sentenced.

New York.—The three men found guilty of a million dollar wireless telephone and telegraph stock swindle were sentenced to the Federal penitentiary at Atlanta. The defendants were convicted of using the mails to defraud in selling stock of the Collins Wireless Telegraph Co. and the Continental Wireless Telephone Co.

LOST BEAUTY OF WOMEN

Can be Remedied, in Many Instances, According to Statement of Mrs. Lucile McElroy.

Laurel, Miss.—In a letter from this place, Mrs. Lucile McElroy says: "I was sick for three years, with backache, headache, pains in my stomach and back, low down. At times I could not do a thing, I was so weak.

After I was married, I thought I would try Cardui, the woman's tonic, and after using two or three bottles, I couldn't tell one day from another—felt good all the time.

I not only still use Cardui, but advise every lady I think needs it, to give it a trial, and several whom I have persuaded, say they have obtained great relief.

Another good thing I have noticed about Cardui is that it fills out hollows under the eyes, which are sunken as if from a bad spell of sickness. It freshens up a woman's eyes, and makes them look bright and plump. Many a woman would be pretty if it were not for her sunken-in eyes.

I believe that Cardui, the woman's tonic, is the only treatment for women."

Do you suffer from womanly trouble? If so, give Cardui, the woman's tonic, a trial.

Judging from the experience of a million other women who have been benefited by this remedy, it should surely do you good.

Why He Changed His Mind.

John L. Sullivan met with some amusing incidents while giving boxing lessons.

One day a husky young man came to him as a pupil. He took his boxing lesson and went home somewhat the worse for wear.

When he came for his second lesson he said: "Mr. Sullivan, it was my idea to learn enough about boxing from you to give a certain young gentleman a good licking. I've had it in for him a good while. But I've changed my mind. If you have no objections I'll send this young man down here to you to take the rest of my lessons for me."—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

Slopay received a card on which was engraved: "Professor Brace, Antiquarian."

"So I imagined. And how can I serve you?"

"By paying a deposit on this little bill you have owed for more than three years."

A HIDDEN DANGER

It is a duty of the kidneys to rid the blood of uric acid, an irritating poison that is constantly forming inside.

When the kidneys fail, uric acid causes rheumatic attacks, headaches, dizziness, gravel, urinary troubles, weak eyes, dropsy or heart disease.

Doan's Kidney Pills help the kidneys fight off uric acid—bringing new strength to weak kidneys and relief from backache and urinary ills.

Invalid Men and Women

I will give you FREE a sample of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets that have brought health and happiness to thousands—also a book on any chronic disease requested.

During many years of practice I have used numerous combinations of curative medicines for liver ills. I have kept a record of the result in case after case, so that my staff of physicians and surgeons, at the Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., are able to diagnose and treat cases at a distance with uniform good results.

But for the permanent relief of blood disorders and impurities, I can recommend my "Golden Medical Discovery" a blood medicine without alcohol or other injurious ingredients.
R. V. PIERCE, M.D., Buffalo, N. Y.

Nature's Way Is The Best

Buried deep in our American forest we find bloodroot, queen's root, mandrake and stone root, golden seal, Oregon grape root and cherrybark. Of these Dr. R. V. Pierce made a pure glyceric extract which has been favorably known for over forty years. He called it "GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY." This "Discovery" purifies the blood and tones up the stomach and the entire system in Nature's own way. It's just the tissue builder and tonic you require.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has the endorsement of many thousands that it has cured them of indigestion, dyspepsia and weak stomach, attended by sour risings, heartburn, foul breath, coated tongue, poor appetite, gnawing feeling in stomach, biliousness and kindred derangements of the stomach, liver and bowels.

"In coughs and hoarseness caused by bronchial, throat and lung affections, except consumption, the 'Golden Medical Discovery' is a most efficient remedy, especially in those obstinate, hang-on-coughs caused by irritation and congestion of the bronchial mucous membranes. The 'Discovery' is not so good for acute coughs arising from sudden colds, nor must it be expected to cure consumption in its advanced stages—no medicine will do that—but for all the obstinate, chronic coughs, which, if neglected, or badly treated, lead up to consumption, it is the best medicine that can be taken."

Mr. Wilson is still keeping the kitchen cabinet makers in the dark.

There is one consolation to be gotten out of the year 1913; but one Friday falls on the thirteenth and that is six months off yet.

A man who refuses to pay his poll tax cannot possibly believe in the education of children. Do you? Then why don't you pay YOUR poll tax?

There will probably be no election this year, but next year will be one of many elections, therefore, PAY YOUR POLL TAX NOW!

The old slogan "to the victors belong the spoils" seems not to obtain in Chilton; that may be one reason why the democrats have such a hard row to weed.

Next Sunday will be the 106th anniversary of the greatest of all warriors, Robt. E. Lee, of immortal fame.

At the risk of being called persistent we are going to ask again: What about that Eighteen thousand dollars? We want the people to remember that Eighteen thousand dollars.

Did you manage to save as much as $1.50 out of the wreck of Christmas festivities? If so, give it to the Tax Collector for POLL TAXES and save yourself much chagrin next year when your friend solicits your vote.

When is that old antiquated road working system to be put in operation? We understand that the roads need something, but, perhaps, after all, if the old system is to be used again it would be better just to wait till nature works the roads for us; old dame nature is a far better road builder than some human made systems.

Mr. Hugh Roberts of the Age-Herald was elected by the Alabama electoral college to carry the vote of this state to Washington. An honor well bestowed as well as genuinely deserved.

DO WITHOUT KING'S CONSENT

Several Modern Instances Where Royal Lovers Have Wedded Despite Opposition of Monarch.

The rumor which has recently been going about as to the contemplated second marriage of a widowed member of the royal family has given rise to some comments which are manifestly absurd.

It has been stated that such an alliance would be impossible without the king's consent, but although this is nominally the case in modern days there has been wide divergence between theory and practice, even in such countries as Russia and Spain, where the power of the sovereign as head of his family is, to say the least of it, as great as that of a British monarch.

For a whole year the Grand Duke Cyril of Russia pleaded to be allowed to marry Princess Victoria of Saxe-Coburg, ex-grand duchess of Hesse, and when he found the czar adamant on the subject he simply did without his consent, and the pair have lived happy ever after.

A year or two later the Infante Alfonso of Spain fell in love with another of the handsome Saxe-Coburgs, a younger sister of the Grand Duchess Cyril, and married her in the face of the absolute veto of King Alfonso. In both cases the bridegrooms were deprived of military rank and banished, which penalties have since been remitted.—Pall Mall Gazette.

DUST FROM HALLEY'S TAIL.

Dust from the tail of Halley's comet, according to M. Marchand of the Pic du Midi observatory, is responsible for the coronas that have frequently been seen around the moon in perfectly clear weather ever since May 19, 1911. It is well known that the angular size of a corona depends upon the size of the solid or liquid particles in the air which diffract the light; the smaller these particles, the larger the corona. Mr. Marchand's measurements indicated an average diameter for the dust particles of from 20 to 30 microns shortly after the passage of the comet's tail through our atmosphere. Since that time the size of the particles has decreased to about 0.5 micron.—Scientific American.

"WOMAN A CHRONICALLY CONSTIPATED ANIMAL"

French Scientist Makes Rude But True Statement.

It is a well-known fact that women are very much more subject to constipation than men. This is especially unfortunate for them, because women's internal organs are so much more delicate than men's. For this reason they should exercise the greatest care in selecting the laxatives they take.

In woman, neglected constipation frequently leads to many other more serious troubles which often wreck their entire health and happiness. No woman should ever allow herself to go for a single day without a good, healthy bowel movement. Sooner or later a terrible price must be paid for such neglect.

BEARLAX, liquid laxative, is especially adapted to the chronic, stubborn constipation with which the majority of women are afflicted. The taste of BEARLAX is pleasant to even delicate palates. It does not make you sick, its action is mild and gentle without griping or straining, and its after effects are pleasant, healthful and strengthening. A few doses of BEARLAX will put your liver and bowels in such a natural, active condition as to make you feel better than you have in months.

Price, 50 cents—money refunded if BEARLAX does not please you. On sale everywhere.

PUTS BLAME ON STEEL PEN

Englishman Says It Started Handwriting on the Way Toward Decadence and Neglect.

The decay of handwriting was the subject of a plaint by a correspondent recently in the London Times.

"The steel pen," he wrote, "was one factor in altering the style and legibility of writing, and the fountain pen, in some of its varieties, has proved to be a still more harmful machine. Typing certainly secures legibility, but that is not writing, and it is doing much to discourage the practice of calligraphy.

"There is good reason to believe that neat writing is neither taught nor even encouraged in our great secondary schools. Schoolmasters appear to accept any kind of bad writing. The average boy or girl now takes little or no pains to form letters. In other words, they do not write at all. Few parents or teachers appear to take any notice of this writing, and the letters of the last century, which were generally neat and legible, at the hands of both sexes, certainly put us to shame today."

This "laudator temporis acti" concluded by a curious prediction that posterity will have some severe comments to make on the handwriting of the twentieth century, remarks the Indianapolis News.

ROCKS CRADLE WITH HER TOE

Device of Kwakiutl Squaw Whereby Her Hands Are Left Free for Weaving.

Unique and probably the most primitive cradle rocking device ever seen or employed in any part of the world is the one that has been adopted by the matter-of-fact squaws of the Kwakiutl tribe of Indians now living on Vancouver island, British Columbia.

The mother performs the double duty of spinning and rocking her infant, snugly packed in a hollowed-out cradle stuffed with cedar bark strips, suspended from the limb of a sapling. This is about the most realistic and accurate representation of the old nursery song, "Rock-a-by, Baby, in the Tree Top," so far known.

The most striking part, however, is that of the Indian mother using her big toe as the motive power. With a cord attached to the bent limb and the other end wound around her toe, she swings her dangling offspring to and fro, leaving her hands entirely free for weaving.—Christian Herald.

MUST FACE THE MUSIC.

The action of the director of the Eastbourne Municipal orchestra, who varied the ordinary methods of the musical conductor by turning his back on his men while they were playing, was the subject of a long discussion at the meeting of the town council.

Councilor Eden moved that in future the musical director be requested to face his men while conducting the municipal band. No other conductor in England, he said, faced his audience, and it was utterly impossible for Mr. Henton to control the musicians in that way. The band ought to be conducted in proper English fashion. Eastbourne spent nearly $70,000 on its music, and it was too big a place to allow of trifling with the band.—London Chronicle.

NOT LOADED.

"So these two lovely men were in love with you?"
"Yes."
"And they really fought a duel about you?"
"Y-yes."
"Swords or pistols?"
"P-p-pistols!"
"How exciting! Were they loaded?"
"No. Both of 'em were sober."

VERSE WORTH READING

The Old Fishing Hole.

Give me a fish hook, a line, and a pole,
And let me dream by the old elm tree,
Down on the banks of the cool, deep hole
Where the ripples whisper and croon to me.
I love to watch the gay sunbeams prance
On the freckled brim where the branches swing,
And note the shadow ships flash and dance
In breezes of glee so bewildering.

While I whip the surface all silently,
The world and its angry roar seem dead.
Then peace, like a swan, broods over me
And joy is knit with a mystic thread.
The moments soar amid scenes supreme,
Where nymphs play peek-a-boo with my soul,
As through the air, like a rosy gleam,
I whisk a fish from the calm, deep hole.

A choir of crystal voices resounds
In quavers of music all serene,
And fancy rambles in joyful rounds
Through realms where visions frolic unseen.
You may have the city pomp and glee,
With its mazy tails of art and strife,
But give me the charm and harmony
By the old elm tree as my share in life.
—George Sands Johnson.

Let Us Be Glad.

Let us be glad
This little span called Life so soon is past,
Let us forget the fitful woes and tears,
The heartaches and the fears,
And just be glad.

Glad with the joy of Nature, as she weaves
Sweet dreams of beauty from the earth and sky
And clothes each flower with gentle witchery
And fragrance sweet.

Let us bring joy into our daily task
And so uplift it from the wear and tear
That bears us down;
May we be pleased with just the little things
That cheer our way.

Be it but smiling glance
Or friendly word,
A fragrant blossom, or the lilt of song,
A longed-for letter, an uplifting thought—
Let us be glad.
—Alice L. Hobbs, in Boston Transcript.

The Book Cure.

If all the earth is tinged with blue
And cheer-up verses hold no cheer,
If there is naught that seems to you
To hint of things that are not drear,
When life seems minus every rest—
Perchance your home is less a cook—
In short, when clouds weigh heaviest,
Forget your troubles in a book.

When Hopalong runs passing bad
Upon the muddy Juarez track.
When things for your pet nine are sad,
When hitters seem to lose their knack,
When that pet candidate of yours
Seems headed for a quiet nook,
Just try the surest of all cures—
Forget your troubles in a book.

We hold no real prescription right,
Nor sport the affix of M. D.
But these few lines we still indite
Because we think they ought to be;
Perchance they'll meet the gloomy eye
Of some chap with that lost dog look;
To such once more we raise the cry:
Forget your troubles in a book.
—From the Denver Republican.

I Sing the Battle.

I sing the song of the great clean guns that belch forth death at will.
"Ah, but the wailing mothers, the lifeless forms and still!"

I sing the song of the billowing flags, the bugles that cry before.
"Ah, but the skeletons flapping rags, the lips that speak no more!"

I sing the clash of bayonets, of sabres that flash and cleave.
"And wilt thou sing the maimed ones, too, that go with pinned-up sleeve?"

I sing acclaimed generals that bring the victory home.
"Ah, but the broken bodies that drip like honey-comb!"

I sing of hosts triumphant, long ranks of marching men.
"And wilt thou sing the shadowy hosts that never march again?"
—Hary Kemp, in the Forum.

When the Crop's All In.

When the crop's all in and the golden fields are bare
You whistle down your troubles, you wave your hand to Care.
A song of jubilation in the country, everywhere
When the crop—when the crop's allin
The roads, once hard to travel, have joyous, golden gleams,
The valleys join the chorus of the singing hills and streams,
And hear the merry drivers as they whistle to the teams
When the crop—when the crop'sall in.

Oh, you're thankful for the toiling—you bless your time and chance;
No more with sighs regretful to the Past you turn your glance;
Take down the old-time fiddle—the girls 'll come to dance
When the crop—when the crop's all in.
—Atlanta Constitution.

Julia.

Some ask'd me where the rubies grow,
And nothing did I say,
But with my finger pointed to
The lips of Julia.

Some ask'd how pearls did grow, and where;
Then spoke I to my girl,
To part her lips, and show'd them there
The quarelets of pearl.

One ask'd me where the roses grew;
I bade him not go seek,
But forthwith bade my Julia show
A bud in either cheek.
—Robert Herrick.

Miracles.

The pool was black and flanked around
With grasses rank and ugly weeds;
I shivered at the mournful sound
The night wind made among the reeds.

And yet the stars shone on that pool,
Upon its face I counted seven;
Its waters deathly grim and cool
Reflected all the face of heaven.

So have I seen a human thing
All-sinful, bowed unto the sod,
Whose soul still felt his ministering,
And mirrored clear the face of God.

MORGAN SOFTENS WITH AGE

Incident of the Church Collector Shows Great Banker Is Getting a Bit Milder.

John Pierpont Morgan—to give him all of his name—has softened and humanized of late years. He still has a roar that starts the ink in the office wells spouting like geysers, and can glare a hole through a chilled steel safe. But beneath the rough outer husk he is a pretty warm-hearted old man.

"He hasn't softened enough to spread," said an acquaintance, "but he is a blander banker than he used to be. The time was when solicitors, even for worthy objects, were protected by no office game law. Nowadays, if they get past the elephantine Celt at the door and attract the eye of the old man as he sits at his big desk overlooking the common corridor, they are fairly certain of a hearing. The other day a church collector ran the gauntlet, but by the time he had reached the last assistant secretary he had been reduced to a state of twittering palsy.

"'Bring him in,' Morgan ordered. The solicitor knockkneed his way into the presence. 'What do you want?'

"It was a study in stutters that the unfortunate offered. His cause was just, all right, but his vocal cords had jelled. Out of the mess of clicks and false starts Morgan learned that he wanted $200.

"'You should not have come to me,' said Morgan.

"The solicitor hopelessly agreed.

"'Never come in here again,' said Morgan.

"The solicitor's face brightened. That was one worry off his mind.

"'Now,' said Morgan, 'get out. Here is $500.'"—Chicago News.

GETTING IT DEFINED.

Old Newton, a well-known London magistrate, once had a crazy street-preacher before him, charged with obstructing the thoroughfare. He saw that he was a harmless imbecile, and, being a kind-hearted man, did not feel like punishing him, so he said: "Of course we can't have thoroughfares obstructed in this way; but if you can give me the name of a friend who will be your surety that there will be no recurrence of this nuisance, I'll discharge you." "I have no friend," said the man, "save the Lord." "Quite so," said old Newton; "but I mean a friend who is a householder in London." "The Lord," said the man, "is everywhere." "Certainly, certainly," said Newton, as he took a fresh pinch of snuff and twisted up his brow; "but I must trouble you for a surety of—well, of what I might call a more settled residence."

PROVIDING INSPIRATION.

"I want you to write me a play," said the great manager.

"On any especial line?"

"Yes. I have a lot of good press notices about some shows of mine that failed last season. They're too good to waste and I want you to write me up a drama that will fit them."

MY LADY OF DOUBT

BY RANDALL PARRISH

COPYRIGHT, A. C. McCLURG & CO., 1911

SYNOPSIS.

Major Lawrence, son of Judge Lawrence of Virginia, whose wife was a Lee, is sent on a perilous mission by Gen. Washington, just after the winter at Valley Forge. Disguised in a British uniform Lawrence arrives within the enemy's lines. The Major attends a great fete and saves the "Lady of the Blended Rose" from mob. He later meets the girl at a brilliant ball. Trouble is started over a waltz, and Lawrence is urged by his partner, Mistress Mortimer (The Lady of the Blended Rose), to make his escape. Lawrence is detected as a spy by Captain Grant of the British Army who agrees to a duel. The duel is stopped by Grant's friends and the spy makes a dash for liberty, swimming a river following a narrow escape. The Major arrives at the shop of a blacksmith, who is friendly, and knows the Lady of the Blended Rose. Captain Grant and rangers search blacksmith shop in vain for the spy. Lawrence joins the minute men. Grant and his train are captured by the minute men. Lawrence is made prisoner by an Indian and two white men, who lock him in a strong cell. Peter advises Lawrence not to attempt to escape as "some one" would send for him. Grant's appearance adds mystery to the combination of circumstances. Lawrence again meets the Lady of the Blended Rose, who informs him that he is in her house; and that she was in command of the party that captured him. The captive is thrust into a dark underground chamber when Captain Grant begins a search of the premises. After digging his way out, Lawrence finds the place deserted. Evidenec of a battle and a dead man across the threshold. Col. Mortimer, father of the Lady of the Blended Rose, finds his home in ruins. Capt. Grant insists that Lawrence be strung up at once. Miss Mortimer appears, explains the mystery and Lawrence is held a prisoner of war. Lawrence escapes through plans arranged by the Lady and sees Grant attack Miss Mortimer. Grant is knocked out by Lawrence, who comes to Miss Mortimer's relief and then makes his escape. Captain Grant's base villany revealed. Lawrence returns to Valley Forge, where learns more of Grant's perfidy. Washington forces Clinton at battle and Lawrence gets trace of Eric Mortimer. The battle of Monmouth. Gen. Washington again starts Lawrence on an important mission. Lawrence finds Miss Mortimer in soldiers' uniform, acting as scout. Explanations follow. Washington's dispatches are delievered to Gen. Arnold and Lawrence is assigned to special service of capturing Fagin. Eric Mortimer is found a prisoner of Fagin's, and released by Maj. Lawrence.

CHAPTER XXX—(Continued).

"The damned villain!" he ejaculated, his voice trembling. "Every move he has made has been an attempt to ruin us. I can see it now. Do you suppose Claire really cares for the fellow?"

"I am very sure she does not."

"Then what, in heaven's name, does she let him hang around for? I always hated the sight of his black face and infernal grin, but somehow, I thought she rather liked him. I wonder if he can be there now! If he is, then he and Fagin are up to some devilment."

"And what that may be we'll never discover by talking here," I put in sternly, suddenly realizing we were wasting time. "Come, let's get around to the north side."

We came in back of the summer-house, and had just left the road, when three horsemen galloped past, straight up to the front door, which stood wide open. The black shadow of a man appeared in the glow of light, shading his eyes as he looked out into the darkness.

"Is that you, Culver?"

"Yes," sullenly, the speaker swinging down from the saddle.

"Well, you've been a hell of a while getting here. Fagin will skin you alive; it's nearly daylight already."

"Did the best I could; the cantin' hypocrite wasn't at home; had to go clear to Medford after him. Come on now, get out o' that!"

He dragged the center figure roughly from his horse, and hustled him up the steps.

"The ol' fool thinks we're goin' to kill him, I reckon; been prayin' for an hour past. Bill got so mad he choked him twice, but it didn't do no good. Here, take him along in, will yer, and let us hustle some grub."

The man addressed grabbed the limp figure far from gently, and hustled him through the door. As the others disappeared, leading the three horses, Mortimer grasped my sleeve.

"That's Preacher Jenks," he whispered, "from down at the Cross Roads. What can Fagin want of him?"

"If Fagin is Grant's fool, and Grant is here," I answered soberly, "I am ready to make a guess at what is up." The recollection of the captain's threat at the summer-house instantly recurred to memory. "Here, you lads, skulk down into these bushes, while I try that balcony. That is the library, isn't it, Eric? I thought so; I've been under guard there twice. The window shows no light, but some one is in the room beyond. Give me a leg up, Tom, and stand close so you can hear if I speak."

It was not high from the ground, but I could not grip the top of the wall without help. With Tom's assistance I went over lightly enough, and without noise. The window was the one which had been broken during the first assault on the house, and never repaired. I found ample room for crawling through. The door into the hall stood partly ajar, a little light streaming through the crack, so I experienced no difficulty in moving about freely. A glance told me the apartment was unoccupied, although I heard the murmur of distant voices earnestly conversing. Occasionally an emphatic oath sounded clear and distinct. My first thought was that the men with me would be better concealed here than in the bushes below, and I leaned over the rail, and bade them join me. Within another minute the three of us were in the room intently listening. I stole across to the crack of the door. The hall was empty so far as I could see looking toward the rear of the house, and the voices we heard were evidently in the dining-room. Occasionally there was a clatter of dishes, or the scraping of a chair on the polished floor. One voice sang out an order to a servant, a nasal voice, slightly thickened by wine, and I wheeled about, gazing inquiringly into Mortimer's face.

"That's Grant," he said quickly, "and half drunk."

"I thought so; that's when he is really dangerous. Stay close here; if the hallway is clear I am going to get into the shadow there under the stairs. Have your weapons ready."

Where the fellow was who had been at the front door I could not determine. He had disappeared somehow, and I slipped along the wall for the necessary ten feet like a shadow, and crept in beneath the shelter of the staircase. From here I could look into the room opposite, although only a portion of the space was revealed. There was no cloth on the table, and but few dishes, but I counted a half-dozen bottles, mostly empty, and numerous glasses. Grant was at one end, his uniform dusty and stained, but his eyes alone betraying intoxication. Beside him was a tall, stoop-shouldered man, with matted beard, wearing the coat of a British Grenadier, but with all insignia of rank ripped from it. He had a mean mouth, and yellow, fang-like teeth were displayed whenever he spoke. Beyond this fellow, and only half seen from where I crouched, was a heavy-set individual, his face almost purple, with a thatch of uncombed red hair. He wore the cocked hat of a Dragoon, pushed to the back of his head, his feet were encased in long cavalry boots, crossed on the table, and he was pulling furiously at a pipe, the stem gripped firmly between his teeth. Who the bearded man might be I had no means of knowing, but this beauty was without doubt Fagin. I stared at him, fascinated, recalling the stories of his fiendish cruelty, my heart thumping violently, while my fingers gripped the butt of my pistol. Then, without warning, a man stepped out of the darkened parlor, passed within three feet of my hiding place, and stood within the dining-room door. The three within looked at him, and Fagin roared out:

"What is it now? Heard from Culver?"

CHAPTER XXXI.

They Send for Claire.

I could only see the fellow's back, with hair hanging low over the collar, but his voice was clear.

"Got here five minutes ago. The preacher is locked in the parlor."

"By God! Good! Now we can play out the game, eh, Captain? Or," turning about suspiciously, and staring at the other, who sat with eyes shaded by one hand, "are you weakening as the time draws near?"

"Hell's fire! No! We gave her a choice, and she only laughed at it. I'll go on now to spite the wench; only I think we should bring in the boy first, and prove to her that we've actually got him."

Fagin emptied the glass in his hand, giving utterance to an oath as he replaced it on the table.

"Yer as chicken-hearted drunk as sober, Grant," he said coarsely. "Did yer hear the fool, Jones, an' after all I've told him?"

The bearded man nodded silently, his eyes shifting from one face to the other. Fagin grinned, and poured out another drink.

"Now listen again," he went on, half angrily. "That boy's worth money ter us—a thousand, perhaps—but it wouldn't be yer any good ter us unless ye've got the girl, too. What would yer have in this estate, or fer yer commission either, if Howe or Clinton got an inklin' of yer game? Good Lord, man! they'd hang yer instead of the other fellow. You'll have ter lie some as it is, I reckon, ter explain why yer left Sir Henry, an' came down here. Have yer got that fact inter yer brains?"

Grant glared at him wickedly, but remained silent across the table.

"Yer already in bad enough, without huntin' more trouble. Better leave the boy alone. I thought, at first, we'd have ter use him, but I don't now. Let the girl believe he's deserted, and that yer in a position ter help him. That will serve yer purpose better than the other scheme. It may awaken her gratitude, her sweet love!"

"Damn her love!"

"So it isn't love, eh, that makes yer so anxious. I thought as much. What is it, then—revenge?"

Grant held his breath a moment, his dull eyes on the faces of the two men.

"Well, I might as well tell you," he snarled at last. "I loved her once, I guess; anyhow I wanted her badly enough. I want her now, but not in just the same way. I want to show her I'm the master. I want to give her a lesson, and that cub brother of hers. I'd have got them all, the Colonel with them, if that damned Colonial spy hadn't stolen my coat. I had them, dead to rights, Fagin, and the papers to prove it. Now I don't care how it's done, so I get her. I thought she'd marry me to save the boy, but if she won't, why then, you carry out your plan—what is it?"

Fagin laughed, again emptying his glass.

"Easy enough. She's alone, except fer her father, and he can't get out of bed. We've got Jenks here, an' the damned old coward will do whatever I tell him."

"But she despises me—"

"Oh, no! We'll make you a victim. That will leave things in proper shape between yer two. We'll play it off as a drunken lark—eh, Jones? My God! it won't be the first time we've done the trick either. Do you remember that love-sick couple over at Tom's River, Ned? Never laughed so much in my life. This is a better one. Lord! but won't old Mortimer rave, an' mighty little good it will do him. Come, what do yer say, Grant? Are yer game?"

"Hell's fire—yes." He got to his feet, gripping the back of his chair. "Bring—bring 'em in; this is a good place."

Fagin struck the table with his fist.

"Of course it is, drink ter the bride after the ceremony. Bill, bring in the preacher."

It was growing daylight. I could perceive the glow of the sky out through the window, but the candles still sputtered on the table, casting grim lights and shadows on the faces of the three men. As Bill disappeared into the parlor, I stole silently back to the library door.

"Tom," I whispered briefly, "find the boys, and bring them in here, through that broken window. They are in the orchard to the right, and there are no guards in front. Move lively, but be quiet."

"What is it, Major?" asked young Mortimer, eagerly.

"I can't explain now. I must get back where I can see and hear. But there is going to be a fight. Hold the men ready here until I call. See that their weapons are in good order."

I caught the glint of his eye, but could wait no longer. Indeed I was scarcely back, snuggled under the stairs, when Bill came forth, gripping the collar of his prisoner's coat, and urging him down the hall. I crouched lower, the morning light threatening to reveal my hiding place, yet with mind more at ease, now I knew the men were close at hand. Within five minutes the entire squad would be crowded into that room, eager for trouble to begin. Probably Fagin did not have a half-dozen fellows in the house. If we could strike swiftly enough we might overpower them all, without creating alarm outside, where the main body lay. Some carelessness had brought us good luck in having the front of the house left unguarded. These thoughts swept over me, and left me confident. The time had come when I was to serve her, to prove my own worthiness. I felt ready and eager for the trial.

I caught a glimpse of Jenks' face, as Bill jerked him forward. The man was gray with terror, his parchment-like skin seamed and corpulent. He was a tall, loose-jointed creature, stoop-shouldered, with matted hair hanging about his face. Better not say what she's wanted for. Just tell her Captain Grant wishes to speak to her a moment."

Jones straightened up, and pushed past the preacher, the stairs creaking under his weight as he went up over my head. Grant arose, and stood looking out the window into the glow of the sunshine, and Jenks dropped into the nearest chair, still staring across the table at Fagin. For the first time I seemed to entirely grasp the situation. I got to my feet, yet dare not move so much as a step, for Fagin was facing the hallway. It apparently would be better to wait until after the girl came down stairs, until those in the house were all together, before we struck. I wanted to know what she would say, how she would act, when she understood what was proposed. The time allowed me for decision was short, as it seemed scarcely a minute before I heard their his knees. The guard fairly held him up in the doorway, and both Fagin and Jones laughed at the pitiful sight, the former ending his roar with an outburst of profanity.

"Go on back ter the front door, Bill," he ordered roughly. "This fellow'll never run away; his legs wouldn't carry him. Now, Mr. Preacher," glowering savagely at the poor devil across the bottle-strewn table, "do yer know who I am?"

Jenks endeavored to answer, from the convulsive movement of his throat, but made no sound. Fagin cursed again.

"If it wasn't such a waste of good liquor I'd pour some of this down your gullet," he exclaimed, shaking a half-filled bottle in his fist. "Then maybe you could answer when I spoke to you. Now, see here, you canting old hypocrite, I'm Red Fagin, an' I guess you know what that means. I'm pisen, an' I don't like your style. Now you're goin' to do just what I tell you, or the boys will have a hangin' bee down in the ravine. Speak up, an' tell me what you propose to do."

Jenks wet his dry lips with his tongue, clinging to the sides of the door with both hands.

"What—what is it you wish of me?" his uncertain gaze wandering over the three faces, but coming back to Fagin.

"You are to marry this officer here to a young lady."

"What—what young lady?"

"Mortimer's daughter—Claire is the name, isn't it, Grant? Yes, Claire; you know her, I reckon."

I could hear the unfortunate man breathe in the silence, but Fagin's eyes threatened.

"Is—is she here?" he faltered helplessly. "Does she desire the—the ceremony?"

"That doesn't happen to be any of your business," broke in Fagin bluntly. "This is my affair, an' the fewer questions you ask the better. If we want some fun, what the hell have you got to do with it, you snivelling spoil-sport! I haven't asked either of them about it. I just decided it was time they got married. Stand up, man, and let go that door," he drew a derringer from his belt and flung it onto the table. "There's my authority—that, an' fifty hell-hounds outside wondering why I don't loot the house, an' be done. Do you want to be turned over to them? If you don't then speak up. Will you tie them, or not?"

Jenks' eyes wandered toward Jones, who stared blankly back at him, yellow fangs showing beneath his beard.

"Why—of course—yes," he faltered weakly. "I—suppose I must."

"Don't seem much chance to get out, does there, parson? Well, I reckon it won't hurt your conscience particularly. Bill! Where's Bill?"

"You sent him to guard the front door," explained Jones.

"That's right, I did. You'll do just as well. Go up stairs, an' bring the girl down. She's with the old man. an' Culberson is guarding the door.

CHAPTER XXXII.

A Threatened Marriage.

Fagin heard them coming and took his boots from the table, and sat up straight in his chair; the preacher pushed his back until half concealed behind the door; Grant never looked around. Jones came into view first, and behind him walked Claire, her cheeks flushed, her head held high. At the door she paused, refusing to enter, her eyes calmly surveying the occupants.

"You sent for me, sir," she said coldly. "May I ask for what purpose?"

Even Fagin's cool insolence was unable to withstand unmoved her beauty and her calmness of demeanor. Apparently he had never met her before, for, with face redder than ever, he got to his feet, half bowing, and stammering slightly.

"My name is Fagin, Mistress," he said, striving to retain his accustomed roughness. "I reckon you have heard of me."

"I have," proudly, her eyes meeting his, "and, therefore, wonder what your purpose may be in ordering me here. I wish to return to my father who requires my services."

The guerilla laughed, now angered by her manner.

"Well, I thought I'd tell you who I was so you wouldn't try any high-and mighty business," he said coarsely, and eying her fiercely. "That ain't the sort o' thing that goes with me, an' yer ain't the first one I've taken down a peg or two. However, I don't mean you no harm, only you'd better behave yourself. Yer know that man over there, don't yer?"

He indicated with a nod of the head, and Claire glanced in that direction, but without speaking.

"Well, can't you answer?"

"I recognize Captain Grant, if that is what you mean."

"I was speaking English, wasn't I? Yer ought to know him—yer engaged ter him, ain't yer?"

"Certainly not," indignantly.

Grant turned about, his face twitching.

"This is not my fault, Claire," he exclaimed swiftly. "Don't blame me for it. I am also a prisoner, and helpless."

She never looked at him, never answered, her entire attention concentrated on Fagin, who was grinning with enjoyment.

"That's sure right, young lady," he said grimly. "The Captain is only obeyin' orders ter save his own neck. There's no love lost atween us, let me tell yer. But we're not so blame merciless after all, an' I reckon, we've got about all thar is in the house worth cartin' away. Now we're goin' to have some fun, an' leave two happy hearts behind. Ain't that it, Jones? Clinton's licked; Washington has his hands full up north; an' this hull blame country is ours. Somewhere, Mistress, I've heard tell that you an' this Captain was pretty thick—how is it?"

Her eyes exhibited indignant surprise, but, after an instant's hesitation, her lips answered.

"I hardly know what you mean, sir. We were children together."

"An' engaged ter be married—eh?"

"There was an arrangement of that nature between our parents. But why should this interest you?"

He ignored the question, but his eyes hardened.

ARCHBALD FOUND GUILTY ON 5 COUNTS

SENATE FAILS TO MUSTER TWO-THIRDS ON 7TH AND 8TH CHARGES.

REMOVES JUDGE FROM BENCH

Conviction Comes as Conclusion of Impeachment Trial Which Has Been Pending Some Time.

Washington.—Robert W. Archbald of Scranton, Pa., for 29 years an occupant of judicial positions upon the Pennsylvania state bench, the federal district bench and the United States commerce court, was adjudged guilty by the United States Senate of "high crimes and misdemeanors," was stripped of his office and forever disqualified from holding positions of public honor or public trust.

The conviction and judgment came as the conclusion of the impeachment trial that has been pending in the Senate since last summer on charges that Judge Archbald had been guilty of misconduct and misbehavior as a judge and that he corruptly used his judicial power to further the private interests of himself and his friends and the acquisition of coal land properties in Pennsylvania.

Upon five of the 13 separate charges brought against him by the House of Representatives, Judge Archbald was found guilty. Upon the eight the Senate voted him not guilty, the majority in some cases being against him, but failing of the two-thirds necessary for conviction. Any one of the five verdicts of guilty was enough to bring about the punishment imposed upon him.

Sentence was imposed by Senator Bacon of Georgia, the presiding officer, after the Senate ahd, by a vote of 39 to 35, upheld a resolution offered by Senator O'Gorman of New York, authorizing the full penalty provided by the constitution.

"The Senate therefore do order and decree," said Senator Bacon, "and it is hereby adjudged that the respondent, Robert W. Archbald, circuit judge for the United States for the Third judicial circuit and designated to serve in the commerce court, be, and he is hereby removed from office, and that he be, and hereby is, forever disqualified to hold and enjoy any office of honor, trust or profit under the United States."

The sentence of the Senate became operative at once, and directions were given that the President and the House of Representatives be notified of the verdict and the punishment imposed.

Of the 10 men who have been impeached before the Senate since the organization of the government, Judge Archbald is the third to be convicted, and the only one convicted who appeared to make a personal defense against charges.

DIRECT WILL OF THE PEOPLE.

This Is How the President-Elect Interprets His Election.

Trenton, N. J.—Governor Wilson, for whom the majority of the states in the union officially cast their electoral votes for the presidency, proclaimed in a speech to the New Jersey presidential electors that he interpreted his election as the distinct expression of the progressive impulses of the country.

"I shall not be acting as a partisan when I pick out progressives and only progressives to aid me," the governor said in analyzing the spirit that he said had produced his election.

HOW TO CURE RHEUMATISM

Prominent Doctor's Best Prescription Easily Mixed at Home.

This simple and harmless formula has worked wonders for all who have tried it quickly curing chronic and acute rheumatism and backache. "From your druggist get one ounce of Toris compound (in original sealed package) and one ounce of syrup of Sarsaparilla compound. Take these two ingredients home and put them in a half pint of good whiskey. Shake the bottle and take a tablespoonful before each meal and at bed-time." Good results come after the first few doses. If your druggist does not have Toris compound in stock he will get it for you in a few hours from his wholesale house. Don't be influenced to take a patent medicine instead of this. Insist on having the genuine Toris compound in the original one-ounce, sealed yellow package. This was published here last winter and hundreds of the worst cases were cured by it in a short time. Published by the Globe Pharmaceutical laboratories of Chicago.

Timely.

Joseph Ettor, addressing the Little Falls strikers, cracked a timely joke.

"Let us emulate the firmness of the millionaire class," he said. "Our millionaires, you know, swear off at the beginning of each year, and infallibly keep their pledges."

"Aw, whata do they swear off?" a striker incredulously demanded.

"They swear off their personal property tax!" was the reply.

Suffer From Plague of Rats.

A "pied piper of Hamelin" is needed at Santa Paula, Cal. Thousands of rats, and all big wood rats, have invaded the place, and the situation is such that women are afraid to go to church. The rats seem to have a preference for churches and on several occasions have forced the feminine attendance at services to take to the high benches. The city authorities are seeking means to abate the pest. The rats are believed to have been driven out of the woods by recent fires in the forests.

DREADED TO EAT.
A Quaker Couple's Experience.

How many persons dread to eat their meals, although actually hungry nearly all the time!

Nature never intended this should be so, for we are given a thing called appetite that should guide us as to what the system needs at any time and can digest.

But we get in a hurry, swallow our food very much as we shovel coal into the furnace, and our sense of appetite becomes unnatural and perverted. Then we eat the wrong kind of food or eat too much, and there you are—indigestion and its accompanying miseries.

A Phila. lady said:

"My husband and I have been sick and nervous for 15 or 20 years from drinking coffee—feverish, indigestion, totally unfit, a good part of the time, for work or pleasure. We actually dreaded to eat our meals. (Tea is just as injurious, because it contains caffeine, the same drug found in coffee.)

"We tried doctors and patent medicines that counted up into hundreds of dollars, with little if any benefit.

"Accidentally, a small package of Postum came into my hands. I made some according to directions, with surprising results. We both liked it and have not used any coffee since.

"The dull feeling after meals has left us and we feel better every way. We are so well satisfied with Postum that we recommend it to our friends who have been made sick and nervous and miserable by coffee." Name given upon request. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Postum now comes in concentrated, powder form, called Instant Postum. It is prepared by stirring a level teaspoonful in a cup of hot water, adding sugar to taste, and enough cream to bring the color to golden brown.

Instant Postum is convenient; there's no waste; and the flavor is always uniform. Sold by grocers—15 cup tin 25 cts. 30 cup tin 50 cts.

HOLDEN LEAVES IOWA COLLEGE

The "Corn Man" Joins I H C Service Bureau.

TO HELP PUSH WORK FORWARD

Co-Operation Movement for Larger Crops, Better Roads, More Prosperous People and a Better Nation.

This marks the beginning of a new and greater business service. It is a co-operative movement for larger crops, better roads, happier homes, more prosperous people, and a richer and better nation. That is to say, the I H C Service Bureau proposes to help do for all the states and for Canada what Holden has done for Iowa.

After considering many offers, and after an investigation of the company and its works, Professor Perry G. Holden has entered the service of the I H C Service Bureau at Chicago.

Professor Holden is known wherever real agriculture is known. His whole life is one of service. He originated the idea of carrying information direct to farmers. He is the father of the demonstration train, short school courses, the corn show, county demonstration farms, and the National Corn Exposition. As head of the extension department of Iowa State College of Agriculture he did a work which, Senator Cummins says, up to the present time has increased the wealth of Iowa $30,000,000.

The object of the I H C Service Bureau is the promotion of agricultural education, and a co-operation which will tend to raise the whole tone of commercial, industrial and farm life. Since agriculture is the basis of prosperity and progress, naturally farm problems claim first attention. The aim is higher efficiency, both on and off the farm.

To do a big work a big organization is necessary. Not only the bigness, but the perfection of the International organization as well appealed to Professor Holden. The big general agencies, scattered all over the United States and Canada; the salesmen, travelers and expert machine men; the 40,000 dealers—every one, so far as possible, is to be made an apostle of better farming.

For years the International Harvester Company has realized the importance of service. It has spent millions of dollars in the perfection of labor-saving machines, and now the company is going in for direct service—direct to the farmers, and direct to the farmers' children, that the men and women of tomorrow may be more capable and so more prosperous than the men and women of today.

It is no longer a theory that if we are to get the most out of life we must raise more per acre. "Intensive farming" is in the air. It is the battle cry of peace and plenty. But raising more is the result of mind, not muscle. We must know. And not only that, we must know we know, and know why we know. We must know good seed from bad, right cultivation from wrong, and the whys and wherefors of climates, soils, fruits, cattle, horses, poultry, and so forth.

For these things the bureau was established. But the bureau and Professor Holden see more than an average increase of a few bushels. They see a time coming when farmers will raise twice as many bushels of corn, wheat and oats to the acre, and like yields of all other kinds of farm products. They see a time when farmers and farmers' wives and their children will think more and work less. Every bushel raised means just that much profit, and the profits of the farm promote commerce and industry.

After a period of good work in Michigan agricultural college, better work at Illinois, and a great work at Iowa, Professor Holden now enters upon a world's work. While in future Professor Holden will designate Chicago as home, he says he is not leaving Iowa—he is merely carrying Iowa to the rest of the world.

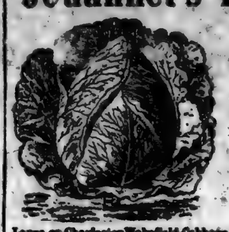
ODD FELLOWS' BANQUET

Saturday night last at the Clanton Cafe occurred the annual banquet of the Odd Fellow lodge of this city.

To say that those present enjoyed the occasion immensely would be but lightly expressing a truth.

There was a flow of wit and wisdom—but no intoxicants whatever. The menu, prepared by Mr. and Mrs. Davis has never been excelled, and but rarely equalled in these parts. A number of the friends of the order were invited to partake with them of the good things prepared.

Altogether it was one of the most enjoyable events of the season. The committee having the preparation of the affair in hand was composed of Messrs. Joe P. Gore, C. J. Davis, W. F. Teel, J. H. Duncan and J. M. Parrish, which, of itself would be sufficient guarantee that "all things went well" with those fortunate enough to be present.



FULL MEASURE

For those who enjoy reading or collecting curious epitaths here is one full eight quarts in measure which should find a place in the curio collection:—

Here lies a Peck, which some men say
Was first of all a Peck of clay;
This wrought with skill divine, while fresh,
Became a curious Peck of flesh.
Through various forms its Maker ran,
Then adding breath made Peck a man;
Full fifty years Peck felt life's troubles
Till death relieved a Peck of troubles;
Then fell poor Peck, as all things must,
And he lies—a Peck of dust.

RATES: A SUGGESTION

Not in a spirit of dictation, but simply as a suggestion, the Louisville & Nashville Railroad company points out a plan whereby an amicable and satisfactory agreement can be arrived at concerning the differences now existing between certain of the people of Alabama on the one hand and the L. & N. on the other hand.

The question of freight and passenger rates was made an issue in a political campaign. A majority of the people, without full information on which to base their decision, declared that they wanted certain radical reductions in rates put into effect. The details of carrying out their wishes were entrusted by the people to a group of state officials.

The reduction in rates was put into effect. The L. & N., knowing that such reduction would prove detrimental to the railroad and to the state, filed objection and took the matter into the courts where it properly belonged. The L. & N. contended that the proposed sweeping reduction in rates would entail serious financial loss to the railroad, with resultant decrease in its ability to render satisfactory service to which the people of Alabama were and are entitled.

After a thorough investigation conducted by Special Masters and the Federal Courts, at great expense to both the people and the L. & N., the position of the L. & N. was sustained. The property of the railroad and the service to the people were protected by a judicial decision.

There is now indication in certain quarters that the people will again be regaled with this question which has been settled in the courts. There is no reason to assume that the people will reject the findings of the Special Masters and the decision of the courts. Neither is there any reason to assume that if the people do reject the findings and the decision that the Special Masters and the court will change their position.

If the question is again injected as a political issue the same sharp division of opinion will result, with all the evil effects that acrimonious debate produces. Besides which the people will again be called on to bear the same enormous expense, with no doubt of the same result before the Special Masters and the Courts.

There is in existence in the United States a body second to none in the world in judicial acumen, irreproachable integrity, profoundness of learning and absolute fairness—the Supreme Court of the United States. Why not submit the question at issue to this tribunal for final decision?

The objection has been raised by those responsible for the condition that the expense would be too great. Already approximately $200,000 of the people's money has been expended in the effort. Are the people to lose whatever benefit may be derived from that enormous expenditure?

And will not a repetition of the question as a political issue entail approximately a like expenditure? And is there any guarantee that the people or the state treasury will be any better off, financially or commercially, than they now are?

On the other hand isn't it a fair presumption that the people's money will be wasted; that the service the L. & N. seeks to render the people will be seriously interfered with; that public dissension and ill feeling will result?

This suggestion is made in what we conceive to be the best interests of all concerned. The L. & N. welcomes an investigation by the Supreme Court of the United States, and will cheerfully abide any decision rendered by that tribunal.

Are those intent upon injecting this question into politics willing to abide a similar decision? If so, why not secure that decision, and if not willing to abide that decision, why not?

We respectfully request thoughtful public consideration of this simple suggestion.

VOL 3. CLANTON, ALA., THURSDAY JANUARY 23, 1913 NO. 31

ANALYSIS MADE OF CHILTON COUNTY

BUREAU OF SOILS REPORTS ON SURVEY NOW COMPLETED.

Washington, January 15.—(Special).—The report of the soil survey of Chilton county, Alabama, recently made by the bureau of soils in co-operation with the state department of agriculture, will soon be issued by the United States department of agriculture. The survey was made for the purpose of showing what crops the different types of soil of the county are best adapted to, and how they should be treated and what agricultural methods should be followed in order that the maximum crop yield per acre may be obtained.

The county comprises an area of 722 square miles, or 462,080 acres. The surface features of the county vary from gently rolling and rolling in the coastal plain portion to decidedly heavy and broken in the Piedmont section. The drainage of the uplands is ample to excessive, many of the steeper slopes, particularly of the Piedmont section, being badly eroded, but, there are large areas over which erosion has not done much serious damage, the slopes being smooth and well suited to cultivation. The first bottoms of the streams are subject to overflow and much of the land remains in a soggy condition between overflows. Here artificial drainage must be resorted to if good results of crops are to be obtained.

The stream terraces stand above overflow. They are flat to undulating and have good drainage in the main. The Coosa river, which forms nearly the entire eastern boundary of the county, with its tributaries, drains the eastern part of the county. Six large creek streams carry off the drainage of the remainder of the county. At present considerable interest is being manifested in the opportunities offered by the Coosa river for the development of electric power plants.

Accompanying the report is a soil and topography map showing not only the location and extent of the various soil types found in the county, but also the location of all farmhouses, churches, schools, public and private roads, streams and railroads in the county.

AREA IN CULTIVATION

About one-third of the area of the county is in cultivation and probably 90 per cent of the remainder is suitable. Three railroads traverse the county, making good transportation facilities. There is an excellent system of rural telephones over the county owned and operated by the farmers, and the rural free delivery service reaches a majority of the farms. Good schools are within reach of every home. The wagon roads, while not usually kept in good condition, can be easily improved with the abundance of good material at hand.

"For a farmer of small means," states the report, "the opportunities are excellent. The county is favored with a climate that insures the profitable cultivation of a very wide range of crops. The staple crops of both the north and south can be grown. Fruits and vegetables of all kinds thrive, and the winters are so mild that some crops make growth the year round. The annual rainfall is 52 inches and is well distributed throughout the year.

"The old practice of abandoning land which is locally termed 'worn out' has about disappeared," asserts the report, "and a system of crop rotation and fertilization have been introduced in order to maintain the productivity of the soils. he more progressive planters have begun to plant cowpeas, peanuts and oats upon their cotton lands, and such soils where examined were in a higher state of productivity than those planted year after year to cotton and corn only. The good effects of deep plowing, rotation and the use of the leguminous crops have been demonstrated in many instances, especially so on the Kalmia sandy loam and the Ruston sandy loam, where from one to one and one-quarter bales of cotton per acre is being produced. There are large areas of other soils equally as productive. Although there is much land in the county which, with good management, will yield from one to two bales of cotton per acre and give good yields of corn, cowpeas, hay and other crops, many of the farmers are slow to adopt the more intensive methods of farming. Too many of the farmers have been buying from the local merchants with the proceeds of their cotton crops supplies, such as corn, hay and meats, that could be produced profitably on the farm. Thousands of dollars worth of corn, meat and hay are imported annually which could be produced locally if the proper efforts were made and proper methods employed.

POSSIBILITIES OF CORN.

"While the average yield of corn is about 10 or 12 bushels per acre, there is no reason why this should not be doubled, or even trebled, without any extra cost save that of growing some of the leguminous crops in rotation with the cotton and corn. Although nearly every type of soil in the county is suited to the growing of grass and other forage crops, most of the hay used is purchased.

Cotton and corn comprise the chief crops produced in the county, with oats, sugar cane, sweet potatoes, cowpeas, peanuts and grasses for hay as secondary crops for home consumption. About 40 per cent of the land is farmed by tenants. The average value of farm land is about $20 per acre. Very little attention is given to stock raising. The supply of such commodities as meat, dairy and poultry products, hay and grain is insufficient to meet the needs of the county. Some attention is given to fruit and truck growing; strawberries, peaches, watermelons and cantaloupe being the principal products shipped. With favorable conditions and a steady demand these special crops should become more important."

TWENTY-ONE TYPES OF SOILS.

Twenty-one types of soils were encountered and mapped during the survey. Summarized the soils and their adaptation to crop production and money values are;

"The Orangeburg fine sandy loam is not found very extensively; the largest areas being developed on the southwestern part of the county. This soil is well adapted to general farming, giving excellent soy beans, vetch, clover and grasses.

"The Orangeburg sandy loam has excellent drainage, is a good agricultural soil, and, with the exception of the gullied areas, is practically all under cultivation, cotton and corn being the leading crops. Cowpeas, velvet beans, oats, peanuts, sweet and Irish potatoes, sugar cane and crimson clover do well. The soil is also suited to the growing of figs, peaches, plums and strawberries. This land sells at from $15 to $45 per acre.

"The Ruston sandy loam is extensively developed and is a valuable agricultural soil. It is easy to cultivate and keep in good condition. Corn, cotton, oats, peanuts, cowpeas, velvet beans, soy beans, vetch, watermelons, canteloupe, cucumbers, Irish and sweet potatoes, can be grown with moderate er. A number of early vegetables can also be grown successfully. This land is valued at from $15 to $40 per acre.

"The Ruston sandy loam has good drainage, and a considerable portion is under cultivation and is considered a good agricultural soil. Cotton, corn, oats, cowpeas, soy beans, vetch, strawberries, irish and sweet potatoes; peaches and plums can be successfully grown with moderate application of commercial fertilizers.

"The Ruston gravity sandy loam is subject to serious leaching, owing to its open structure; and this, together with the prevailing rough and rolling to hilly topography, renders it less valuable as a soil for agricultural purposes than the smoother textured Ruston types. It, however, has a sufficiently smooth surface to insure easy cultivtaion and good productiveness. With proper management, cotton, corn, oats, cowpeas, peanuts and sweet potatoes will give profitable yields. This type is valued at from $5 to $20 per acre.

"The Susquehanna fine sandy loam is cultivated to some extent to cotton and corn. The greater portion, however is uncultivated. With good seasons and proper management, including crop rotation, fair yields of both cotton and corn could be obtained. The value of this land ranges from $5 to $20 per acre.

"The Bibb sandy loam, by ditching and protection from overflow, could be used profitably for the production of sugarcane, corn and probably other crops, including oats and cowpeas.

"The Ocklocknee fine sandy loam is subject to overflow. A considerable portion is used for cotton, good average yields being secured without fertilization. In years of moderate rainfall there should be no trouble in obtaining 75 to 100 bushels of corn to the acre if properly supplied with organic matter, fertilized with 300 to 400 pounds of cotton seed meal and acid phosphate, per acre. It is considered a valuable soil, and cotton, corn, Johnson grass, Bermuda grass, cowpeas, oats, soy beans, sugar cane and sorghum could be profitably produced. This land is held at high prices for that reason.

"The Norfolk loamy sand is found in the extreme southern part of the county, and subject to heavy application of fertilizers, owing to its non-retentive qualities. It is best adapted to snap beans, sweet corn, cowpeas, peanuts, soy beans, velvet beans, watermelons, canteloupe, cucumbers, tomatoes, peaches, plums and figs. The value of this land ranges from $10 to $15 per acre.

"The Kalmia sandy loam is best adapted to the production of corn, oats and hay, and when good drainage is maintained, fair yields of cotton are obtained. This type retains fertilizers well and responds readily to their use. It can be improved by deep plowing in the fall and planting rotation crops. It is a good truck soil and is near enugh to markets to insure profitable returns. This type is valued at from $20 to $50 per acre.

The Cahaba sandy loam is found on stream terraces, at an elevation precluding overflow. Drainage is well established over the territory. It is a valuable agricultural soil, being especially suited to the production of cotton, corn, oats, cowpeas, vetch, soy beans, peanuts and sweet and Irish potatoes. This type is valued at from $20 to $50 per acre.

"The Bradley sandy loam is extensively developed, but the portion under cultivation is devoted to general farming. Cotton, corn and oats are grown, but only fair yields are obtained. This soil is better adapted to [illegible] type brings from $8 to $15 per acre.

"The Bradley gravity sandy loam is at present not under cultivation, and is not especialy adapted to any crop, but forestry should be encouraged. The value of this type of land depends upon the character of the standing timber.

"The Louisa loam is capable of improvement with proper management but at present produces only moderate yields of cotton and corn. The practice of rotation of crops, deep fall plowing and planting of winter cover crops and moderate application of commercial fertilizers is recommended.

The Louisa slate loam, under ordinary methods of farm management, gives fair yields of corn, oats and cowpeas; but with better treatment, including fall plowing and the occasional turning under of leguminous crops, especially cowpeas and burt clover, could be readily improved to the point of yielding three quarters of a bale of cotton and probably 25 bushels of corn to the acre. This land sells for about $10 per acre

"The York stony loam is of low agricultural value. While it could be used for the production of cotton and corn, it is best adapted to Bermuda grass pastures and forestry. This type ranges in value from $3 to $10 per acre.

"The Congaree silt loam occurrs in the bottoms of streams in the Piedmont section of the county, is subject to frequent overflows, and is poorly drained. When properly drained, however, good yields of corn and grass could be obtained without the use of commercial fertilizers."

OIL MILL LOCATED

CLANTON ON UP-GRADE

Clanton is soon to have an oil mill, if persistent rumors are to be relied upon, and, in this instance, they seem to be perfectly reliable.

From the best information obtainable, it appears that Mr. B. F. Barbour of Birmingham and Mr. Z. B. Lee of Crocket, Texas are principal spirits behind the movement. They were here some days since consulting with the business men of Clanton, trying to enlist their co-operation. To what extent they were successful remains to be seen. but, be that as it may, the gentlemen who are manageing the affair assert that the mill will be established, whether or not Clanton capital contribntes one dime.

Aside from the securing of another revenue manufacturer for the town, it will be a blessing to the farmers, in that it will enable them to secure the very best price for their surplus seed.

It is to be hoped that Messrs. Barbour and Lee will secure all the necessary encouragement.

COUNTY HEALTH OFFICER

GIVES WARNING INSTRUCTIONS TO ALL PERSONS WITH REFERENCE TO MENINGITIS.

Notice to the Public:

Since several well developed cases of meningitis have occurred within the county, in various sections of the county; and since the disease is pronounced by medical authorities to be contagious and infectious, it becomes my duty as County Health Officer, to notify and warn all persons to rigorously remain away from all suspicious cases of sickness (and to look upon every case of illness as suspicious till the attending physician has definitely declared the nature of the illness), as in cases where your attendance is absolutely necessary, you should exercise every precaution to prevent the spread of the disease, by avoiding social gatherings, church services or other places where the general public assemble.

If these instructions are obeyed to the letter, there will, perhaps, be no great danger of a spread of the epidemic and no occasion for rigid quarantine restrictions; but, if they are not obeyed, then it will become my duty, acting under instructions from Dr. Sanders, State Health Officer, to establish a strict quarantine in all infected districts.

This notice is not given to arbitrarily restrict the liberty of anyone; but in order that the general public may be protected and that a wide spread epidemic disease may be prevented.

Persons visiting or attending patients suffering with epidemic diseases have no right to endanger the life or health of others by mingling with them and thereby spreading the infection.

Visit no cases of sickness without having first consulted the attending physician and ascertained the nature of the illness; in the event it is reported infectious, contagious or even suspicious, remain away altogether or else refrain from going where others are liable to contract the disease from you.

Please obey these instructions and thereby save the Health Officers, county and state, an unpleasant duty and yourselves the liability of spreading a contagious and very fatal disease, and at the same time, perhaps, bringing upon yourselves and your loved ones a fatal sickness.

Respectfully,
V. J. Gragg,
County Health Officer.
Clanton, Jan. 20, 1913.

January 21, 1913

Dr. V. J. Gragg,
Chilton county Health Officer.
Clanton, Ala.

Dear Sir:

Yours of this date is before me and I note what you say in regard to an epidemic form of cerebro-spinal meningitis existing in different parts of Chilton county.

As Judge of Probate of this county, I assure you that the county authorities, as provided by law, will gladly co-operate and substantially support you in your efforts to stamp out and prevent the spread of the above named disease.

Respectfully,
E. B. DEASON,
Judge of Probate.

January 22, 1913

To Dr. V. J. Gragg,

Health Officer Chilton county, Alabama:—

You are hereby notified that the county authorities will enforce, under penalties prescribed by law, the necessary rules and regulations for the isolation and detention of any and all persons, within their jurisdiction, who are laboring under, or have been exposed to the disease known as cerebro-spinal meningitis.

"Dated this 22nd day of January, 1913.

E. B. DEASON,
Judge of Probate.

IN EPIDEMIC FORM

CARE SHOULD BE EXERCISED, EXCITEMENT SHOULD BE AVOIDED.

Two or three weeks since the PRESS announced in its columns that cerebro-spinal meningitis existed in Chilton county in epidemic form; at the same time and in the same article the PRESS stated that if proper precautions were taken there would probably be no county-wide spread of the disease. It admonished our people not to become excited or panic-stricken, as this is one of the very best methods of spreading the spread of [illegible] or dangerous disease, and it tried, as best it could, to show our people the necessity of refraining from promiscuous visiting of the sick. In other words, it used what little power and influence it had to avoid a spread of the disease and the creation of a panic. At that time the editor truthfully believed that the disease about which the physicians were disagreeing was nothing else than cerebro-spinal meningitis; the editor studied several medical text books on the subject in question to familiarize himself with the nature and symptoms of the disease, and he feels that he gained some knowledge on the subject.

Constituted as he is, he could not refrain from expressing some opinion and, invariably, that opinion was that meningitis existed in the county.

Several cases were under suspicion and not a little controversy was indulged in as to the symptoms, characteristics and duration of the disease. Particular cases were pointed out but the Press man strove to avoid mention of specific cases, believing that the physicians were better able to discuss these than any layman, however well he might have studied the text books.

The report that the disease existed in epidemic form in certain sections and localities aroused a general discussion; the Press man was accused of trying to create a panic in order that he might secure a few dollars out of the newspaper reports. This phase of the question had never entered his little brain; no money consideration ever influences a newspaper man if he is worthy of his calling.

When the discussion had gotten to the acute stage the Press man; feeling that he was somewhat responsible to the people for the part he had taken in the discussion; and anxious to let the people know just what was the disease over which the discussion arose, volunteered to accompany Dr. Gragg to the point where the disease was supposed to exist, and to make a personal investigation, at the risk of his own life, in order that he might inform the people, through his paper, of the truth or falsity of the reports existing. It was not a case of inquisitiveness on his part, or even of dare-devil bravery; he felt that he owed it to his readers and the general public, and he undertook the trip with that sole purpose in view.

His paper was held back one day in order that this personal investigation might be given to the public, and the alarm quieted, if possible, provided the investigation warranted it.

The public knows the result of that investigation; it was thorough, or as thorough as those making it could secure under the conditions. No case was found to exist in the place visited and it was so reported. Persistent rumors continued and some physicians and the newspaper man was still accused of trying to "get up a scare" over nothing.

So continual were these suggestions that both the physicians and the newspaper man "bided their time." Developments have shown that both were correct in the beginning.

A number of suspicious cases were reported but never determined—some recovered, some died and were buried. Other cases were reported and were taken under advisement—some of these were pronounced meningitis by Drs. Sanders and Moss, as well as by local physicians—others were passed as not being meningitis.

Other cases continued to be reported, but the Press refrained still from raising the cry lest it again be charged with attempting to make revenue out of the "scare of the people." It did, however,

ENLARGE EPISCOPAL HOME

Building Committee of Orphanage at Selma Discuss Erection of New Buildings.

Selma.—The church home building committee of the Episcopal diocese of Alabama convened in Selma on January 22, at St. Paul's Episcopal church and discussed at length the erection of new buildings for the orphan's home. This committee which consists of 15 members, was appointed at the last meeting of the council of the Episcopal church of Alabama and its purpose is that of raising a sufficient fund for the erection of new buildings for the church home for orphans, located at Mobile. This home was founded by the late lamented Bishop Wilmer and at present there is not room enough for the large number of orphans that are being cared for there. Among the members of the committee that attended the Selma meeting are Messrs. D. M. Drennen and Robert Jemison, of Birmingham, John E. Mitchell of Mobile, A. P. Agee of Anniston, Frank Stollenwerck of Montgomery and R. H. Mabry of Selma.

Declaring that he does not believe that the construction of a dam across the Coosa river by the Alabama Power company would be a matter of revenue or interest to the state of Alabama, and doubting the propriety of using his official position for the purpose of securing a federal franchise for a private corporation, Governor O'Neal declined to use his influence to induce President Taft to withdraw his veto to Senate bill 7343 providing for the construction of a dam at Lock 18. The governor's letter of declination was addressed to J. W. Worthington, at Washington, D. C., who is interested in the construction of a dam by the Alabama Power company at Lock 18, on the Coosa river.

The members of the Selma Suffrage Association held a meeting, at which time plans and arrangements for the holding in Selma of the sessions of the Alabama Equal Euffrage Association, which will convene on Wednesday, January 29, were gone into. H. Lister of the Louisville and Nashville delivered an address on sweet potato cultivation in Greenville, Jan.

Governor O'Neal announced that he has set aside the second Tuesday and Wednesday in each month as days on which he will hear petitions for paroles and pardons unless the matter is of extraordinary importance. Through the system now used, the Governor has been constantly beseiged by applicants for executive clemency, and he has been compelled to devote much of his time to the hearing of the pleas.

No lip osculations after February 1 in the public schools of Montgomery is the latest. After that date it will not be permissable for Miss Teacher to greet little Marguerite or Tommy in the morning with a resounding smack, nor may the other pupils extend that sort of salutation. A chaste peck on the cheek is not strictly barred, but it is discouraged. And the mouth-to-mouth brand of affection in the public schools is soon to be a relic of the past.

Start Your Baby With Sound Health

Regular Bowel Movement from Childhood on Forestalls Future Serious Diseases

We cannot all start life with the advantages of money, but every child born is entitled to the heritage of good health. Through unfortunate ignorance or carelessness in the feeding of a baby its tiny stomach may become deranged. The disorder spreads to the bowels and before the mother realizes it the two chief organs on which the infant's comfort and health depend are causing it great suffering. If the condition is allowed to continue grave ailments often result.

There is, however, no occasion for alarm, and the sensible thing to do—but it should be done instantly—is to give the baby a small dose of a mild laxative tonic. In the opinion of a great many people, among them such well-known persons as the parents of Dixie Dudley, Magnolia, Ark., the proper remedy is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Mrs. Earl Dudley writes: "Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the best medicine I ever used. It cured my baby of flatulency colic when the doctors failed; it cured my husband of constipation. My home shall never be without Syrup Pepsin." It is a pleasant-tasting laxative, which every person likes. It is mild, non-griping, and contains that most excellent of all digestants, pepsin.

This remedy is especially intended for infants, children, women, old people and all others to whom harsh cathartics, salt waters, pills, etc., are distressing. In fact, in the common disorders of life, such as constipation, liver trouble, indigestion, biliousness headaches, and the various other disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels nothing is more suitable than this mild laxative-tonic. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

Two generations of people are using it today, and thousands of families keep it constantly in the house, for every member of the family can use it. It can be obtained of any druggist at fifty cents or one dollar a bottle, the latter being the size bought by families who already know its value. Results are always guaranteed or money will be refunded.

If no member of your family has ever used Syrup Pepsin and you would like to make a personal trial of it before buying it in the regular way of a druggist, send your address—a postal will do—to W. B. Caldwell, 417 Washington St., Monticello, Ill., and a free sample bottle will be mailed you.

"Humph! I've kicked out many a one. Young fellow, I suppose?"

"No; past middle age."

"Well, these old codgers have no business to be coming round courting young girls. I would have kicked him out myself."

"Yes, but I have found out since that this man wasn't courting my daughter. He was after my mother-in-law."

HOW TO TREAT PIMPLES AND BLACKHEADS

For pimples and blackheads the following is a most effective and economical treatment: Gently smear the affected parts with Cuticura Ointment, on the end of the finger, but do not rub. Wash off the Cuticura Ointment in five minutes with Cuticura Soap and hot water and continue bathing for some minutes. This treatment is best on rising and retiring. At other times use Cuticura Soap freely for the toilet and bath, to assist in preventing inflammation, irritation and clogging of the pores, the common cause of pimples, blackheads, redness and roughness, yellow, oily, mothy and other unwholesome conditions of the skin.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston." Adv.

At the Democratic convention in Baltimore last summer two of the sergeants-at-arms were Ohioans, Col. John Bolan of Toledo and Capt. Joseph Dowling of Dayton. Bolan is the wit who laid down the maxim that "anny man who parts his hair in the middle is no Dimmycrat."

When Cardinal Gibbons had finished the opening prayer, he descended from the rostrum and made his way toward the door. As he neared the exit where the two Ohioans were on guard, Bolan whispered:

"Joe, touch him whin he passes ye."

FARMER'S WIFE ALMOST A WRECK

Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—Her Own Story.

Westwood, Md.—"I am a farmer's wife and do most of my own work when I am able. I had nervous spells, female weakness and terrible bearing down pains every month. I also suffered much with my right side. The pain started in my back and extended around my right side, and the doctor told me it was organic inflammation. I was sick every three weeks and had to stay in bed from two to four days.

"It is with great pleasure I tell you what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I have followed your directions as near as possible, and feel much better than I have felt for years. When I wrote you before I was almost a wreck. You can publish this letter if you like. It may help to strengthen the faith of some poor suffering woman."—Mrs. JOHN F. RICHARDS, Westwood, Maryland.

Women who suffer from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

SATISFACTORY GAIN IN TRADE

Business Sentiment Confident and Conservative.

New York.—Dun's review of trade says:

Trade in the important branches continues to show a satisfactory gain over last year in volume of transactions. Business sentiment, however, while confident, is conservative. A notable development is the increased activity in railroads. While track construction is at low ebb, the railroads are with conspicuous energy adding to their rolling stock and extending their terminal and other facilities.

Railroad earnings continue large, the record of gross earnings for the first week of January showing a gain of 11.6 per cent, the largest increase in over a year.

The copper trade is the only great industry which does not report current improvement. The dry goods market is more active than last year and the shoe trade also improves.

"The wheat and cotton markets displayed considerable irregularity. Foreign commerce statistics continue to make a remarkable exhibition of expansion in our trade with other countries."

PARDON FOR FOLK E. BRANDT.

Action Taken on Ground That Sentence for the Crime Was Excessive.

Albany, N. Y.—Folk T. Brandt, former valet of Mortimer Schiff, was pardoned on the ground that Brandt's sentence for 30 years on a charge of burglary was excessive. At the request of Governor Sulzer Attorney General Carmody made a statement in which he said he favored Brandt's pardon "not as a matter of mercy, but as a matter of correction and justice." He criticised the procedure through which Brandt was tried and sentenced. Mr. Carmody declared that the governor's action dissolved a blot on the judiciary of the commonwealth and showed that there "Is nothing that can defeat the ends of authority." Senator Knute Nelson of Minnesota made a speech in which he authoritatively charged Brandt's sentence as judicial tyranny. The governor explained that Brandt advocated leading a better life after his release from a cell.

POINCARE TO RULE FRANCE.

Will Succeed President Fallieres, Whose Term Expires Feb. 18.

Versailles.—Raymond Nicolas Landry Poincare, for the past 12 months premier of the French cabinet, was elected President of the republic of France by the national assembly, composed of the members of both chambers of parliament, in succession to President Armand Fallieres, whose seven-year term expires February 18.

The wildest confusion, out of which arose two challenges to duels, marked the casting of the ballots.

Premier Poincare was chosen President on the second ballot, his plurality over his nearest competitor, Jules Pams, minister of agriculture, being 187. The deciding vote stood as follows: Raymond Poincare, 483; Jules Pams, 296; Marie Edouard Vaillant, 69.

TO REDUCE TARIFF ON PAPER.

Cigars and Similar Articles Also To Figure in Tariff Revision.

Washington.—Substantial reduction of the tariff all along the line in the wood pulp and print paper schedule and retention of approximately the existing duties on tobacco, cigars and similar articles constitute part of the democratic tariff revision programme to be presented to the coming extra session of Congress. This was the situation as viewed by democratic leaders after two sessions in the marshalling of testimony on schedules M pulps, papers and books, and F, tobacco and its manufactures.

Just how far the democratic members will go in cutting the paper schedule is problematical. So far they have not had a conference on the subject, but the consensus of their sentiment favors reduction wherever possible in this part of the tariff law.

Amateur Palmist Had Other Lines of Information Which Aided Her In Revelations.

The fair amateur palmist looked at the left hand of the sweet girl long and earnestly. Breathlessly she waited for the palmist's next words.

OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

Miss Duncan, of Oklahoma, Makes New Plain Statements For Publication in Interest of Women.

Chapel, Okla.—"Please print this letter," writes Miss Mollie Duncan of this place, "as it may reach and help some poor suffering woman.

For 17 years I had been afflicted with womanly troubles, and had tried different treatments, but none of them helped me any. I suffered so much I could hardly bear it.

I had such drawing-down pains, and a pain in my side. Also headache and those awful dizzy spells. I was very weak, and could not be up, at times. I decided to try Cardui, the woman's tonic, and I will say I am not sorry that I did, for it helped me wonderfully. I feel like an entirely new person. I can wash all day now, and attend to my other household duties, and not feel tired when night comes.

I intend to keep Cardui in the house just as long as I live, for it has done me so much good."

Cardui is the ideal tonic remedy for women. Its ingredients are especially adapted for women's needs. It soothes pain, helps weakness, nervousness, dragging sensations, headache, backache and other symptoms of womanly trouble.

Cardui is purely vegetable, and has no bad after-effects. Is good for young and old.

"Yes," laughed the girl with the pink parasol, "he is the slowest young man I ever saw."

"In what way, dear?" asked his chum.

"Why, the goose took time to untie the knot."—Meek's Monthly.

Nice Distinction.

"Pa, what is patriot?"

"That depends, my son. In the time of George Washington, he was a man who walked barefoot on snow and ice to serve his country. Now he is one who does it by getting a job."

The Height of Absurdity.

"You scheme is foolish."

"Foolish?"

"Yes, sir, absolutely foolish. As foolish as—well, as foolish as the libretto of a grand opera."

Better Way.

"Does your wife raise a rumpus when you stay away from home at night?"

"No; but she does when I get home."

Some of the blame for the lies we tell ought to be charged up to the people who ask our candid opinion.

WHERE WE FIND EMERALDS

Famous Muzo Mines in the Republic of Colombia Produce Finest Gems.

The finest emeralds are found in the Republic of Colombia, at the famous Muzo mines in the department of Boyaca, seventy miles north by west of Bogota, which have been worked since 1558. The Spaniards mined there in the middle of the sixteenth century, but withdrew after a time, owing to continual fighting with the Indians; with the result that for awhile the locality of the mines was unknown. They are now worked by an English company, in partnership with the government. The emeralds at Muzo occur in calcite veins running through black carboniferous limestone in all directions and at all angles. Often the limestone is covered with earth, in which bushes and trees are growing; this has to be cleared before prospecting is possible. When calcite veins have been located, the side of the hill is dug away in "banks," usually by Indians, whose chief tool is a steel bar forged to a point at one end. The pieces of calcite vein are examined superficially for emeralds, and are then set aside for conveyance to the sorting-shed, where a detailed examination is made, and the emeralds are divided into fifteen grades according to color, transparency, size, freedom from flaws, and so on.

Mark Twain and T. R.

Augustus Thomas, the playwright, kept the mirth alive with story after story. One had reference to a game in which the players, so Mr. Thomas said, were Colonel Roosevelt, the late Mark Twain and himself.

"In the course of the game Colonel Roosevelt talked much of war," said Mr. Thomas. "And I remember him turning to Mark Twain and asking him if it were true that the bravest men were nervous when they faced the enemy, and Mark Twain, being an old confederate soldier, replied: 'Yes, that is quite true, for I remember vividly to this day that I had the quality of maintaining it all through the engagement.'"—New York Sun.

"No," said Mike, "ze genzelman has ze bill for you."

When the bill was produced the palm reader forgot his Hindoo ancestors and a stream of perfect English swear words poured from his lips.

"'Congratulate me! I am the happiest man alive!'

"I looked at him doubtfully.

Cleverness Required.

"In these days of high-cost living," said Representative De Forest, the sponsor of the bill for pensioning ex-presidents, "we hear of many queer economics.

"On a street car the other day, at the end of a discussion on saving and retrenchment, a lady said decisively:

"'Oh, any woman can cut her husband's hair; but, believe me, it takes a clever one to cut it so that other women's husbands will suspect nothing.'"

Analyzing the Philosopher.

Finley Peter Dunne was sympathizing, at a New York club, with a playwright whose play had failed.

"Brace up!" he cried. "Take it like a philosopher!"

Then Mr. Dunne smiled the whimsical Dooley smile and added:

"A philosopher is one who has trained himself to bear with perfect serenity the misfortunes of others."

Entered at the Post Office at Clanton, Ala., as second-class mail matter under act of Congress, March 3rd, 1879.

We are proud to note that Mr. Wilson has requested those in control of his inauguration services that they have no inaugural ball. Every one of his utterances since his election last November has shown him to be a man of the plain people.

Congressman Blackmon is now busy sending out flower and garden seed to the various schools and teachers of the county; should any of the teachers fail to receive a package of such seed, drop Mr. Blackmon a card and they will be forthcoming at once. Every teacher should prepare plats and use these seed; and in so doing, inculcate aesthetic principles in the minds of the children.

We are glad to see the RAINBOW people among our advertisers again this year. These brands of fertilizers are sold extensively throughout this section and are increasing in popularity each season. In analysis they lead everything in the state, running way over the guarantee, and quite a number of our readers use them and say they are the best to be had and want no others.

We heartily agree with Governf or O'Neal that one of the pressing questions of the day is "Rural Credits" for the farmer, The farmer can never come into his own until he is allowed the privilege o borrowing money for the improvement of his farm and the building of his house at the same rate it is given to the manufacturer or home builder of the city. It is a gross injustice to charge the farmer eight and ten per cent; and at the same time, with no better security, let the man of the city have it for four or six per cent. This will more than likely be a question before the next General Assembly of Alabama and we will need men of foresight, breadth of vision, and strong sympathies for the tillers of the soil to represent us in that body. In a month or so we are to have from the United States a company of sixty or seventy-five representative men to tour Europe and investigate rural credits over there, so we hope to bring it before our people again.

It seems that prohibition, like proverbial truth crushed to earth, will rise again. After spending the best talent and best time of one legislature in framing the Smith bill and Parks bill, which swung our state back into the local option column, prohibitionists were made to laugh in their sleeves when on last Saturday a report emanating from Anniston carried with it the fact-that the aforesaid liquor measures may be declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court Our course the bills were reviewed by the Court last year, but a new point of view has been brought to light by the argument in an automobile tax test case now before said Court. The automobile case in question it seems is one where the county and city are deprived from collecting a license after the owner had paid his state license This is said to be contrary to Section 221 of the State Constitution, which says the state shall have no power or right to fix a license payable to the State and at the same time to relieve the payer of his obligation to the county and city in which he lives.

While the Smith bill and Parks bill do not prohibit the collection of a local license they so state the amount of such license, thereby depriving the county and city the liberty of saying what would be equitable and right for them to collect. This is said to violate the spirit of the foregoing mentioned clause.

Mrs. A. R. Tabor, of Crider, Mo., had been troubled with sick headache for about five years, when she began taking Chamberlain's Tablets. She has taken two bottles of them and they have cured her. Sick headache is caused by a disordered stomach for which these tablets are especially intended. Try them, get well and stay well. Sold by All Dealers.

because it believed in the truthful ness of its report.

The fear of criticism did not deter us in what we considered a duty to the public. There was no arrest or imprisonment for having given out the report—Why? Because the report was true.

Now the schools are closed, families are leaving town and—since the horse is out of the stable, the door is being closed.

Again we rise to ask "When physicians disagree to whom shall the layman apply?"

We do not propose to go into detail now; we merely want to reiterate that the Press, being a newspaper, proposes to give the news even though it treads upon the toes of some folks.

BAPTIST HIGH SCHOOL

TO ESTABLISH IN CHILTON COUNTY

Within the past two weeks an incipient movement for the establishment of a Baptist High sohool in this county has been inaugurated.

Chilton County and Unity Associations are to combine, if the movement takes definite form, for the establishment of the school. It will be under the exclusive control of the Baptists of the two associations.

A committee of the two Associations was appointed some days ago to look into the feasibility of establishing the school and selecting a location. So far but two places have been considered—Clanton and Thorsby. A meeting of the two associations will be held within the coming few days at which delegates will be appointed to further the project and to take definite action in the establishment of the school.

Just now there is but little to to give out to the reading public, as the establishment of the school is in its embryo form. When definite action has been determined upon, the PRESS will give its readers all the information obtainable.

Finds Cure for Epilepsy After Years of Suffering

"My daughter was afflicted with epileptic fits for three years, the attacks coming every few weeks. We employed several doctors but they did her no good. About a year ago we heard of Dr. Miles' Nervine, and it certainly has proved a blessing to our little girl. She is now apparently cured and is enjoying the best of health. It is over a year since she has had a fit. We cannot speak too highly of Dr. Miles' Nervine."

MRS. FRANK ANDERSON,
Comfrey, Minn.

Thousands of children in the United States who are suffering from attacks of epilepsy are a burden and sorrow to their parents, who would give anything to restore health to the sufferers.

Dr. Miles' Nervine

is one of the best remedies known for this affliction. It has proven beneficial in thousands of cases and those who have used it have the greatest faith in it. It is not a "cure-all," but a reliable remedy for nervous diseases. You need not hesitate to give it a trial.

Sold by all Druggists. If the first bottle fails to benefit your money is returned.

AVOID CALOMEL AND SALIVATION

Use Bearlax for Torpid Liver.

Not only is calomel (chloride of mercury) a dangerous drug, but the relief it affords is entirely temporary, and soon you will become even more bilious than you were before. Calomel frequently salivates, and its continued use is liable to cause a softening or decay of some of the bones. Avoid it as you would any other poison.

The best and most satisfactory remedy for biliousness or constipation that you can possibly use is Bearlax, liquid laxative. This remedy is pleasant and agreeable to take, delightfully easy and sure in action and does not gripe or sicken. Bearlax is absolutely safe in every way. This vegetable preparation is nature's own remedy for removing bile from the system and strengthening and building up activity of liver and bowels.

Purchase a bottle of BEARLAX at once, and if you do not find it the best medicine of its kind you have ever used, your dealer will return your money without question. 50 cents per bottle—sold everywhere.

SYNOPSIS.

Major Lawrence, son of Judge Lawrance of Virginia, whose wife was a Lee, is sent on a perilous mission by Gen. Washington, just after the winter at Valley Forge. Disguised in a British uniform Lawrence arrives within the enemy's lines. The Major attends a great fete and saves the "Lady of the Blended Rose" from mob. He later meets the girl at a brilliant ball. Trouble is started over a waltz, and Lawrence is urged by his partner, Mistress Mortimer (The Lady of the Blended Rose), to make his escape. Lawrence is detected as a spy by Captain Grant of the British Army who agrees to a duel. The duel is stopped by Grant's friends and the spy makes a dash for liberty, swimming a river following a narrow escape. The Major arrives at the shop of a blacksmith, who is friendly, and knows the Lady of the Blended Rose. Captain Grant and rangers search blacksmith shop in vain for the spy. Lawrence joins the minute men. Grant and his train are captured by the minute men. Lawrence is made prisoner by an Indian and two white men, who lock him in a strong cell. Peter advises Lawrence not to attempt to escape as "some one" would send for him. Grant's appearance adds mystery to the combination of circumstances. Lawrence again meets the Lady of the Blended Rose, who informs him that he is in her house; and that she was in command of the party that captured him. The captive is thrust into a dark underground chamber when Captain Grant begins a search of the premises. After digging his way out, Lawrence finds the place deserted. Evidence of a battle and a dead man across the threshold. Col. Mortimer, father of the Lady of the Blended Rose, finds his home in ruins. Capt. Grant insists that Lawrence be strung up at once. Miss Mortimer appears, explains the mystery and Lawrence is held a prisoner of war. Lawrence escapes through plans arranged by the Lady and sees Grant attack Miss Mortimer. Grant is knocked out by Lawrence, who comes to Miss Mortimer's relief and then makes his escape. Captain Grant's base villany revealed. Lawrence returns to Valley Forge, where learns more of Grant's perfidy. Washington forces Clinton at battle and Lawrence gets trace of Eric Mortimer. The battle of Monmouth. Gen. Washington again starts Lawrence on an important mission. Lawrence finds Miss Mortimer in soldiers' uniform, acting as scout. Explanations follow. Washington's dispatches are delievered to Gen. Arnold and Lawrence is assigned to special service of capturing Fagin. Eric Mortimer is found a prisoner of Fagin's, and released by Maj. Lawrence. Guard is placed over Mortimer home. Grant and Fagin heard discussing plans to force Miss Mortimer to wed former.

CHAPTER XXXII.—(Continued.)

"I heard it this way. You were engaged until a few weeks ago. Then you met a damned Continental, a spy, an' imagined yer fell in love with him. Now de yer know what interest I've got? I'm with the Red-coats, an' if I can turn a trick fer that side I'm a-goin' ter do it. You'll be blessin' me fer it some day. Now, see here, girl, I'm a-goin' ter marry yer off before leavin' this house. I reckon yer ain't intendin' to make no fuss about it, are yer?"

She did not appear to comprehend, to realize the man was in earnest; she even smiled slightly.

"Is this some joke, sir, that I fail to grasp?" she asked. "Will you not explain?"

"Explain, hell!" and Fagin clapped his hat on his head, uttering a rough oath. "I spoke plain enough. Yer a-goin' ter marry Grant, here an' now, an' there's the parson, waitin' ter do the job."

She partly turned, and as she recognized Jenks, the color deserted her cheeks, and her hands grasped the side of the door for support.

"Marry Captain Grant! I?" she exclaimed, horrified. "No, never!"

"Oh, I guess yer will, my beauty. Good Lord, why not? He's not so bad; there's many a girl would jump at the chance. Your plantations join, an' he's a King's officer."

"Listen to me, sir," she broke in, now cool and determined. "I'll give you my answer. I have already given it to Captain Grant. I will not marry him—not even to save this house from destruction; not even to release my brother from your hands. We can suffer, if necessary, for we are of a fighting race, but I shall never yield to threats."

She swept past him, around the end of the table, and confronted Grant, who drew back a step, scowling.

"So this is your way, is it, to win a woman you cannot gain by fair means? No, there is no need of your answering; I understand the whole despicable scheme. You masquerading as a prisoner of this creature! You are his puppet. I've known it for months. I learned the truth from Eric, and from that moment I despised you. While I believed you an honorable soldier I was able to treat you with outward respect, but no longer. You threatened me with a forced marriage once before, and failed. Now you endeavor to succeed with the help of this outlaw. But you never shall! No, do not speak! do not hold out your hands to me! You are not a prisoner. These men are here at your instigation; you are concerned in their infamy. I would rather die than have you touch me!"

She turned her back upon him, her face white, her eyes blazing, but Fagin stood between her and the entrance, grinning savagely.

"Let me pass, sir; this is my father's house."

"Not while I am here, Mistress," he snarled, without moving. "The old man isn't ridin' after me with a squadron of cavalry today. This happens to be my turn to give orders, and yer to obey! Do yer hear—yer'll obey! Those were n't pretty words yer spoke to Grant, but they don't hurt me none. You damned little spitfire, I'd marry yer myself if I could, just to break yer spirit. As it is, I'll show yer yer master fer once. So it's the spy yer want, is it?"

She stared at him without a word, a depth of hatred but no fear in her level eyes.

"Lost yer tongue, have yer? Well, we'll find it fer yer fast enough. What's the fellow's name?"

"To whom do you refer?" she asked, her passage blocked.

"The Continental who's put Grant out of the running?"

"I presume you mean Major Lawrence, although no one has authority to couple my name with his."

"Oh, indeed! I'll show yer authority in plenty, Mistress. Come, now, I'm done discussing this matter. As long as yer father isn't able ter attend ter this affair I am a-goin' ter act in his place. We'll have a loyalist marriage, by God! an' have it now. Come, move, you coyote—Jones, hustle him along. Now, Captain, there's a good place ter stand, in between those windows. Mistress Claire—"

I was all ready, pistol in hand, burning with a determination to shoot Fagin down, yet her voice halted him.

"Wait!" she cried, standing erect and scornful. "I will not consent to this. I am going to leave this room."

"Oh, I reckon not," and he leered into her eyes. "Don't rouse me, or yer'll find out I'm a wolf ter bite. Yer get back there beside Grant, or I'll make yer."

"You will? You dare not!"

"Don't I, Mistress?" he cried savagely, "I'll show yer."

He reached forth one great hand, the fingers gripping her sleeve, but she wrenched away, the cloth tearing as she sprang back.

"Fagin, I know you, but I'm not afraid of you.—I know you for a cruel, cold-blooded murderer, an outrager of women, a thief, and an outlaw. No, you cannot stop me now. You are a low-down cowardly cur, making war on women and children, sneaking around in the paths of armies, plundering and looting the helpless. I despise you and every man associated with you. Neither you, nor all your company, can make me marry Captain Grant. I will die first. No, don't move, and don't think you are dealing with a frightened girl. I am desperate enough, but I can act—"

"Hell! Jones, take that hell-cat by the arms!"

"Jones will do nothing of the kind—and you—stand back, Fagin; don't dare to lay a hand on me again!"

Her face was white, her lips set, her eyes blazing, but Fagin, assured of her helplessness, laughed, and stepped forward. From what hidden concealment it came I know not, but there was the flash of a polished barrel, a sharp report, the whirl of smoke, and the brute went backward over a chair, crashing to the floor, with hands flung high over his head. I was aware of the swift rush of a body past me, of steps going up the stairs, and then, with a yell, my men poured out from the library into the hall.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

The Fight in the Hall.

Scarcely comprehending that Claire had escaped from the room, I was swept forward by the onrush of bodies. The preacher was knocked headlong beneath the table, but Fagin lay motionless underfoot. Jones and Grant turned to a door at the right, and I leaped after them. One of the two fired, and the ball struck my shoulder, the impact throwing me back against one of my men. An instant I felt sick and dizzy, yet realized I was not seriously hurt, and managed to stagger to my feet. The door was closed and locked, and, although my head reeled, I began to think clearly.

"The other way, lads!" I cried. "Quick, into the hall!"

We tumbled out through the narrow entrance, and I found myself next to Eric. But we were too late to head off the fugitives, or prevent their achieving their purpose. In through the rear door, confused as to what had occurred, yet shouting fiercely, poured Fagin's wolves, seeking trouble. They were a wild, rough-looking lot, ill-dressed, and dirty even in that dim light. For an instant, congested within the limits of the hallway, both sides paused, staring at each other in mutual surprise and hesitation. Then I heard Jones' bellow of command, and Grant's nasal voice profanely ordering them to come on. With us there remained no choice; we must fight it out where we were, regardless of numbers.

"Fire! you damned fools—fire!" roared Jones, and there was a crashing of guns, the dense smoke swirling between us. A Dragoon at my right went sprawling; another behind gave vent to a yell as he plunged head first down the basement stairs. There was the sound of splintering wood, of breaking glass. I felt the blood in my veins leap to the fever of it.

We were upon the fellows with a rush, firing in their very faces, and leaping madly at them. There was little room between the walls, barely space for a half-dozen to fight in, shoulder to shoulder, but those behind, eager to strike also, pressed up so recklessly that we hurled them back. To me it was all confusion, uproar, deadly fighting. I could think of nothing to right or left, only of the struggling devils in my front. Faces, forms, came and vanished in the swirl of smoke, brown gun-barrels whirled before me, flashes of fire burned my eyes, strange features, bearded, malignant, glared at me. I leaped straight at them, striking fiercely. Once I saw Grant, and aimed a blow at him. Then he was gone, swallowed in the ruck.

Our mad onrush swept them back, helpless, demoralized. I stumbled over bodies, slipped in pools of blood, yet kept my feet. Every muscle ached; I was cut and pounded, yet drove into the mass, shouting to those behind:

"Come on, lads! Come on! We're driving them!"

A yard, two yards, three—beyond the door where the men had escaped we won our way. Then they could go no further. Blocked, unable to retreat, wedged helplessly against the far end of the hall they turned like cornered rats. I could see nothing of Jones, but I heard him, raging like a fiend.

"Now, you curs, now!" he stormed. "You cowardly scum—perhaps you'll fight when you can't run! What are you afraid of? There's only a handful, you can chew 'em up, if you will! Push 'em back, there! Push 'em back!"

With a yell of rage, those crushed against the wall hurtled forward, driving the others; men were lifted and hurled at us; others gripped at our feet; by sheer force of numbers they swept us backward. It was hand to hand, neither side having time to reload their weapons. The smoke rose, permitting a view of the shambles. There was a tangle of arms, a jumble of faces. They were maddened beasts, desperate, revengeful. Hands clutched at us, gun butts were thrust into our faces, the crush too dense to permit of their being swung overhead. My Dragoons had their sabres out, and stood to it like men, the steel blades dripping as they tasted blood. But killing one only brought a new man to the front. One does not see so much as feel in such a jumble. Yet I knew we were worsted, outnumbered. They came at us like a battering ram. I saw the sergeant shot through the forehead; I saw Eric go down beneath a crushing stroke, and roll under my feet. I stepped on bodies, fighting for my own life as I never fought before. Somewhere I had gripped a gun out of dead fingers and swung it savagely, smashing the stock at the first blow, but retaining the twisted iron. The intensity of excitement seemed to clear my brain. I began to distinguish voices, to notice faces. I heard Grant yell safely in the rear; I heard Jones' roar, "To hell with 'em! To hell with 'em!" Out of the murk of struggling figures I made out his black beard, the gleam of yellow fangs, and leaped toward him, striking men down until I was able to swing at his head. He went over like a stricken ox under a butcher's ax, knocking aside two men as he fell. It gave me chance to spring out of the melee.

"To the stairs, men! The stairs!" I cried. "We can hold them there!"

I cannot describe now how we made it, but we did. I only know Tom and I held the rear, sweeping circles of death with our whirling gun-barrels, falling back step by step as we fought. At last I felt the bottom stairs with my foot, and heard a voice shout:

"Come up, sir! We'll hold 'em now!"

Then I was above the heads of the mob, gripping the rail, and sobbing for breath. There followed a moment's wait, an instant of hesitancy. I began to see and feel once more. Below in the hall was jammed with men, so closely pressed together as to be almost helpless. Blood streamed from a cut in my forehead, nearly blinding me, but I wiped it away, and took one glance at their angry upturned faces, and gained a glimpse of my own men. There were but six of us, and one of these lay helpless propped against the wall. Tom and I stood alone, his face blackened by powder, his shirt ripped into rags; the other three were above, pistols in hand.

"Are they loaded?" I gasped.

"Yes, sir."

"Stand ready then, but look out for above; there was a guard up there—Tom."

He turned his face slightly.

"Move back a step or two more; we've got to hold them."

"All right, sir."

I felt weak from loss of blood, my head reeling, and had to hold to the rail. Below us, growling like wild beasts, but seemingly leaderless, the mob crushed forward to the foot of the stairs. Suddenly I saw Grant, and the sight of him gave me new life.

"You black-faced hound," I called down angrily, "You've kept yourself safe so far. Now come on."

He snarled some answer, what, I know not. There was an empty pistol in my belt, and I flung it at him with all the force of my arm. He dodged, the weapon striking the man behind. With a howl of rage the fellows leaped toward us, bearing Grant on the crest of the wave. The pistols of the Dragoons cracked; three fell, blocking the stairs with their bodies. We had room now in which to swing our iron bars, and we battered them like demons. I lost sight of Grant, the red drip of blood over my eyes making all before me a mist. I only knew enough to strike. Yet fight as we would there was no holding them. We were forced to give way. Guns began to spit fire: I saw the wounded Dragoon dragged down under the feet of the mob; hands gripped my legs, and I kicked at the faces in my effort to tear loose. Tom reeled against the wall, his arm shattered by a blow, and one of the men above came tumbling over me, shot dead. The fall of him cleared the stairs an instant; then the rail broke, and several toppled over with it. I stumbled back almost to the top, sweeping the hair and blood out of my eyes. What—what was the matter? They were running, those fellows down there—struggling, fighting among themselves to get away. Oaths, yells, cries of sudden fear, made a perfect babel. I could not understand, could not grasp the meaning of the sudden panic. Who were those men surging in through the front door, pouring out through the library? Then a voice roared out:

"Bedad, they're Fagin's hell-hounds, byes—ter hell wid 'em!"

Where had I heard the voice before? I sank down, too weak to stand, my head hanging over the edge of the stairs. Some hand drew me back, but I had no strength left. Only I could think—and the truth came to me. Camden militia! Camden militia! By all the gods, Farrell was there! It was the voice of the Irish minute man I hear the night we captured Delavan's raiders. Then I closed my eyes, and forgot.

A Sharp Report, a Whirl of Smoke and the Brute Went Backward Over a Chair, Crashing to the Floor.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

Searching for Claire.

I was unconscious, yet not for long. The first touch of water served to revive me, and I became aware that an arm supported my head, although everything was indistinct before my eyes.

"More water, Mike," said a voice close at hand. "Yes, that will do. Where is Farrell? Oh, Dan, this is Major Lawrence."

"One of the Dragoons said he was in command. Hurt badly?"

"No, I think not; but utterly exhausted, and weak from loss of blood. They put up a game fight."

"Only three on their feet when we got in. Hullo, Lawrence, getting back to the world, lad?"

"Yes," I managed to answer, feeling strength enough to lift myself, and vaguely noticing his features. "Is that you, Farrell?"

"It certainly is," cheerfully. "Duval has his arm about you, and the Camden boys are herding those devils down below. You had some fracas from the way things look. How many men had you?"

I rubbed my head, endeavoring to recollect, staring down into the hall. It was filled with dead and wounded men, and at the foot of the stairs was a pile of bodies.

"Twelve, altogether," I replied finally. "They—they were too many for us."

"Three to one, or more, I should judge. We got here just in time."

I was up now, looking into their faces, slowly grasping the situation.

"Yes," I said, feeling the necessity of knowing. "How did it happen? What brought you? Washington—"

"All natural enough. Clinton got away night before last with what was left of his army. Left fires burning, and made a forced march to the ships at Sandy Hook. Left everything to save his troops. Washington, realizing the uselessness of holding them longer, sent most of his militia home. About six miles out there on the pike road a half-crazy preacher named Jenks came up with us. He was too badly frightened to tell a straight story, but we got out of him that there was a fight on here, and came over as fast as our horses would travel!" His eyes swept the hall. "Five minutes later would have been too late."

"But Farrell, the girl! Do you know anything about the girl?"

"What girl? Do you mean Claire Mortimer? Is she here?"

"Yes, her father is lying helplessly wounded up stairs, and she must be with him. Eric is somewhere in the hall, either dead or wounded. I saw him fall just as we retreated to the stairs."

Farrell leaned over and called to some one below.

"Not yet, sir," was the answer.

"Well, hunt for him. Now, we'll go up and find Claire. Major, can you climb the rest of the stairs? Help him, Duval."

Demand for Black Fox Skins.

According to government reports, there are only a few dozen genuine black fox skins in North America each year in the wild state and there is great demand for the skins in Europe. As the black puppies usually fall a prey to the red females in the wild state, the market is almost dependable upon the animals raised in captivity. A farm of twenty pairs of brown foxes should produce from 40 to 80 puppies in a year.

CUT OUT THIS AD.

MOLES AND WARTS

Removed with Molesoff, without pain or danger, no matter how large or how far raised above the surface of the skin. DISLIKE HIGH TARIFFS

ENGLISH PEOPLE ARE AGAINST PROTECTIVE POLICY.

Truth Is Revealed by the Futile Attempt of Bonar Law to Commit the Tory Party to That View.

Certain of our self-constituted political advisers assured us only a few years ago that England was on the eve of a return to the protective policy. This interesting prediction is contemporary with "the Russian advance," over which so much flowery rhetoric was spilled. Of course, it was pointed out by others that England was not likely to backtrack on the tariff question, since she could not afford the luxury of a protective tariff. But no such consideration had any weight with those who were sure that the British government was about to "take over" the Dingley bill. Our instructors had made up their minds that the thing was true—and, of course, that made it true.

We have had a good deal of light on the subject in the last few days. The leader of the Tory party, Mr. Law, made a speech in which he advocated a return to protectionism. The result must have been astonishing to Mr. Law. Before he spoke the Liberal party was wondering how long it would be able to maintain its hold on the government. Important by-elections had gone against it. There was strong opposition to the home rule bill. Lloyd-Georgeism had angered and disgusted many. At this juncture the Tory leader came to the rescue with his plea for protectionism. It split his own party, which has been likened to a defeated and routed army. Law's leadership is believed to be at an end. Even now the party is practically without a leader, as it is without a policy.

And all this has come from an attempt to commit a great party to protectionism. The people of England have listened for almost ten years to arguments in favor of taxed food. It was supposed that Joseph Chamberlain, with his scheme of imperial federation, had made great headway. High tariff shouters in this country, as we have seen, were sure that England had been converted to "the American idea." Now the end has come, and our cousins are still unconverted.

As a matter of fact, the tendency is away from high tariffs. In Germany the people are bitterly protesting against the protective taxes on food. We in this country have just been through a campaign in which the tariff was the leading issue, and on which the people voted against high protection. The demand here, as in other lands, is for cheaper food and clothing. It is, therefore, surprising that a man supposed to be fit to lead a great party, should thus set himself against what is practically a world opinion, and hope to win by so doing.—Indianapolis News.

WILL NOT THREATEN WILSON

Trust Magnates Cannot Terrify Him With Panic Talk as They Did Roosevelt.

In 1907, the steel trust said in substance to then President Roosevelt: "Give us permission to break the law and absorb our only dangerous competitor, or we will turn the present panic into a crash that will bankrupt the country!" Mr. Roosevelt trembled at the threat, and personally authorized the steel trust to break the law and take possession of the properties of the Tennessee Coal and Iron company at panic prices.

No trust magnate will ever dare go to Woodrow Wilson with a threat like that. The country's present prosperity proves that there is no possible excuse for a panic, and Mr. Wilson, as president, will see to it that no panic is manufactured for trust purposes.

Duty of Democrats in Senate.

The Democrats of the senate owe it to the party to make the senate organization represent the prevailing sentiment of the party, and thus enable it to work in harmony with the administration. To do this the rule of seniority should be ignored. Assignments to committees should be made upon the basis of fitness and with a view to giving faithful expression to the will of the majority. No Democrat is deserving of preferment who puts his personal interests above the general welfare. If our party is to have a long lease of power, it must regard the rights of the people as paramount.

Know What We Want.

Early consideration of the tariff is promised so as to be ready for a revision from top to bottom, according to Representative Underwood's idea. Col. George Harvey says that if the Democrats do not revise the tariff downward, they will be swept off the map. We all know what we mean and what we want.

Prompt Action Advisable.

Prompt action on the tariff and on such other questions as may be taken up at the extra session will be as beneficial to business as it will be to the executive. The uncertainty involved in a long, dragging session is probably worse than a few errors in reaching prompt conclusions. Let the president-elect make up his mind exactly what he wants, and, when he states to Washington let him go ahead to do it as quickly as conditions for such action will permit.

BREAKS A COLD IN A DAY

And Cures Any Cough That Is Curable. Noted Doctor's Formula.

"From your druggist get two ounces of Glycerine and half an ounce of Globe Pine Compound (Concentrated Pine). Take these two ingredients home and put them into a half pint of good whiskey. Take one to two teaspoonfuls after each meal and at bedtime. Smaller doses to children according to age." This is the best formula known to science. There are many cheaper preparations of large quantity, but it don't pay to experiment with a bad cold. Be sure to get only the genuine Globe Pine Compound (Concentrated Pine). Each half ounce bottle comes in a sealed tin screw-top case. If your druggist does not have it in stock he will get it quickly from his wholesale house. This has been published here every winter for six years and thousands of families know its value. Published by the Globe Pharmaceutical laboratories of Chicago.

UNKIND INFERENCE.

"My husband and I never quarrel." "Where does he live? In Europe?"

Something to Be Thankful For.

Michael Meehan was the proud possessor of a brand new silk high hat. At the wake of his dearest enemy he had guarded it carefully, and as a consequence was strolling home with the tile unscathed. As he passed the site of a building operation, a lady acquaintance nodded pleasantly.

With an ostentatious wave of the hat, which exhibited it to excellent advantage, Michael bowed. At the same moment a brick sailed down from an upper floor and bounced from his bared skull. Upon coming to he inquired anxiously for the hat. A bystander restored it unharmed. Mike felt the egg-sized lump on his head occasioned by the impact of the brick, and then regarded his undamaged tile. "Begorry," he sighed in satisfaction, "it's lucky it is I saw the loidy in toime!"

Queer Sex.

"Yes," said the man at the end of the bar, as he ordered his second drink, "women sure are queer creatures. I came home tonight and thought my wife looked a little down in the mouth. So I said: 'After supper let's go to the theater.' And she burst into tears and said: 'Me busy all day doing up preserves and you come home and ask me to go to the theater.' She was still crying when I came out. It beats all, doesn't it? Bartender, I think I'll take just one more."

For a Rubber Plant.

When the leaves turn yellow and fall off the plant is dying. Feed it a tablespoonful of olive oil every two weeks. Also wash the plant once a week with warm soapsuds, letting the warm suds moisten the earth thoroughly. Sprinkle every other day. This same treatment should be used on ferns.

Snocks.

"Why do you refer to that orator as the human high explosive?"

"Because he is always getting the uplift confused with the outburst."

Partial Success.

"Do you believe in those faith cures?"

"Oh, I have known some that cured faith in them."

Proper Help.

"The steamer I sailed in was a floating hotel."

"Did it employ any bell buoys?"

A GOOD BREAKFAST.

Some Persons Never Know What It Means.

A good breakfast, a good appetite and good digestion mean everything to the man, woman or child who has anything to do, and wants to get a good start toward doing it.

A Mo. man tells of his wife's "good breakfast" and also supper, made out of Grape-Nuts and cream. He says:

"I should like to tell you how much good Grape-Nuts has done for my wife. After being in poor health for the last 15 years, during part of the time scarcely anything would stay on her stomach long enough to nourish her, finally at the suggestion of a friend she tried Grape-Nuts.

"Now, after about four weeks on this delicious and nutritious food, she has picked up most wonderfully and seems as well as anyone can be.

"Every morning she makes a good breakfast on Grape-Nuts eaten just as it comes from the package with cream or milk added; and then again the same at supper and the change in her is wonderful.

"We can't speak too highly of Grape-Nuts as a food after our remarkable experience." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read the little book "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

FREIGHT RATE DISCRIMINATION AND ARBITRARY CLASSIFICATION OF RAILROADS

The general public, whose support has been solicited for certain radical policies detrimental to the Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company, has little conception of the serious and extreme discrimination practiced by certain former state officials against the L. & N. Even a casual investigation will demonstrate the maladministration of the One Hundred and Ten Commodity Rate Act, and disclose a condition which we are quite sure no reasonably fair minded man ever expected to produce.

We therefore request and urge a careful reading of this statement, because it will present in outline the seriousness of the financial losses sustained and liable to be sustained by the L. & N., with resultant detriment to its ability to render the service to which the people of Alabama are entitled, and so interfere with its effort to co-operate in the development of the rich natural resources of the state.

At the regular session of the State Legislature of Alabama held in 1907 a schedule of rates was prepared and enacted into law making a standard scale of rates to be used by the various railroads within the State of Alabama on One Hundred and Ten Commodities.

The act provided that certain lines of railway might charge on the greater number of these commodities a certain percentage over and above the standard scale, while other lines were required to charge the flat scale of standard rates. The railways operating in the state were therefore divided into classes, known as Class 1, 2, 3 and 4. Those railroads in Class 1 were required to charge the standard scale of rates. The Class 1 railroads were the Alabama Great Southern, The Louisville & Nashville Railroad, The Western Railway of Alabama, The St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad and the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad.

Class 2 was composed of the Southern Railway, Central of Georgia Railroad, the Seaboard Air Line Railway, Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis Railway and the Atlanta & Birmingham Air Line, the latter being a part of the Seaboard System. These Class 2 railroads were authorized to charge the standard rates plus 20 per cent on the greater number of the One Hundred and Ten Commodities.

Class 3 was composed of the Chattanooga Southern Railroad, The Illinois Central Railroad, The Mobile & Ohio Railroad and the Mobile, Jackson & Kansas City Railroad. These roads were allowed to charge the standard rate plus 25 per cent.

Class 4 was composed of short line roads authorized to charge on the greater number of the One Hundred and Ten Commodities the standard rates, plus 50 per cent.

Much discrimination was practiced not only in the classification of the railroads, but in the application of the rates. For instance, Class 1 was headed by the Alabama Great Southern, which was then earning within the State of Alabama $12,459 per mile of railroad. The earnings of the L. & N. on its mileage within the State of Alabama were $9,908 per mile of road. The earnings of the Atlantic Coast Line were $5,914 per mile, whereas the earnings of the St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad were $11,211 per mile and the earnings of the Western Railway of Alabama were $8,771 per mile. It will be seen that a railway earning $5,914 per mile was classified on the same basis and was required to charge the same rates as a railway earning $12,459 per mile.

For the convenience of the reader, and to clearly demonstrate the discrimination and unsound basis of rate making, we herewith submit a comparison of the earnings per mile of road of the railroads which were in 1907 placed in Class 1 by the then Governor and the Alabama Legislature. The earnings are for the fiscal year 1906-07, ending June 30, 1907:

Alabama Great Southern Railroad	$12,459
St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad	11,211
Louisville & Nashville Railroad	9,908
Western Railway of Alabama	8,771
Atlantic Coast Line	5,914

Notwithstanding the greater earnings of the Alabama Great Southern that line, as a result of its agreement with the then Governor, dated October 22, 1907, was placed in Class 3. This discrimination, in favor of the Alabama Great Southern, was too much for the Railroad Commission which, in its order of December 13, 1907, placed the A. G. S. in Class 2. Also, on April 8, 1908, the St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad, by reason of its agreement with the then Governor, and in spite of its earnings greater than the L. & N., was permitted to assess Class 2 rates.

While the bill making the above classification was before the Legislature, the railroads pleaded that they might be permitted to go before the Transporation Committee of the Legislature, then in session, and explain the discrimination and the unsound basis of rate making. This was denied and the act was passed.

The courts were then appealed to, and it was demonstrated that the earnings per mile of road of the L. & N. within the State of Alabama were but 79.5 per cent. of the earnings of the Alabama Great Southern, and but 88.3 per cent. of the earnings of the St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad, yet those lines were permitted under their agreement with the then Governor to charge rates 125 per cent. and 120 per cent. respectively of the standard scale, while those prescribed for the L. & N. were standard scale. Even after the Railroad Commission's order of December 13, 1907, placing the A. G. S. in Class 2, that line was still allowed to assess rates 120 per cent. of the standard scale. Upon the showing made a restraining order was granted by the courts against the enforcement of the rates.

Subsequent to obtaining this restraining order, the Southern Railway removed from a state court to a federal court, a certain suit and in so doing technically violated the "outlaw act," which prohibited a foreign corporation from removing a case from a state to a federal court, the penalty of which was the forfeiture of license. This act has since been declared unconstitutional and repealed, but in the meantime the Southern Railway was unwittingly placed in the attitude of being an "outlaw," its license having been cancelled. Under these conditions the Southern Railway officials met with the Governor for conference.

A compromise was made with the Governor by which the Southern Railway, in exchange for having its license reinstated, agreed to put into effect the statutory rates, effective September 1, 1907. In addition, the Alabama Great Southern, which was one of the Southern Railway's subsidiary lines (which road was on the list of Class 1, and which road by the terms of the statute had been required to charge the standard rates, and the earnings of which road at that time on its lines within the State of Alabama were 20.5 per cent. greater and are now 35.4 per cent. greater than the amount per mile received by the L. & N. on its lines within the State of Alabama), was authorized by the Governor to increase its rates to Class 3. The Railroad Commission declined to ratify the agreement placing the A. G. S. in Class 3 and placed it in Class 2, as above stated.

By agreement of October 22, 1907, between the Governor and the Southern Railway, effective December 1, 1907, the Southern Railway was granted authority to assess and collect rates prescribed for Class 3 railroads. The agreement was ratified by the Railroad Commission in its general order No. 9 issued November 25, 1907.

After the Governor had wiped out the statutes providing rates and substituted agreements therefor, he called an extra session of the Legislature that his agreements might become law by legislative enactment. The Legislature was called together for this express purpose, and also that the original act might be cut up into eight parts and be made eight specific acts, the object being to circumvent an injunction then obtaining against the original act.

This was done in November, 1907, with the result that the Alabama Great Southern, the greatest earner in Class 1, had its rates advanced by the Governor's agreement 25 per cent.; (rejected by the Railroad Commission on December 13, 1907, and revised to 20 per cent.) The Southern Railway with earnings of $6,121 per mile had its rates advanced 5 per cent., or to Class 3, while the Atlantic Coast Line, with earnings of $5,914 per mile, the St. Louis & San Francisco, with earnings of $11,211 per mile, and the Western Railway of Alabama, with earnings of $8,771 per mile, were left, in company with the L. & N., whose earnings were $9,908 per mile, in Class 1. These last named railroads were required to charge the standard, or minimum rates.

Thus the Legislature in two separate and distinct sessions fixed the rates for the L. & N., then earning $9,908 per mile, and the Atlantic Coast Line, then earning $5,914 per mile, 25 per cent. lower than the rates fixed for the Alabama Great Southern with earnings of $12,459 per mile, even if the Railroad Commission did later make a 5 per cent. change in the A. G. S. classification.

Without consultation with the Legislature and almost immediately following its adjournment, the Governor under date of December 3, 1907, by agreement with the Atlantic Coast Line permitted that railroad to advance its rates 25 per cent. on the greater portion of the One Hundred and Ten Commodities and caused the agreement to be ratified by the Railroad Commission.

The St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad, by agreement with the Governor, was placed in Class 2. That railroad was then earning $11,211 per mile, and was granted a 20 per cent. increase in rates over the L. & N. which was earning only $9,908 per mile.

By the process of elimination, we find after the agreements entered into by the Governor, that there remained no railroads in Class 1 which were required to charge the standard scale of rates except the Louisville & Nashville Railroad, earning $9,908 per mile, and the Western Railway of Alabama, earning $8,771 per mile, while the Alabama Great Southern Railroad, earning $12,459 per mile, was authorized to increase its rates 25 per cent.

It should be further borne in mind that these agreements, entered into with certain railroads, were not in accord with the law as enacted by the State Legislature fixing the rates.

Discriminations of a similar nature were indulged in, each time leaving the Louisville & Nashville Railroad as a first class road, both as to its main line and branches, as well as all lines controlled or operated by it, even though competitive lines, with increased earnings, were placed in lower classes. Notwithstanding the greater earnings of other roads the L. & N. was required to charge the minimum rate.

This is a simple statement of fact which may be verified by the official records in the state Capitol. We submit that the L. & N. has been treated unfairly and has been unjustly discriminated against. We believe that the vast majority of the people are fair and that is why we come to the people with a frank statement of conditions as they actually exist.

YSTERIOUS POISONING

DGE REYNOLDS LOSES THREE HORSES.

That there is poisonous stock od being sold in Clanton can in e light of recent events scarcely doubted; if this is not true, then this county there is some devel- person who should be strung for his misdeeds. Some days nce Judge Reynolds lost a fine ule from what he then thought as "cerebro spinal meningitis"— "blind staggers" but when one his carriage horses became af- cted in like manner and then a cond horse was likewise affect- , he began to look for the cause. Unfortunately all the feed had een exhausted before suspicion as aroused, hence, no analysis of e food could be made, but when e third animal was "taken" Mr. T. Hinkle was called in and it as his opinion that the animal ad been poisoned; he watched e horse carefully and after all fforts had failed to revive it an xamination was made and the ause of death unequivocally pro- ounced as poisoning. This would e unquestionably attributed to he feed were it not for the fact hat the family milch cow has been iven of the same feed and has not et been affected. Looking at it rom this view point it would seem hat some one "has it in" for udge Reynolds and is taking his evenge out in a most damnable nd diabolical manner. A person who would deliberately poison the umb animals of his bitter enemy s not fit to live in a civilized com- munity and the sooner he is given he extreme limit of the law the etter for all concerned; such a erson would pollute a spring, choke young mocking birds or pull up young corn.

Since the above was put in type Mr. J. A. Cleckler, living in the eastern part of the county, has re- ported to the Press man that he ost a fine mule Monday from poisoned food. A quantity of the food was brought in by Mr. Cleck- ler and was sent by the Press man to Dr. Moss at Auburn for examination. His report will be pub- lished next week if received in time.

DEATH OF R H. HONEY- CUTT

The following letter received by the Press is self-explanatory:

Ensley, Ala., Jan. 25, 1913
Editor of the Press,
Clanton, Ala.

Dear Sir:—

I have just heard of the death of R. H. Honeycutt today. He and I both belonged to Company "C," Sixty-second Alabama Regiment, in the war between the states. I have this to say of him:—He was a true soldier of his country and his Lord; I never heard him speak a harsh word of any one, never was a soldier more loved by all of the privates than was Sergeant Honeycutt. We were together many times in close places, but he never knew what it was to shirk a duty. I loved him as one of my mess mates.

There is only one of our officers now living—Lieutenant Ballard of Woodlawn. Truly a good man has gone home to the Gloryland.

There are only about fifteen of the 126 belonging to our company now living; we will all soon be called to answer the last roll call over on the other side.

Peace, sweet peace, be to the ashes of our beloved seSrgeant; may the good Lord bless his be- reaved family and may we all meet over there, is the sincere wish of his mess mate and friend,

A. H. Piper.

MRS. JOHNSTON MUCH IMPROVED

Information from the bedside of Mrs. D. Y. Johnston, who was stricken some days since with ce- robro-spinal meningitis, is to the effect that the good lady is rapidly recovering. This will be pleasing intelligence to her many friends who have daily inquired as to her condition.

She is now able to sit up and to be about her bed room, though she has not yet entirely recovered.

The visitors who were being en- tertained at the home of Mrs. Johnson when she was suddenly stricken with the disease, have re- turned to their home in Birming- ham.

MOUNTAIN CREEK

The post office at this place was entered by safe blowers on Mon- day night about 12 o'clock. When the thieves exploded the safe with dynamite the telegraph operator, hearing the noise, went immediate- ly to the post office and opened fire on them. They hurried away, se- curing nothing but some small cur rency. The safe contained a large sum of money and some val- uable jewelry which was found in the damaged safe, when Mr. Gray succeeded in opening it. The safe was considerably damaged.

GLASS-JONES

Last Friday night at the home of Mrs. Georgia Teel occurred a wedding of more than ordinary interest, the high contracting par- ties being Mrs. Willie R. Jones of Greensboro, Alabama, and Mr. J. M. Glass of Clanton.

For some past Mrs. Jones has been acting as head nurse at the Hopkins infirmary and has made for herself many warm friends during her residence here.

Mr. Glass is a young man of sterling worth and numbers his friends by the number of his ac- quaintances.

The ceremony which joined these two lives for eternity was performed by Probate Judge E. B. Deason.

CITY SEXTON,

MR. J. B. GULLAHORN SEEKS PLACE

Since Mr. McDaniel retired as City Sexton the cemetery has had no keeper and things in and around that sacred spot have been allowed to take of themselves as best they could.

Recently Mr. Tige Gullahorn sought to instill some spirit of pride in our citizens in so far as the "quiet city of the dead" is con- cerned, but it appears that his ef- forts have proven futile.

Some days since he circulated a subscription list to ascertain how much the citizens would pay each week on the salary of a "City Sex- ton;" seventy six names are signed to the list; the amounts promised range from 25 cents per month down to as much as a nickel per month—the full amount subscribed being eleven dollars and twenty cents.

Comment is unnecessary.

TO THE TEACHERS OF ALABAMA

Montgomery, Ala., Jan. 20, 1913.

In compliance with an act of the legislature approved August 19, 1909, I hereby designate Fri- day February twenty-first, as Temperance Day in the public schools of Alabama.

All achers in the public schools of this state are requested to set apart some portion of that day for a suitable observance of this law's requirements, to the end that the children may have brought to their attention the evils of intem- perance. Local school authorities should be consulted by the teach- ers, when in doubt as to the nature of the exercises, or the period of time to be devoted. I am inform- ed that suggestive programs will be furnished free, upon request, by Mrs. F. M. Jackson, Birming- ham, Alabama.

Without serious interference with the regular work of that day, an interesting and helpful program should be prepared and rendered in every public school.

Very truly yours,
Henry J. Willingham,
Supt. of Education.

ANOTHER LARGE SALE OF STOVES

Gamble Hardware Co. Lands a Second Record.

Tuesday morning three large wagons were lined up in front of the Gamble Hardware Co's stores loading cooking stoves to be used by the Alabama Power Co. at their plant on Coosa river. Be- sides the ten large stoves, quite a number of cooking utensils and stove piping was loaded. This makes the second sale made by this enterprising company to the Power people and shows what en- terprise can do. In all, the hard- ware company has supplied the Power company with more than a hundred stoves and cooking uten- sils within the past sixty days.

TWASINA IS ACQUITTED

Two men in Case Are Given Sen- tences, However.

Twasina, alias Madame Van, charged with enticing a girl under 18 years of age, was acquitted in the Second Division of the Crimi- nal Court Tuesday morning before Judge Green, but Tol Marcus and Emanual DuBose, arrested in con- nection with the same case, were fined $250.00 and given six months at hard labor.

Notice of appeal was given and pending making bond, defendants went to jail.—Birmingham News.

There were no Sunday school or church services at either of the Clanton churches last Sunday. Perhaps it was because of the men- ingitis scare, but as we have not yet heard from our Mountain Creek correspondent, we are unable to say positively. He seems to know all about the situation here and till he gives the necessary information we will not venture to express an opinion.

Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Woodyard and children have returned to Clanton, after a visit to relatives in Chambers county.

PAY YOUR POLL TAX

MONDAY WILL BE TOO LATE.

If you have not already paid your poll tax it is "up to you" to attend to that duty TO-DAY.

There will probably not be any very important elections this year, but the money is needed for school purposes and it will be much easier for you to pay again next year provided you have only one year to pay at a time. Those who per- mit their poll taxes to accumulate deliberately disfranchise themsel- ves, for unless you are "straight" with the poll tax collector you can have no voice in the selection of your officers.

Do not delay longer—pay up to- day and rid yourself of the un- pleasant duty—if assisting in the education of the youth of the coun- ty can by any stretch of the imag- ination be called an unpleasant duty.

FOR SALE—One Ox, 1000 pounds O. K.; Two Milch Cows, just moderate milkers and gentle.

OIL MILL ASSURED

WORK OF CONSTRUCTION TO BE- GIN IMMEDIATELY

In conversation with Mr. Bar- bour of Birmingham. who is per- haps more interested in the con- struction of the oil mill at Clanton than any other person, he said:— Yes, you may rest assured that the mill will be erected without un- necessary delay. The original promoters have secured sufficient encouragement in Clanton to jus- tify us in making this statement. We will erect a $60,000.00 mill and hope to be ready to crush next season's crop of seed.

Quite a number of Clanton's leading citizens are interested in the project, having subscribed for stock in the concern as well as given their moral support to the venture.

It is the purpose of the company so stated Mr. Barbour, to have no high salaried officials who do not contribute materially in actual work; those who draw pay must earn every cent of the money drawn.

Just where the mill will be lo- cated has not yet been decided, but will be at a point convenient to the railroads and to the farm- ers.

Since the above was put in type the Press man has learned from good authority that the oil mill project is now assured. A meeting of those interested was held in Clanton Wednesday night and more than forty thousand dollars of stock subscribed with yet others to hear from who have given as- surance that they propose to be- come stockholders.

A committee was appointed at the meeting mentioned above to see other Clanton citizens and in- terest them in the project.

The Press man, while not at lib- erty to mention names, is assured that several other enterprises will soon be launched in Clanton, which will add materially to its welfare and upbuilding.

Now don't ask us what these other enterprises are; we are not at liberty to tell, and besides pre- mature information might "spoil the broth." Just read back a few issues and recall the names of the "hobby horses" the Press man was riding, then listen to the little birds as they sing in the trees—perhaps they'll tell you "something."

By the way, we almost forgot to say that instead of a sixty thous- and dollar oil mill it is to be a hun- dred thousand dollar mill with ginnery attached.

Greenwich Girl and Auburn Youth Restored to Health Elope in Auto; Forgiven.

Greenwich, Conn.—Miss Gladys Lin- stedt, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Wil- liam H. Linstedt, has returned to her home from a trip to New York. She was bubbling over with pleasure.

"What do you think!" she asked. "While I was in town I met Win, and I've invited him to come here to- morrow."

The subject of the outburst is Win- throp C. Beardsley of Auburn, N. Y. He is twenty-one, and so is Miss Lin- stedt. They met in Saratoga last winter. He was suffering from pneu- monia, and she from another sort of lung trouble. Both are now in the best of health.

Beardsley, soon after his arrival at the Lindstedt home, suggested that he and the young woman go for a stroll. Her brother offered his auto. This was accepted, and the couple drove off.

They returned about one o'clock in the afternoon. Dr. and Mrs. Linstedt were at home together, and, leading Beardsley up to them, the girl said:

"I am pleased to be able to present to you my husband."

The parents almost fainted.

"Now I know why you made that trip to New York," said Mrs. Linstedt. "It wasn't an accident."

The parents decided that there was no occasion to become angry, so they blessed the couple and hustled them off on their honeymoon.

SYNOPSIS.

Major Lawrence, son of Judge Lawrence of Virginia, whose wife was a Lee, is sent on a perilous mission by Gen. Washington, just after the winter at Valley Forge. Disguised in a British uniform Lawrence arrives within the enemy's lines. The Major attends a great fete and saves the "Lady of the Blended Rose" from mob. He later meets the girl at a brilliant ball. Trouble is started over a waltz, and Lawrence is urged by his partner, Mistress Mortimer (The Lady of the Blended Rose), to make his escape. Lawrence is detected as a spy by Captain Grant of the British Army who agrees to a duel. The British Army who agrees friends and the spy makes a dash for liberty, swimming a river following a narrow escape. The Major arrives at the shop of a blacksmith, who is friendly, and knows the Lady of the Blended Rose. Captain Grant and rangers search blacksmith shop in vain for the spy. Lawrence joins the minute men. Grant and his train are captured by the minute men. Lawrence is made prisoner by an Indian and two white men, who lock him in a strong cell. Peter advises Lawrence not to attempt to escape as "some one" would send for him. Grant's appearance adds mystery to the combination of circumstances. Lawrence again meets the Lady of the Blended Rose, who informs him that he is in her house; and that she was in command of the party that captured him. The captive is thrust into a dark underground chamber when Captain Grant begins a search of the premises. After digging his way out, Lawrence finds the place deserted. Evidenec of a battle and a dead man across the threshold. Col. Mortimer, father of the Lady of the Blended Rose, finds his home in ruins. Capt. Grant insists that Lawrence be strung up at once. Miss Mortimer appears, explains the mystery and Lawrence is held a prisoner of war. Lawrence escapes through plans arranged by the Lady and sees Grant attack Miss Mortimer. Grant is knocked out by Lawrence, who comes to Miss Mortimer's relief and then makes his escape. Captain Grant's base villany revealed. Lawrence returns to Valley Forge, where learns more of Grant's perfidy. Washington forces Clinton at battle and Lawrence gets trace of Eric Mortimer. The battle of Monmouth. Miss Mortimer defies Fagin, and maddened by the man's brutal words, shoots him and escapes. Immediately the battle is on, and Lawrence's party, outnumbered, are reduced to three men when the arrival of the Camden militia, with Farrell, completes rout of Fagin's party.

CHAPTER XXXIV.—Continued.

I experienced no great difficulty, my strength coming back rapidly. There was a wounded Dragoon leaning against the wall, and half-way down the hall lay another body, face down. Without doubt this was the guard Fagin had stationed there. Duval paused to help the wounded man, but Farrell and I moved on across the dead guard to the open door beyond. Colonel Mortimer, unable to move, was propped up on his pillow, one hand grasping a pistol. With shaking arm he levelled it at us.

"Who are you? Quick, now!" he quavered. "I've shot one, and I'm good for more."

"You know me, Colonel," and Farrell stepped inside. "I am 'Bull' Farrell; this is Major Lawrence." He looked at us with dull eyes, his hand falling weakly.

"Farrell—Farrell—surely, the blacksmith. What Lawrence? The—the officer Claire knows?"

"Yes; he's a rough-looking object I admit, but there has been a fight down below, sir, in which he had a share. We've just cleaned out Red Fagin's gang. We came up here to tell the good news to you and your daughter."

The Colonel's head sank back upon the mussed pillow.

"My daughter—Claire—she is not here."

"Not here!" I cried, aroused by the admission. "Did she not return to you?"

"No; they came for her to go down stairs—a tall man with a black beard, and two others. They took her away an hour ago, and I have seen nothing of her since. I—heard the shots, the sound of fierce fighting, but could not move from the bed. Tell me, Major, what has become of my little girl?"

"I do not know," I confessed, gazing about in bewilderment. "She came up the stairs, I am sure. It was just as the fight began, and I had scarcely a moment to observe anything before we were at it fiercely. She shot Fagin down, and then ran."

"Shot Fagin! Claire!"

"Yes; she was justified. Had she not acted so quickly I would have done so myself. He was forcing her into marriage."

"Into marriage! With whom?"

"Captain Grant," I answered passionately. "It was a deliberate plot, although he pretended to be innocent, and a helpless prisoner. Later the man fought with the outlaws against us; after Jones was killed he even assumed command."

"He has been hand and glove with those fellows from the first, Colonel," chimed in Farrell hoarsely. "I've known it, and told Lawrence so a month ago. I only hope he was killed down below. But what can have become of Claire?"

"She never passed along here," insisted Mortimer, "for I haven't taken my eyes from that door."

"Then she is hiding somewhere in those front rooms. Come on, Lawrence, and we'll search them."

We went out hurriedly, leaving the wounded man lying helplessly on the bed, and stepped carelessly across the dead sentinel lying in the hallway. The memory of Peter recurred to me. He was not the kind to desert his mistress at such a time. Stopping Farrell, I stepped back to inquire. The Colonel opened his eyes wearily at sound of my voice.

"He is not here," he explained slowly. "Both Peter and Tonepah were sent away to find a surgeon, and have not returned. We anticipated no danger here with Captain Grant present."

I ground my teeth savagely together, recalling the treachery of the latter, his insults to Claire, his deceiving of Eric, his stealing of papers, hoping thus to ruin his own Colonel, his alliance with Fagin, his selling of British secrets. Here was a villain through and through and I hoped he had already paid the penalty. If not, I vowed the man should never escape. But the thought of the missing girl came back, driving all else from my mind. She was in none of those rooms we searched, nor did we discover the slightest evidence of her having been there. As I stood in the door of the deserted music-room staring helplessly about, a sudden possibility occurred to me. Ay! that must be the truth, the full explanation of her vanishing. She had come flying up the stairs, frightened, desperate—so far as she knew, alone against Fagin's unscrupulous band. She had not returned to her father, or escaped by way of the hall. Where then could she have gone? The secret staircase, down which she had hurried me, and which was known only to herself, Eric and Peter. I gripped Farrell's arm eagerly.

"You know this house well—did you ever hear of secret passages in it?"

"I have heard it whispered in gossip," he answered, "that such were here in the old Indian days. Why?"

"Because it is true. The girl hid me here from Grant. And that is where we will find her. The opening is there by the false chimney, but I have no conception of how it works; she made me turn my back while she operated the mechanism."

He stooped down, and began search along the fireplace, and I joined him. Together our hands felt over every inch of surface. There was no response, not even a crack to guide us. At last he glanced aside, and our eyes met.

"Who knew of this beside Claire?" he asked.

"Eric and the servant Swanson. She told me she and her brother discovered it by accident through reading an old memoranda."

"And the colonel is not aware of its existence?"

"I understand not. Do you know if the boy lives?"

He left the room, and I heard his voice calling down the stairs, but did not distinguish the words of reply. I was still on my knees when he returned.

"He is alive, but unconscious, Lawrence. Do you consider it impossible for her to escape from here alone, providing she took refuge in this place?"

"I could find no opening, except underground, and that is blocked now." I shuddered at the thought. "Besides, she must be in utter darkness, for I used all the candles."

"Then we must get axes, and cut our way in. Wait here, and I will bring up some of the men."

I straightened up as he left the room, and my eyes looked into a small mirror above the open grate. Good Heavens! Could that be my reflection! Bareheaded, my face streaked with blood and dirt, my coat rags, my shirt ripped to the waist. I scarcely looked human. In sudden burst of anger I reached out and gripped the mirror, jerking it savagely. Then I sprang back. Slowly, with a faint click of the mechanism, the mantelpiece was swinging open.

CHAPTER XXXV.

A Confession of Love.

I could scarcely believe my eyes as the mantel swung slowly outward, revealing the black hole beyond. I glanced about helplessly, and sprang to the door to call back Farrell. He was not in the upper hall, but as my eyes swept its length I remembered a half-burned candle in the chamber opposite. By the time I returned with it lighted, the mantel had turned on its pivot, leaving the way clear. The narrow stair was vacant, stretching down into the black depths. I listened, my heart throbbing, but no sound came from below. Could she be there? Was there any other secret passage by which she could have disappeared? I shuddered at memory of what it meant to be shut up in that dismal hole, without the companionship of light. Fearful of some accident I paused long enough to wedge a heavy piece of furniture in the opening, and then, shading the bit of candle, began groping my way down. I had reached the lower floor before the flickering yellow rays revealed any evidence of her presence. Then I saw a girl lying head down upon the table. My hand touched her arm before she moved, but then she faced me, wild-eyed, the pistol gleaming in the candle-light.

"Claire! Claire!" I exclaimed, startled at her sudden movement. "Surely you know me."

For the instant she did not, her eyes full of terror.

"No! no!" she cried hysterically. "Oh, it cannot be! It is a dream! You—you—tell me who you are?"

I caught her hand, the pistol falling to the floor, and placed the candlestick upon the table.

"It is no dream, dear. I am Allen Lawrence, and I have come for you. I know I look disreputable enough, but there has been fighting—surely you know me now."

She caught her breath quickly, clinging to me with both hands—her eyes softening as she studied my face.

"Allen—Allen Lawrence!" she repeated softly. "Oh, I can scarcely believe it true. Let me feel of you. I—I believe I was going insane—the dark, the awful dark, and, and no way out—no way out."

"Yes, yes, I understand," I whispered, drawing her to me. "I was hidden here once, remember. But it is over with now."

"But—how did you find a way to me? I—I never thought until it was all over that I had shut myself in here to die. I was so frightened. I just ran and hid. Oh, you cannot conceive what I had gone through."

She drew away from me, and again hid her face on the table.

"Oh, but I can, Claire," and I bent over her, my hand fondling her hair. "I was there in the hall below, ready even then to act in your defense. I heard all that was said, saw all that was done."

"You—you were there?" sobbing out the words. "You saw me kill him?"

"Yes, and had you delayed another instant I should have done it."

"Then—then," she glanced up, tears dimming her eyes, "you do not blame me? You do not think me a wicked wretch?"

"I think you a brave, noble woman," I burst forth. "How could I feel otherwise? Look up, little girl; I want to see your face. No, don't shrink back from me. There is no cause. I know the whole story without your speaking a word. You asked me to come back to help you, and I came."

"Yes," she whispered, "I know. You have been so good."

"Good! I loved you, dear. From the moment I lifted you out of the way of that mob in Philadelphia, I have loved you. I did not understand much that occurred, but I have never doubted you. Now I realize the cause of your masquerade and know you were justified. I can bring you good news—Eric is not a traitor, but was a prisoner, captured by Fagin, and held at Grant's request. We found him bound and under guard out yonder, as we approached the house."

"And he is here now?"

"Yes; he was hurt in the fight, and is still unconscious, but will live."

"His reputation—"

"Is safe. Washington believes he brought him the news of Clinton's route of march, and will never know otherwise."

She arose to her feet, standing straight and slender before me, the flickering light of the candle on her face.

"Major Lawrence," she began, "I wish to get out of here—it seems like a grave to me—but I must speak first. Oh, I am so glad I have accomplished what I endeavored to do for my brother. Captain Grant tried to make me believe him a deserter, but I would not. When he failed to come back to me as he had promised, I could hardly determine what my duty was. I knew his plans, his orders, and the thought came that I should carry these out myself. We looked sufficiently alike so that this could be done with little danger of discovery. He had uniforms concealed here, and I felt driven to impersonate him. I do not insist that I did right; I do not know—only it seemed right to me. Then—then," her voice faltered, "I met you, again and again, and I—I began to doubt myself. I had no one to confide in, no one to advise me. I was simply compelled to go ahead, and keep my own secret. The only ones I knew I could absolutely trust were our old house servants."

"You doubted me, even?"

"Yes, at first, but you must not blame me. We met strangely; you were a gentleman and an officer; I felt sure of this, and was tempted oftimes to tell you my story. But before I dared do so, you—you spoke of other things and—and then I was afraid."

"Afraid of what?" and I caught her hand in mine. "That a knowledge of what you were attempting to accomplish would turn me against you?"

Her eyes fell, shaded by the long lashes.

"Yes; once, do you remember I almost began a confession, when you spoke of your old-fashioned mother, and her conception of womanhood. How could I tell you then that I had dressed as a man, and played the part of a spy? I—I thought you might despise me, and—and I wished so to retain your respect. It was an accident we were with Delavan that night. We were endeavoring to waylay a courier, and rode suddenly into his party. I had to invent a tale on the spur of the moment. Major Lawrence, now that you know all, tell me the one thing I must know before we join the others—would you wish your own sister to do as I have done?"

"Not to pass through the dangers, surely," I returned eagerly, "but I should rejoice at her loyalty, and be proud of her. Claire, Claire, there has never been in my heart aught but love for you. As Lady of the Blended Rose, as daughter of a colonel of Queen's Rangers, even in the disguise of a dragoon, I have never questioned the depth of your womanhood. Once I guessed you a British spy, yet ceased not to love you. Am I to have my reward? You know little of me, as you say, but as an officer and a gentleman, I ask you to repeat again what you whispered to me once yonder under the stars—do you remember, dear?"

"It was only to compel you to leave me."

"And now it is an invitation to remain."

Her eyes were uplifted to mine. Slowly I drew her toward me, her arms were upon my shoulders, and our lips met.

"I love you," she said slowly. "Yes, dear, I love you."

Above us, his head thrust through the opening, Farrell called:

"Have you found her, major? Shall I come down?"

"It's not necessary."

"The colonel is half crazy, and the boy is getting back his senses."

We went up together, I bearing the candle in one hand, and helping her along the circular stairs with the other. In the upper hall I glanced below, but the bodies of the dead had been removed. Farrell stood bareheaded, a great figure on his short legs.

"This has been a fine night's work," he said steadily, "the last of Fagin's gang."

"Dead?"

"Ay, and Grant with him—begging your pardon, mistress."

Her eyes glanced from his face into mine, and my hand-clasp tightened. It was thus we went in together, and stood opposite the colonel's bed.

[THE END.]

SOME OLD TIME PREACHERS

In Pioneer Days in Missouri Every Divine Carried a Gun With Him to Church.

Nearly every pioneer preacher in Missouri was as expert in the use of the rifle as any of the laymen, says a writer in the Globe-Democrat. Services were usually held in a neighbor's cabin. Notice of a "meeting" was promptly and generally circulated, and the settlers attended, uniformly bringing their rifles to guard against possible surprises or to obtain game on the way to or from the service.

The practice of carrying firearms was not abandoned or suspended even on the Sabbath. An old pioneer states that on one occasion religious services were held in Saline county when the preacher proclaimed the gospel of peace with his hand and his clothing covered with blood from a deer that he had killed and butchered on his way to the meeting that morning.

The pioneer preachers labored without money and without price. They gained their subsistence as did their neighbors, by the rifle and by their daily toil in the clearings and the corn fields.

Rev. Justinian Williams, Methodist, and Rev. Peyton Nowlin and Rev. Thomas Kinney, Baptists, were the first preachers in Saline county. They preached on Edmonson's Creek, and in the Big Bottom. "Old Man Nowlin," as he was called, was a sedate gentleman, dry as to manners and sermons, but with a kind heart and good intention.

His colleague, Kinney, however, was of a jovial disposition and very popular. He was without literary attainments, but invariably provoked his congregation to laughter. Nowlin took him to task upon one occasion for his levity. Kinney answered:

"Well, I'd rather preach to laughing devils than to sleepy ones, as you do. You make them sleep and I make them laugh. My congregation will pass yours on the road to heaven. I bet you a coonskin they will."

Gravitation.

The great Newton himself did not pretend to know what gravitation is. He only knew that it existed and he was able to prove how it acted, but what it was in and of itself he never knew. Gravitation is a law of nature, or a force acting in accordance with a law of nature, and that is all that the wisest man is able to say about it—unless he is prepared to talk nonsense. It is like electricity. We know perfectly well what electricity itself does, but what electricity itself is defies the profoundest of scientists or philosophers.

A Word to Our Patrons and Friends.

Beginning within the next few days the PRESS is going to inaugurate one of the most enteresting newspaper contests ever put on in this section.

It is going to cost us much money and time to make a success of it, but that it will be a success is not to be doubted.

The company behind the movement is an experienced one and has obtained results in many well managed contests; the announcement of the name of the company alone insures success; it is not going to be like many of the so-called newspaper contests—merely a scheme to get money for the paper without giving full value for every cent paid by its patrons; beyond that it will be conducted upon a high moral plane and will be devoid of all favoritism or sensationalism.

To secure the contract with this company it has cost us much money; we are anticipating great results.

But there is one word we would like our readers to weigh carefully. The success of the venture depends largely upon our friends; they can "throw" us if they see fit or help us if they will.

Among other things our contract calls for "close" collections; we have been extremely negligent in this particular, never having called upon any one to pay a subscription—merely reminding our friends occasionally of the expiration of their subscriptions and suggesting that postal laws forbid sending papers to subscribers whose subscription was overdue. We have not pushed our "job work" accounts as we should; it has been no one's fault but our own.

However, the company with which we have contracted proposes to wage a vigorous warfare; that is a part of the contract. In fact that is where they propose to get the bulk of their money for conducting the contest.

We wish them to be bounteously remunerated for their part of the work, but at the same time "self preservation is the first law of nature," we are to give them a large proportion of the funds collected for us; nevertheless it is but fair to ourselves to collect all that is due us before the contest begins—on as much as we possibly can, so that our expense will be as light as possible in putting on the contest.

Can we not, therefore, ask our subscribers who are in arrears to pay up promptly so that we, who have served you faithfully, may receive the benefits of our labor rather than that the other man shall receive that for which we have labored?

Will not our friends who owe us remit us promptly to the end that we may discharge our obligations?

Will not those who are indebted to us pay promptly when accounts are presented so that we may save much money to spend among you?

Think it over, please; we do not wish to take any unfair advantage of those with whom we have contracted, but, at the same time, we do wish to save you annoyance and at the same time "gather in the shekels" for which we have labored rather than to more than divide equally with others.

Do not wait for the "collector" to insist; just pay up and let's continue on the same good terms.

Some of our friends seem to think a newspaper has no right to ask for what is due; as a general rule newspaper subscriptions are invariably payable in advance—we wait twelve months, and then some—with a large proportion of our subscribers.

Our expenses are heavy, our creditors are incessant in their demands and our desire to expand and do better are continually with us; if we have to give the larger part of your obligation to us to those who are to conduct the contest, how can we improve? Think on these things and help us.

We know you do not like to be "dunned;" no one does, but when the "ox is in the ditch" why delay rendering assistance—especially when it is within your power to do so without injury to yourself?

Help us to help ourselves and then we can and WILL help you.

Mr. F. M. Wood, Clanton, Ala.

My Dear Wood:—Have noticed your position on meningitis situation in Chilton as expressed in the Press, and feel that I should write you that you are my idea of a real newspaper man. Most of us like to be told when anything we have done is appreciated, and I take it you are not different from the rest of us. A newspaper is to give the news, and state the facts so that its readers may know what the facts are. It is a bad policy, and dishonest, for either a newspaper or a community to hide facts, because it may "hurt business."

I congratulate you on your honesty and fearlessness, and you and your paper are bound to grow in the respect and confidence of your patrons and citizens generally by reason of the fact that you have not been afraid to speak the truth. Success to you and the Press.

Yours truly,
F. Loyd Tate.

The above letter from Solicitor Tate is greatly appreciated by the Press man; it is frequently the case that one has to go away from home to get encouragement or to have pleasant things said about them, but in this case it is doubly appreciated because the Solicitor is both "home folks" and a non-resident. The letter shows the character of the man; fearless himself in the discharge of duty he does not hesitate to applaud others when they undertake to do a disagreeable public duty.

Many thanks, Solicitor, may your tribe ever increase.

Heart Symptoms

The ailments of women include symptoms of heart trouble known as palpitation of the heart. The palpitation is so violent at times as to be really painful and leads the patient to fear she has heart disease. Ninety per cent of such cases are not heart disease at all but only a symptom of a liver disorder which has affected the normal action of the heart, and on applying the proper remedies the unusual throbbing ceases. The stomach and digestion need strengthening and the depressing effect of these disorders on the female organism must be corrected. For the latter purpose there is no more effective remedy to be found anywhere than

DR. SIMMONS

SCHOOL AGAIN CLOSED

Tuesday morning Judge L. H. Reynolds and Mr. C. Reese Mullins, acting for the Board of Trustees of Clanton Academy, went to the school building and instructed Prof. Pickens, Principal of the schools, to "close down" for another week—which of course was done.

The reason assigned for the closing of the schools was that meningitis still prevailed in the county and it was thought wise to keep the children at home rather than have them assembled from the several sections of the town and county.

Whether this is a wise step or not is not within the province of the Press to say; one thing, however, is certain:—promiscuous gatherings just at this time are not wise; if the children can be kept off the streets it is well, but if they are permitted to roam about at will they are more liable to contract meningitis than if they were kept in the school rooms.

Notwithstanding this action on the part of the Clanton school board the "news man" at Mountain Creek—who does not know the situation and seems not to care—continues to send out reports that no meningitis exists.

CALOMEL IS ONLY SAFE WHEN YOU LET IT ALONE

Make up your mind right now that you will never again take calomel for biliousness, headache, constipation, or any other serious or slight liver trouble. "Calomel" is but a popular name given to chloride of mercury, and as you probably know, mercury is one of the most deadly and treacherous drugs—it salivates, makes bones ache and decay, hair fall out and teeth become loose.

Follow the example of the best physicians and use a pure, harmless vegetable remedy. BEARLAX will give you the results you wish painlessly, gently but positively, and without any bad after effects. BEARLAX will tone and stimulate your liver, cleanse your system and build up and strengthen your digestive organs. The price is but 25 cents per bottle, everywhere.

BEULAH CREVASSE 200 FEET WIDE

HUNDREDS OF FARMERS BEING DRIVEN FROM HOMES TO THE HILLS.

NANY WORKING ON BREAK

Despite All Efforts, Breach is Slowly Widening—Waters Causing Ends of Levees to Cave.

Vicksburg.—A torrent 200 feet wide and many feet deep is rushing through the crevasee in Beulah levee, about 100 miles north of here, on the east bank of the Mississippi river.

The water is rapidly inundating the lowlands, destroying crops on fertile plantations and forcing hundreds of farmers with their live stock to the hills.

A crevasse at this place last spring when the river stage was considerably higher flooded approximately 1,225 square miles. The engineers engaged on the work say before the floods recede at least 1,000 square miles of plantations and swamps will be inundated.

Fifteen hundred men, about 400 of whom are state convicts, are working day and night to "tie" the end of the break, but despite their efforts it is slowly widening, the rushing waters causing the neds of the levees to cave and crumble. Major J. A. Woodruff of the United States engineers, in charge of this district, is superintending operations.

There were many alarming rumors concerning the condition of the levee at Fitler's landing, where new work was more or less damaged by recent heavy rains. Major Woodruff has dispatched a steamer to that point with Assistant Engineer Tollinger aboard for an inspection. Major Woodruff said that the result at Fitler's depended entirely upon how high the river rose.

No loss of human lives or live stock has been reported.

The water will spread over the greater part of Bolivar, Sharkey and Issaquena counties and sections of Yazoo, Washington and Warren. Greenville, the most important town in the path of the flood, is protected by high ridges and will not be affected. The town of Lobdell is inundated and the outskirts of Beulah are also flooded, but the town proper is situated on high ground and will not be reached by the water.

The Riverside division of the Yazoo and Mississippi Valley line between Greenville and River Junction has been suspended, but railroad officials assert that train service on the main line of the road will not be interrupted. Preparations are being made to transfer mail from River Junction to Greenville in launches.

BABY BY PARCELS POST.

Batavia, O.—A baby boy was craried by parcels post on rural route No. 5 out of Bavaria. The child, weighing 10¾ pounds and carefully wrapped, was given by its parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Beagle, into the hands of Vernon O. Lyttle, the carrier. He safely delivered the bundle to the grandmother of the baby, a mile away. The postage was 15 cents and the parcel was insured for 50.

TOOK STITCHES IN HEART.

Remarkable Operation Performed on Negro in New Orleans.

New Orleans.—Making a half dozen stitches in a negro's heart while almost blinded by blood which spurted from that organ was part of a remarkable operation performed by Dr. Joseph A. Danna, house surgeon at the Charity hospital. The patient, Lodge Lee, who was stabbed in a row with a woman, was conscious throughout the ordeal and conversed with those about the table. Hospital attendants say he will live.

ONE KILLED AND THIRTEEN HURT

Elevated Trains Collide in New York With Fatal Results.

New York.—One man was killed and 13 persons were injured in a rear-end collision between two southbound Third avenue elevated trains. Both trains took fire and for a time it was feared they would topple into the street below. The injured were gotten out of the debris with much difficulty, while the panic stricken uninjured passengers made their arduous way over the ties to the nearest station.

CHURCH CHOIR STRIKES.

Said Pastor Was Interferring With Their Work.

Trenton, N. J.—Eighteen Princeton students were brought here and in the capacity of strike-breakers, sang in the morning and evening services of St. Michael's Episcopal Church, in place of the members of the regular choir, who had struck because they declared the rector was interfering with them and their organist. The organist also had walked out with his singers.

IRREGULARITY IN TRADE REPORTS

Weather Conditions and the Tariff Responsible—Metals Are Active.

New York.—Bradstreet's review of trade says:

Weather conditions and tariff talk have made for irregularity in trade reports this week, while financial feeling has reflected marked changes from peace negotiations in the near east. Rain and sonw have been more widely distributed than for a long time past, but this, while beneficial to winter sown cereals, has retarded demand at retail and resulted in a continuance of flood conditions.

In the leading industries there is almost unanimous report of activity. Coal is an exception, however. Mild winter weather helps the building trades and iron and steel lines are also well employed.

Labor has been well employed except in the clothing lines at New York, where many thousands of employes are out on strike. Advances in wages are noted as affecting 10,000 railway employes on city railways.

The grain markets lost some of their earlier January strength this week, but price changes were not important.

The New York stock market is irregular, speculative dealings being restricted and sentiment, which improved on a prospect of Balkan peace, was again unsettled by the war party gaining power at Constantinople.

Wheat, including flour exports from the United States and Canada for the week ending January 23, aggregated 6,882,125 bushels, against 3,043,494 bushels, against 3,043,494 bushels this week last year. Corn exports for the week are 2,671,682 bushels.

New York.—Dun's review of trade says:

Fundamental conditions continue very satisfactory and except in the securities market, which has displayed more or less uncertainty, there has been no change in the general feeling of confidence. Current reports from leading mercantile and industrial centers are especially cheerful, both as to present operations and the immediate outlook. The remarkable winter is producing different effects in different localities and branches of business causing some recession of activity in certain trades and an increase in other quarters. The absence of heavy snow over the eastern part of the country has been very favorable to railroad traffic.

Foreign demand for coal continues a feature, and New York has been called upon to part with substantial quantities of the precious metal. These withdrawals, however, have been without effect on money rates, which remain distinctly easy. Conditions in iron and steel are practically unchanged In dry goods there is a continued conservative progress. Increasing activity is reported in the shoe trade. Foreign commerce continues to expand.

EUGENE V. DEBS INDICTED.

Social Candidate for President Arrested in Indiana Charged With Obstructing Jusutice.

Terre Haute, Ind.—Eugene V. Debs, socialist candidate for President of the United States in the last election, was arrested here on an indictment returned against him in the federal court for the Third District of Kansas. Debs was charged with obstructing justice.

Debs furnished $1,000 bond for his appearance at the May term of the United States Court for the Third District of Kansas. Debs wrote an "expose" of alleged conditions in Fort Leavenworth prison for The Appeal to Reason, which caused a government inspection, but the matter printed in The Appeal to Reason was considered obscene by the federal grand jury and action was brought against the editor for sending it through the mails of the United States. It is alleged that Debs encouraged the witnesses in this case to leave the jurisdiction of the court.

EIGHT KILLED; FIFTEEN HURT.

Debris Caught Fire When Department Store in Texas Collapsed.

McKinney, Texas.—The ruins of Cleever Bros. department store, which collapsed here, yielded up no more bodies during the search. The death list was eight, and the injured fifteen. Searchers who examined the ruins, which caught fire after the collapse, said that there might be more than two or three bodies still buried.

NEWS BREVITIES.

London.—It is stated that there is a probability that King Alfonso of Spain will visit the United States possibly next summer, should the political situation in his country permit his doing so.

Washington. — According to announcement made here the National Woman's Suffrage Association, as such, will take no part in the inauguration of President-elect Woodrow Wilson. Nor will "General" Rosalie Jones and her "Army" of marchers have anything to do with the inaugural parade, although they will be here and will take part in the suffrage pageant the day previous.

Washington.—Senators favorable to arbitration were generally maligned to go on record in opposition to Mr. Knox's position on canal tolls

RHEUMATIC ADVICE

Prominent Doctor's Best Prescription Easily Mixed at Home.

"From your druggist get one ounce of Toris compound (in original sealed package) and one ounce of syrup of Sarsaparilla compound. Take these two ingredients home and put them into a half pint of good whiskey. Shake the bottle and take a tablespoonful before each meal and at bedtime." This is said to be the quickest and best remedy known to the medical profession for rheumatism and backache. Good results come after the first dose. If your druggist does not have Toris compound in stock he will get it for you in a few hours from his wholesale house. Don't be influenced to take a patent medicine instead of this. Insist on having the genuine Toris compound in the original one-ounce, sealed, yellow package. Hundreds of the worst cases were cured here by this prescription last winter. Published by the Globe Pharmaceutical laboratories of Chicago.

No Indulgence.

Mrs. Alec Tweedie of the Eugenics Education society of London, said at a reception in New York:

"Eugenics will save the son from paying for the sins of his father. Eugenics shows us that there has been no escape heretofore from these penalties. In the matter of eugenics it is not as it was with Spence.

"'Let bygones be bygones,' Spence indulgently said to his old debts, as he started in to make some new ones."

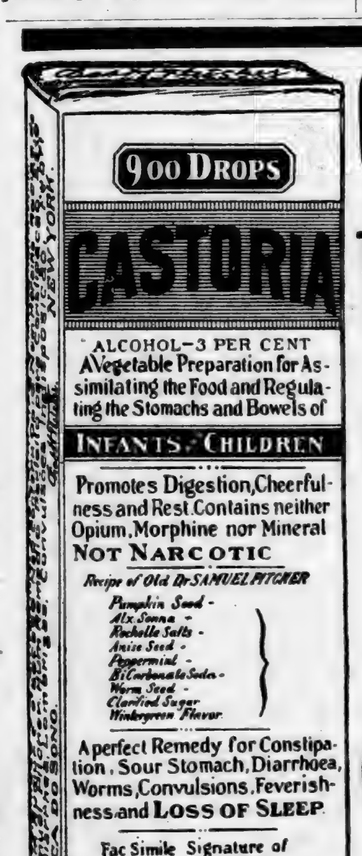
PAINFUL, TRYING TIMES

"Every Picture Tells a Story"

Housework is hard enough for a healthy woman. The wife who has a bad back, who is weak or tired all the time finds her duties a heavy burden. Thousands of nervous, discouraged, sick women have traced their troubles to sick kidneys — have found quick and thorough relief through using Doan's Kidney Pills.

The trying times of woman's life are much easier if the kidneys are well.



A North Carolina Case

Mrs. J. W. Wilkinson, Statesville, N. C. says: "I suffered acutely from almost total suppression of the kidney secretions. My usual weight was 140 lbs., but I had run down to 90. STUDIES BIG PROBLEM

BUREAU OF SOCIAL HYGIENE IS EXPLAINED.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., Tells of Its Origin, Work and Plans for the Investigation of Vice Conditions.

New York, Jan. 27.—In order that the public might better understand the Bureau of Social Hygiene, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., today gave out a statement explaining the origin, work and plans of that institution. The bureau, he said, came into existence about two years ago as a result of the work of a special grand jury appointed to investigate the white slave traffic in New York city. This jury recommended that a public commission be appointed to study the social evil.

Mr. Rockefeller was foreman of that grand jury and he thereafter gave the subject deep thought and conferred with a large number of leading men and women. "These conferences," says Mr. Rockefeller, "developed the feeling that a public commission would labor under a number of disadvantages, such as the fact that it would be short lived; that its work would be done publicly; that at best it could hardly do more than present recommendations. So the conviction grew that in order to make a real and lasting improvement in conditions, a permanent organization should be created, the continuation of which would not be dependent upon a temporary wave of reform, nor upon the life of any man or group of men, but which would go on, generation after generation, continuously making warfare against the forces of evil. It also appeared that a private organization would have, among other advantages, a certain freedom from publicity and from political bias, which a publicly appointed commission could not so easily avoid.

"Therefore, as the initial step, in the winter of 1911 the Bureau of Social Hygiene was formed. Its present members are Miss Katharine Bement Davis, superintendent of the New York State Reformatory for Women at Bedford Hills, N. Y.; Paul M. Warburg, of the firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Co.; Starr J. Murphy, of the New York bar, and John D. Rockefeller, Jr. As the work develops new members may be added.

"One of the first things undertaken by the bureau was the establishment at Bedford Hills, adjacent to the reformatory, of a laboratory of social hygiene, under Miss Davis' direction. In this laboratory it is proposed to study from the physical, mental, social and moral side each person committed to the reformatory. This study will be carried on by experts and each case will be kept under observation for from three weeks to three months, as may be required. When the diagnosis is completed, it is hoped that the laboratory will be in position to recommend the treatment most likely to reform the individual, or, if reformation is impossible, to recommend permanent custodial care. Furthermore, reaching out beyond the individuals involved, it is believed that thus important contributions may be made to a fuller knowledge of the conditions ultimately responsible for vice. If this experiment is successful the principle may prove applicable to all classes of criminals and the conditions precedent to crime, and lead to lines of action not only more scientific and humane but also less wasteful than those at present followed."

That its work might be done intelligently the bureau employed George J. Kneeland to make a comprehensive survey of vice conditions in New York, and Abraham Flexner to study the social evil in Europe, and their reports are now being prepared. These studies will be followed by others in various American cities, and it is the hope of the bureau that, based upon all of them, may be devised a practical plan for dealing with the social evil.

In conclusion Mr. Rockefeller's statement says: "It cannot be too strongly emphasized that the spirit which dominates the work of the bureau is not sensational or sentimental or hysterical; that it is not a spirit of criticism of public officials; but that it is essentially a spirit of constructive suggestion and of deep scientific as well as humane interest in a great world problem."

He came into the car with swagger, took the only vacant seat with outward manifestations of his belief in his own importance, kicking the big yellow valise belonging to the sapping old woman next to him aside to make way for his tan-shod feet. The owner did not notice this, but when aroused at Fifty-second street, she fumbled about his left foot with her hand, trying to find it, only to exclaim with much embarrassment: "Ach! I excuse me, but it look just like mine leg."

IDEA ANNOYED OLD GOLDE

He Knew From Experience That College Education by No Means Unfitted Boy for Work.

"Woodrow Wilson naturally believes in a college education for boys and girls alike," said a banker at the Princeton club in New York.

"Mr. Wilson, lunching with me here, once said in his quaint way that the old idea about a college education unfitting a lad for work had quite died out.

"When Gobsa Golde's son Scattergood," he explained, desired to go to Princeton, he said to the old man:

"'Pater, is it true that boys who go to college are unfit for work afterward?'

"'Of course it ain't true!' snorted the old man indignantly. 'Why, I've got a Princeton graduate runnin' my freight elevator, two of my best coal heavers are Harvard A. B.'s and a Yale B. S. is my star truck driver."

ECZEMA FOR TEN YEARS

1809 Little Walsh St., Baltimore, Md.—"I was afflicted with eczema for about ten years, the most tormenting and agonizing. It was dry eczema, all itching. It was scratch, scratch, scratch and burn, burn, burn. By scratching I brought sores which scabbed. I tried all remedies which I knew or heard of; some gave me temporary relief, but none permanent cure. I couldn't sleep for scratching, after which there was burning. I saw the advertisement for free samples of Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment and wrote for them. They did me good immediately and I then bought a box of Cuticura Ointment and a cake of Cuticura Soap. I was cured in two weeks." (Signed) George Wooden, Jan. 21, 1912.

"'There are other things in the world besides money—and money will buy them all.'"

Many who have used Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery testify that they have been restored to health when suffering from stomach and liver ills. Let this famous old medicine start today to lead you to health and strength.

The Best Physicians Gave Him Up

"I was attacked with a severe nervous disease, which was caused by a disordered stomach and liver," writes Mr. Jas. D. LIVELY, of Washburn, Tenn., Route 2, Box 33. "All my friends thought I would die and the best physicians gave me up. I was advised to try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and derived much benefit from same. My case had run so long, it had become so chronic, that nothing would effect a permanent cure, but Dr. Pierce's medicine has done much for me, and I highly recommend it. I heartily advise its use as a spring tonic and further advise ailing people to take Dr. Pierce's medicines before their diseases have run so long that there is no chance to be cured."

Don't be poisoned by sluggish bowels. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Sugar coated, tiny granules.

DOWN TO THE BARE FACTS

Young Minister's Passion for Self-Sacrifice Had Results That Might Have Been Anticipated.

The announcement of Miss Helen Miller Gould's betrothal led one of the charity workers of New York to say:

"Marriage itself will not be able to quench Miss Gould's passion for giving. Apropos to this passion, she once told me a story.

"There was a young minister, the story ran, who, being poor and having nothing else to give, used to give away his clothes.

"The young minister's district contained many needy men, and he would give them shoes and socks, shirts and coats, gloves, overcoats and trousers.

"Yes, time and again he would give away his clothes, foolishly and recklessly, piece by piece, until—"

Here the charity worker smiled.

"Until," she ended, "he came to himself!"

A little four-year-old girl, whose parents had been discussing an approaching meeting in connection with the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, begged to be taken. Her mother explained that the meeting would not amuse her, but she persisted in her demand, and finally her mother agreed to take her if she promised to be very quiet.

She was very good throughout the greater part of the proceedings, but after listening patiently to the speeches for some time she whispered to her mother:

"Mummy, this is dull! When is the cruelty going to begin?"

Feed Your Crops Available Potash

Insoluble plant foods are cheap in the beginning but may be dear in the end. We feel good when we hear that the soil contains enough Potash to raise 5000 crops, but we feel tired when we discover that it will take 1000 years or so to make it available. We will be converted into plant food ourselves long before that.

POTASH The acids derived from green manure may make insoluble phosphate of lime more available. But the feldspathic Potash in the soil is less soluble in these acids than in the slightly alkaline waters of the best soils. A little soil Potash becomes available yearly, but not enough to provide for profitable crops.
Crops have two periods of Potash hunger. One just after germination and the other when starch formation is most rapid—when the grain is filling. Rational fertilization requires ample available Potash at these periods and if you provide it you will find that Potash Pays. Send for our pamphlet on making fertilizers.

Death Lurks In A Weak Heart

MORGAN SOFTENS WITH AGE

Incident of the Church Collector Shows Great Banker Is Getting a Bit Milder.

John Pierpont Morgan—to give him all of his name—has softened and humanized of late years. He still has a roar that starts the ink in the office wells spouting like geysers, and can glare a hole through a chilled steel safe. But beneath the rough outer husk he is a pretty warm-hearted old man.

"He hasn't softened enough to spread," said an acquaintance, "but he is a blander banker than he used to be. The time was when solicitors, even for worthy objects, were protected by no office game law. Nowadays, if they get past the elephantine Celt at the door and attract the eye of the old man as he sits at his big desk overlooking the common corridor, they are fairly certain of a hearing. The other day a church collector ran the gauntlet, but by the time he had reached the last assistant secretary he had been reduced to a state of twittering palsy.

"'Bring him in,' Morgan ordered. The solicitor knockkneed his way into the presence. 'What do you want?'

"It was a study in stutters that the unfortunate offered. His cause was just, all right, but his vocal cords had jelled. Out of the mess of clicks and false starts Morgan learned that he wanted $200.

"'You should not have come to me,' said Morgan.

"The solicitor hopelessly agreed.

"'Never come in here again,' said Morgan.

"The solicitor's face brightened. That was one worry off his mind.

"'Now,' said Morgan, 'get out. Here is $500.'"—Chicago News.

GETTING IT DEFINED.

Old Newton, a well-known London magistrate, once had a crazy street-preacher before him, charged with obstructing the thoroughfare. He saw that he was a harmless imbecile, and, being a kind-hearted man, did not feel like punishing him, so he said: "Of course we can't have thoroughfares obstructed in this way; but if you can give me the name of a friend who will be your surety that there will be no recurrence of this nuisance, I'll discharge you." "I have no friend," said the man, "save the Lord." "Quite so," said old Newton; "but I mean a friend who is a householder in London." "The Lord," said the man, "is everywhere." "Certainly, certainly," said Newton, as he took a fresh pinch of snuff and twisted up his brow; "but I must trouble you for a surety of—well, of what I might call a more settled residence."

PROVIDING INSPIRATION.

"I want you to write me a play," said the great manager.

"On any especial line?"

"Yes. I have a lot of good press notices about some shows of mine that failed last season. They're too good to waste and I want you to write me up a drama that will fit them."

BIBLE PURGATORY EXISTS IN THIS LIFE.

"Saved So as by Fire" Is Not Literal Fire.

Pastor Russell Points Out That Dante's Picture of Purgatory Has Little Foundation In Bible—Thinks Many Have Been Under Kind of Hoodoo.

PASTOR RUSSELL

Kansas City, Mo., ——.—Pastor Russell spoke twice here today. We quote his discourse from the text, "Saved so as by fire" (I Corinthians iii, 15). He said in part:—

The Catholic thought of Purgatory has been opposed by Protestants upon the plea that Purgatory is not mentioned in the Bible. Let us admit that no such Purgatory as Dante pictured has any volume of foundation. Let us admit that not all that Catholics have claimed respecting Purgatory is either Scriptural or logical.

But let us admit also that there are Scriptures (of which our text is one) which tell of a salvation by "fire" that evidently is not the salvation in which the "elect" of God will participate as "more than conquerors" through obediently following in the footsteps of Jesus their Redeemer. Indeed, our text is the principal one used by our Catholic brethren in support of their Purgatory.

Purgatory In Our Text.

But if the Pastor did not agree with the Protestants that there is no Purgatory taught in the Bible, neither did he agree with the Catholics respecting the kind of a Purgatory, for he proceeded to show that his text referred, not to a place of suffering, a purgation that existed in the Apostle's day, but that the Apostle was here speaking prophetically, of the end of this Gospel Age—foretelling a purgatorial condition at that time—not after men have died, nor in another world, but in the present life, and on this earth.

Indeed, said Pastor Russell, not only is the fire of this text symbolical of trouble, but the same is true of nearly all that is said about fire in the Bible There is a process of destruction, consumption. God's righteousness is spoken of as a consuming fire which burns against all sin and unrighteousness.

The context shows that the Apostle is discussing the Church in her earthly estate; that some of the brethren would not at the time appreciate the difference between "the gold, silver and precious stones" of the Divine promises and the cheaper materials—likening them to "wood, hay and stubble;" but that a day would come in the end of the Age when the Lord would specially test His people and when the tests would be severe and crucial like fire. In that day wood, hay and stubble would be consumed; but the gold, silver and precious stone characteristics of the true faith and proper character-building would remain. We are not to understand him to mean that doctrines are all-important, but rather that they are reflected in the character-development of the individual who without them would be unable to stand in the testings that would surely come in the close of this Age.

The Apostle points out, however, that all who build their faith on Christ will eventually be saved, no matter how much error they may get into—even though their entire faith structure is wrong and will be consumed in the foretold fiery trial. All who build faith on Him, in full accord with the Divine Revelation, obediently, will become joint-heirs with the Redeemer in His Kingdom, while those who build their faith on Him, and maintain it even through error, will be eventually saved, though to a lower salvation. Theirs will be a purgatorial experience—purifying, sanctifying, fitting them for an inferior blessing on the spirit plane, serving before the throne instead of in the throne.

Living In Time Mentioned In Text.

Apparently we are now living in the very time mentioned in our text. Many of God's people under the fiery trials of "higher criticism" and "science falsely so called" experienced a loss of all the faith they possessed, because they possessed only the wood, hay and stubble of human tradition, and not the gold, silver and precious jewels of the Divine Revelation.

Indeed, according to prophecy, we see that the time is fast approaching when God will have a further reckoning with the Gentiles and especially with the portion called Christendom. Richly favored, the responsibilities have been proportionate. The squaring of that account means "a time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation."

But it will not be in another world nor in another life nor eternal in duration. Instead, God will merely permit the race, in selfishness of heart rejecting His counsels, to wreck present civilization to such an extent that, unless those days were shortened, there would no flesh be saved. But on account of the elect those days will be shortened, by the establishment of God's Kingdom, to restrain evil, to enlighten the world and to assist the willing and obedient back into the harmonies and likeness of God.

EFFECT OF DISCRIMINATION

For the fiscal year 1906-07, ending June 30, 1907, just previous to the unfair agitation and discrimination against it, The Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company enjoyed a gross earning within the State of Alabama of $9,908 per mile.

The L. & N. was then operating within the State of Alabama 1,256 miles of road. The total gross earnings for that fiscal year were therefore $12,444,448.

The extreme discrimination practiced against the L. & N. was at its height during the fiscal years of 1907 to 1909 inclusive.

For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1908, the L. & N. showed a gross earning within the State of Alabama of only $9,017 per mile, a loss in earnings of $891 per mile.

The L. & N. was then operating within the State of Alabama 1,268 miles of road. The total decrease in earnings for the fiscal year was therefore the enormous amount of $1,129,788.

For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1909, the L. & N. showed a gross earning within the State of Alabama of only $8,748 per mile, a decrease in earnings over 1906-7 of $1,160 per mile.

The L. & N. was then operating within the State of Alabama, 1,269 miles of road. The decrease in earnings for that fiscal year over the fiscal year ending June 30, 1907, therefore reached the stupendous figure of $1,472,040; or $122,670 per month; or $4,089 per day.

We submit that there is not a business organization, not only in the State of Alabama but in the United States, which could withstand for any length of time this enormous drain on its financial resources, while it was at the same time required to maintain its service, and meet the increased cost of material and living with an increase in operating expenses.

Is it any wonder that on the showing made the courts granted relief? And is there any mystery about the refusal of those responsible for that condition to take the case to the Supreme Court of the United States?

While the enormous decrease in the earnings of the L. & N. was taking place, every railroad in Alabama (with one single exception), some of which showed earnings far in excess of the L. & N., were permitted to collect rates of from 20 per cent. to 50 per cent. more than the rates the L. & N. was permitted to charge.

Be fair, people of Alabama; consider these facts, and render justice where justice is due.

MR WHITE WRITES INTERESTINGLY OF TRIP

Leaving Montgomery January 7th, 1913, on the A. C. L. railroad at 6:10 o'clock a.m., we arrived in Jacksonville, Fla. at 8:10 that night; we spent several days there very delightfully, being domiciled in a comfortable hotel, located near that magnificent river, St. Johns. We visited all the places of interest; among them, the ostrich farm at Phœnix park.

From this attractive city we boarded the Florida East Coast railroad for St. Augustine, a city of permanent population of about five thousand, but in Winter it has thrice that number, attracted there by its accessibility and its delightful climate. St. Augustine, being the oldest, is one of the most historic, picturesque and interesting little cities in America. It is located on a narrow peninsula, formed by the Matanzas river on the one side and the San Sebastian on the other. Among other attractions is a park called "Plaza de la Constitucion." The Plaza is filled with palms, Spanish bayonets and other tropical trees, together with fountains, monuments ets.

As we pass on through the state of Florida, one never tires of the fascination of the tropical Tomoka; great live-oaks, festooned with garlands of grey Florida moss, and with mistletoe and air plants, thriving high upon their branches over-hanging the rivers. Stately palms and thickets of palmetto wave their verdant fans gently in the soft breeze; giant ferns and brakes, as high as a man's head, grow down to the water's edge. Wonderful grasses and flowering shrubs contribute to the beauty, and occasionally the sweet scent of the jasmine is wafted by a zephyr.

Now we arrive at Hotel Ormond, which is most picturesquely situated, with the beautiful Halifax in front and the Atlantic ocean surging only a few yards away on the other side. As we continue on our journey we now come to Palm Beach, which surpasses all other resorts in beauty, grandeur and Winter climate. The Royal Poinciana, which gives its name to the great hotel which has made Palm Beach famous all over the world; it is six stories high and fronts nearly one thousand feet; this front is on a beautiful lake, whose waters are kept back by a sea wall and rock cliff beach. For the most of the year, the dark green leaves of the Poinciana, which look like gigantic ferns, spread out in umbrella fashion to shade its bare branches, for the leaves grow only at the tips of the twigs. When Winter comes these leaves slowly drop away but when Spring comes it quickens the sap in the poinciana and turns it to fire. The tree bursts into a very flame with its riot of red bloom and here one may feast his eyes until he must turn away—turn to the cool spray from the white surf that crests the deep ultramarine of old ocean's breakers beating on Palm Beach.

Leaving here we took the train for Miami, a city between five and six thousand. During the Winter this population is augmented by the addition of thousands of visitors, who come to enjoy the ideal climate and the finest fishing in the world. To accommodate these visitors there are numerous hotels, principal among which is the stately Hotel Royal Palm. Miami has the most perfect Winter climate in the United States. Cold is almost unknown; the warmth of Summer is tempered by the cooling breezes from the Atlantic.

There are yachts, power boats and house boats without number on this peaceful and shallow sea called Bay Biscayne. This is the home of the game king-fish, Spanish mackerel and a dozen other favorites. Miami has miles and miles of beautiful streets of native white stone. From St. Angustine to Miami we were in sight of the far famed Indian river for nearly one hundred miles; the scenery is grand, and here fishing, wild duck shooting, deer hunting, sailing and rowing can be indulged in to the heart's content of the most fastidious sportsman. Miami is beautifully situated amid a great forest of palms, cocoanut trees and the poinciana. The lands are devoted to truck farming and to tropical fruits, especially oranges, grape-fruit, avocado and sapodillas

Leaving Miami for Key West you travel by railroad over the sea. The Florida keys may be called a series of stepping stones leading into the ocean; they extend between the Florida peninsula and Key West in the form of a curve, the channels between the islands varying from a few hundred feet to several miles in width. Nearly thirty islands are used for short stretches of the construction; more than fifty miles of rock and earth embankment will have been built where the intervening water is shallow, but where the water is deeper and the openings are exposed to the storms, concrete arch viaduct construction is used, consisting of fifty foot reinforced concrete circula-arch spans and piers, with occasional span of sixty feet. This was the most difficult part of the work. It may be needless to say that the building of the concrete viaducts has been the most interesting phases of the project, not only because of the size of the larger ones, but by reason of their location. They were constructed literally upon the open sea. This is one of the most remarkable pieces of railroad engineering in the world.

This lands us at Key West; this city is noted for its large cigar factories and sponge fishing; the roadways are of coral rock and the sail triturated coral. Next morning we took a palatial steamer ("Governor Cobb") over the Atlantic, the beauties of which cannot be excelled by any waters.

We arrived in Havann, Cuba at the close of the day, having looked upon landscape scenes that no artist can excel. One of the memorable scenes of the trip will be upon the arrival at the entrance to the Havana harbor; on one side is historic Morro Castle and Cabanas fortress, the home of the Cuban artillery; directly ahead is the wreck of the Maine. After the health officer boards the vessel and gives a "clean bill of health," the Captain of the Port receives the vessel. The preliminary visit of the costom house officers over, all passengers are permitted to board the tender, ready for taking them ashore; all passengers are landed at La Machina, a wharf which takes its name from the large derrick adjourning, errected by the Spaniards for the purpose of handling the heavy guns on the war-ships.

Located in the mort aristocratic part of the city, free from all noise, but one half block from the "Champs de Elysses" of this Paris of the Western Hemisphere, the Sevilla offers to the public every modern convenience known to to hotel construction. Among the places of interest is the trip to Moro and Fortress Cabanas. To visit these places one takes one of the small harbor boats and lands at Moro landing. Following an old shaded walk, after a steep climb, comes to the ancient drawbridge. Here, as in days of yore, a sentinel halts you, examines your pass and, if all is well, allows you to enter. One feels a depression while within its gloomy walls and the tales by your guide, of the human suffering endured therein, [illegible] long dark corridors and satisfy onesself with but a glance within the dark recesses of the dungeon.

As one is conducted to the seaward side and catches a glimpse of the beautiful deep blue waters, he feels a relief, until shown an innocent looking chute leading down to the depths, and is told, prisoners were often cast alive into this chute and hurled to their death in the waters below. Towering above Moro is the great light house, built in 1844 by the then Governor General, O'Donnell. The guns on Moro are neither of great age nor modern. They are the best of any fortification in Cuba. Twelve of the cannons destined to guard the channel of the horbor, are known as "The Twelve Apostles," and each bears its Apostolic name.

Columbus Cathedral, where the bones of the great discoverer rested, is of the Hispano-American type of architecture, with two towers and a dome and is built of Cuban limestoue. Two of the bells still ring out their deep rich tones at all hours of the day and night. From Vento comes the drinking water, said to be absolutely pure, that supplies the city of Havana. The main shopping streets are O'Reilly and Obispo, which are unique in their way; so narrow that an ordinance prohibits vehicles from going in but one direction. Tobacco, like sugarcane, is grown in every province. Sugarcane grows in new land from fifteen to to twenty years with one planting, but is cut every eighteen months Havana is noted for its large cigar factories and sugar mills. Cuba has a large variety of fruits; some of the more prominent of these fruits are as follows: Grape-fruit, cocoanut, figs banan, which takes the place of bread, and mango sapota, granadilla. This fruit grows on the vine that bears the passion flower. The lover of the antique will feel at home in Havana, and to view the sunset is worth the trip to Cube.

We, now having traversed a good part of the South, turn our faces homeward.

A wedding of much interest is that of Miss Emma Stevall of Birmingham and Mr. J. S. Sanderson, of Maplesville, Ala

At the home of the Baptist pastor, Rev. F. M. Woods, at Maplesville, Ala., a most beautiful marriage was solemnized on Sunday evening at 6 o'clock, Rev. Chambers, of Stanton, officiating. The tying of the love- knot made one of South-land's lovliest daughters the bride of a most promising young Alabamian, whose business interests with the Twin-Tree Lumber Company at this place has made him quite a favorite. Both the bride and groom held responsible positions with the Twin-Tree people.

Immediately after the ceremony a four-course dinner was served, only a few friends being present.

JUDGE DEASON ON GOOD ROADS

Februrary 5, 1913

Mr. Editor:—

What about the roads? Have the people any suggestions to offer as to plans or methods for improving highways? If any one can assist in offering suggestions for the betterment of our roads I am sure the Commissioners' Court would appreciate such help.

I wish that those who oppose the issuing of bonds for road building could spend ten days with me in the office of Judge of Probate and hear the great number of complaints about our roads and the plea for help from the Court.

I am inclined to believe that the sentiment as to bond issue would change. The time has come, in Chilton county, when the people can no longer keep the roads in good repair by the old method of working them; tne traffic is too heavy. The demand for good roads is increasing every year, every month, every day.

I do not want the people to do anything that would hinder or retard the progress of our county, but, on the other hand I would like to see everything done to make our county occupy her rightful place among her sister counties— the greatest county in Alabama. For us to keep pace with other counties we must build our roads. To do this we must have money, and to secure sufficient money we must necessarily issue bonds.

The Federal government has appropriated money for improving our post roads or rural routes. The State has appropriated money to aid in building roads, but for us to secure any of such funds we must approprite a certain amount from our county treasury. We will lose what the Federal and State governments offer unless we are able to furnish our share of the necessary funds.

I am ready, and feel that I am right, for the county to issue bonds to obtain the necessary money for the building of our post roads or rural mail routes. I am not for a special highway from this point, or that, but believe that the county can and should build the rural mail routes first, for in doing so we could accommodate more people and do the greatest good to the greatest number.

About twelve months ago, the county papers were full of road news and I would like to hear from any and all on the the subject of improving our roads. Let's think and write without prejudice and try to arrive at what would be best to do.

Respectfully,
E. B. Deason.

COUNTY COURT

The February term of the County Court was quite light the following cases were disposed of by Judge Deason:—

Harrison Smith, P. D.; nolprossed.

Abiedee Smith, P. D.; defendant pleads guilty and is fined $10.00 and costs.

Abiedee Smith, A. L.; defendant pleads guilty and is fined $5.00 and costs.

Jno. Clark, cutting timber of another; continued.

Jno. Williams, vagrancy; defendant pleads guilty and is fined $20.00 and costs and an additional term of thirty days.

Dennis Milbert, vagrancy; defendant pleads guilty and is fined $10.00 and costs and an additional term of thirty days.

Clarence Alexander, vagrancy; defendant pleads guilty and is fined $10.00 and costs and an additional term of thirty days.

C. E. Holley, V. P. L.; defendant pleads guilty and is fined $50.00.

Clyde Matthews, S. L.; discharged.

Arthur Robinson, S. L.; discharged.

THE OPPORTUNITY AND TIME TO HELP OUR BOYS

In looking over last Saturday's Ledger, I see that two of our Chilton boys have a good fighting show for a free trip to Washington offered by the Ledger, and I think we should take it as a matter of public pride to assist those boys in their laudable ambition.

Now, I would not take this view if I did not think the Ledger one of our best and cleanest papers. As every one knows it always fights for what it thinks to be for the uplift of humanity. Anything savoring of morality finds active support in the Ledger.

In addition to its stand on moral questions, it has ever taken the lead in those moves which of themselves are peculiarly fitted to help the rural citizenship of the State. Take for instance its support of the Parcel Post movement. It did not cease its work in behalf of the people as soon as the measure was passed, but it began a free advertising system which would acquaint the rural people of the State with what the Birmingham merchants had for them and by so doing bringing them into closer relationship with each other.

Think over the foregoing and let us decide on helping the paper that is trying hardest to help us, and at the same time help two of our boys on to Washington.

Will not some person in each town of Chilton county take the matter up? Will not the teachers take up the work in their respective communities and help those boys secure one of the greatest educational trips yet offered? If any one feels disposed to assist in this move I would like to talk to you.

The only boys we have in the county contesting for the honor are Joe Kanjutzky and Lee Olive, both good und worthy boys. They launched the fight and pushed it to its present standing. Now, I think we should assist them they have shown their ability and willingness to help themselves.

Respectfully,
J. J. Pickens.

Dear Sir:—

I beg to submit herewith a report of my services rendered the Town of Clanton in the assessing and collection of taxes for the tax year 1912.

Under your direction and by approval of the Town Council, my services began on the second day of December, 1912, and as a general result of my emplovment I submit the following statement, to-wit:

Number of tax payers assessed		217
Number of errors, non-residents		4
Total		213
Number of taxpayers who have paid		204
Number filed in Chancery Court		9
Total		213
Amount of property tax assessed		$1771.64
Amount of errors	$ 2.65
Amount filed in Chancery Court	54.54
Amount collected and in Treasury	1714.45	$1771.64
Number of License issued		106
Collected for license		$1255.00
Making a total collected from property tax and license sold and now in the Treasury of the Town of Clanton, from these two sources		$2969.45

Your Town Clerk, Mr. N. A. Kicker has been very efficient in the discharge of his duty, and to his patience and persistency is due no small part of the successful work done.

Respectfully submitted,
J. P. VanDerveer,

LITTLE INTEREST IN POLITICS

Very Little Speculation Being Made Regarding Political Intentions of Office Seekers.

Montgomery.—At no time during the past five years have state officials manifested so little interest in Alabama politics as they have evidenced during the last few weeks. Generally speaking, they accept as certain the appointment of Bryan as Secretary of State in Wilson's cabinet. They are confident that Comer will run for Governor; they know that Walter D. Seed and Reuben F. Kolb will also make the race for that office. Other candidates are known to them—Nunnelee, Purifoy, Feagin, W. L. Martin, Wilkerson—all members of the state's official family, and the dozen or more candidates outside of that circle who will offer for some state office at the next general election. But however much state officials know concerning the political ambitions of their friends, there is little or no speculation.

Chief State Mine Inspector C. H. Nesbitt announced that every coal mine in Alabama was being operated now; that no shaft, drift or slope was standing idle or out of commission. This means that more than 200 coal mines are now running, that from 22,000 to 25,000 miners are at work, and that the sinking of new shafts or working of new properties is the only way by which the number of Alabama coal mines in operation can be increased.

STATES INDORSE DIRECT INCOME TAX

DELAWARE, WYOMING AND NEW MEXICO INDORSE AMENDMENT.

SUPPLANT CORPORATION TAX

Believe All Incomes Less Than $4,000 Will Be Exempt—Informal Notice of Ratification Given.

Washington.—Direct taxes upon the incomes of citizens of the United States, whether derived from idle capital or from the conduct of business, were made possible by the ratification of the sixteenth amendment to the federal constitution, Delaware, Wyoming and New Mexico indorsing the income tax amendment through their respective legislatures, completed a list of 38 states that have approved it, two more than the three-fourths necessary for its final adoption.

Leaders in Congress predicted that through this authorization the law which will be passed to levy the tax upon American incomes, will be introduced as soon as the extra session opens. Its exact terms have not been decided upon, but it is believed will exempt all incomes below $4,000 or $5,000, and will provide a tax of 1 per cent upon the majority of personal incomes that do not run to an excessive figure.

Informal notice of the final adoption of the new amendment was given to the Senate by Senator Brown of Nebraska, who introduced the resolution in 1909 upon which the proposal for an income tax was submitted to the states. Drafting of the bill to put the tax into effect, it is expected, will fall to the lot of Representative Hull of Tennessee, a member of the House ways and means committee, who drew the excise tax bill proposed last year by the democratic House of Representatives, but which did not become law.

The income tax will be designed to supplant the present corporation tax and will apply to the incomes of individuals, firms and corporations. In a statement Representative Hill declared he favored making the new tax an integral part of the financial system of the United States to remain in full force without regard to the character of tariff bills that Congress may enact from time to time.

GREEK-TURK FIGHT RESUMED.

Bombardment of Adrianapole and Tchatalja Began Simultaneously.

Constantinople.—It is officially announced that hostilities began punctually at 7 o'clock both at Adrianople and Tchatalja.

At Adrianople the allies began bombardment. At Tchatalja an insignificant skirmish occurred.

The consuls at Adrianople have requested the ambassadors here to arrange with the Bulgarian authorities for permission for 120 foreigners at Adrianople to pass through the Bulgarian lines. If this arrangement cannot be made, the ambassadors will ask that the Bulgarians respect that portion of Adrianople set apart for foreign residents.

Armistice Lasted Exactly Two Months

London.—The Balkan war has been resumed. The bombardment of Adrianople began at 7 o'clock and a small skirmish occurred at the Tchatalja lines. The armistice had lasted exactly two months.

Bulgaria has turned a deaf ear to the remonstrances of the powers and unless Turkey yields to the Balkan demands the allied armies will now attempt to drive her completely out of Europe.

NON-COMPETITORS CAN COMBINE

U. S. Supreme Court Makes Important Decision.

Washington.—For the first time the supreme court of the United States held in effect, in the "shoe machinery trust" case that the Sherman anti-trust law does not forbid the mere combining of non-competitors in an industry. Solicitor General Bullitt for the government had contended that if the combination brought into one hand an "undue proportion" of the trade it was forbidden by the anti-trust law.

"The disintegration aimed at by the statute does not extend to reducing all manufacture to isolated units of the lowest degree," declared Justice Holmes in announcing the unanimous decision of the court that the mere organization of the United Shoe Machinery company by the heads of several non-competing groups of shoe manufacturers had not been a violation of the law.

TWO GRAVE PROBLEMS

DEMOCRATS MUST FACE TARIFF AND CURRENCY.

These Colossal Questions Press for Immediate Attention and Are Enough for the Party to Tackle at Present.

The Democracy already has its work out out for it. Two great problems face us which cannot be ignored. One is the direct heritage of the Republican regime of privilege and plutocracy. That is the tariff situation. The other is becoming daily more acute through the very growth of our trade and resources. That is the currency question.

Speaking frankly, it is the misfortune of the party about to assume the reins that these colossal questions both press upon us at the same time. Great political campaigns have been one-issue campaigns. The law of political accomplishment is the law of concentration. But circumstances are inexorable. The Republicans dodged the question of tariff reform after the plain popular mandate of 1908; we have it left over, and must face two problems at once.

Therefore, let us not deliberately take up a third issue of the first magnitude.

The great citadel of the forces of privilege is the tariff. The tariff barons—steel, lumber, rubber, wool—are the men who control the railway situation and the banking situation today. Tariff revision is the first essential of really Democratic government in a country weary of government by and for privilege.

Currency reform means the restoration of a normal equilibrium to a money situation dominated by a little knot of bankers who have grown great, not on straight banking, but on the manipulation of industrial combinations protected by tariff monopolies. They now have power to bring on an artificial panic if so disposed.

These two tasks are enough, in all conscience. Shall we take up concurrently the examination of the resources behind more than $18,000,000,000 of railway securities, with a view to the regulation of income upon them?

The Adamson bill passed without a dissenting voice. This means that the Republican remnant has no desire to act the part of an intelligent and patriotic minority in a Democracy—the restraint of the majority from ill-considered acts by just criticism and by adverse votes. The Republicans in congress care not what happens to the country if only they can involve things in the comprehensive snarl that will discredit the Democrats.

Getting Into Clover.

The year 1913 will be significant in American history as the date of the return of the Democratic party to power for the first time since the Cleveland administration. No wonder the Democratic hosts are bubbling over with enthusiasm. But there are evidences of a chastened feeling as the realization of the party's great responsibility grows. While the spoilsmen of the party are hungrily awaiting the time when the bars to the clover patch will be let down, the leaders are conscious of the fact that their victory was made possible alone by the division of the Republican ranks; that the party is in reality entering upon a period of trial and probation; and that if platform promises are not redeemed Wilson probably will conclude his administration with a hostile congress. The seductive clover patch of the spoils is the gravest peril to Democratic success.

Believes in His Party Creed.

Wilson is going to dominate the Democratic party because he is a believer in its creed, "Equal rights for all, special privileges for none." But he is going to dominate it no more than he is bound to do by the Constitution of the United States, which requires him to recommend legislation to the people. His power as a president is given him by the Constitution and by the force of public opinion. "Shall the people rule?" If Woodrow Wilson rules it will be because he is carrying out the will of the people. He is not going to blaze any new and untried trails. In the White House, as on the stump in the campaign, he will stand on the Democratic platform.

Sugar Trust Is Generous.

The sugar trust is willing to see a reduction on sugar, provided the "differential" is maintained.

Naturally. The "differential," or difference between the duty on raw sugar and that on refined sugar, is more than the total cost of refining. It gives the sugar trust absolute monopoly in the American market. The sugar trust knows where it is safe to be generous.

Wilson Can't Be Tangled.

Wilson sees straight, thinks straight, talks straight. He cannot be confused; he cannot be led off on side issues, he cannot be tangled in words. His mind is alert, keen, receptive. It is trained like an athlete's muscles. It responds instantly to any new strain thrown upon it. It is a clear mind, a capable mind; therefore it is an honest mind. Mental dishonesty is the vice of slovenliness and the refuge of incapacity. President-elect Wilson has none of it.

Depends.

Belle—Do you thing it is unlucky to marry in 1913?

Nell—Sure thing, if he's a poor man.

His Caliber.

"He has a heart of gold, a grip of iron and a will of steel."

"Humph! He must be a man of mettle."

High Cost of Living.

Madam—Were you downtown today, Mary?

Maid—Yes, mum; an' things cost so, mum. I spent $7, mum, an' only got a hat, a pair of shoes, an' some long gloves.—Judge.

Not a Compliment.

"Miss Brown," said the art inspector, pausing before a student's easel, "you might with all propriety worship that drawing of yours."

The poorest pupil in the class looked up, surprised and pleased.

"I'm so glad you like it, sir. But why—why—"

"The Bible expressly commands us not to worship the likeness of anything in the heavens above or in the earth beneath, does it not?"

Hit the Danger Spot.

A tippler with a very red nose got a day's work as a laborer in a boiler works. The same day he appeared before the surgeon at the hospital with his nose smashed.

"Good gracious!" exclaimed the surgeon. "How did you manage to get your nose smashed like that?"

"Oh," cried the sufferer, "I put my nose through a hole in the boiler for a sniff of fresh air, and the man outside with the hammer mistook it for a red-hot rivet. And he only hit once that's all."

SURE.

"What do you mean by bringing home a bird of that size?"

"Well, we can make up for the size by stuffing it good."

Infantile Paralysis.

The horrors of infantile paralysis will not be alleviated by the note of Dr. Simon Flexner and two associates, appearing in the Journal of the American Medical Association, that the healthy parents of patients may be carriers of the disease. Dr. Flexner reports that washings from the nasopharynx of the parents of a child suffering from an acute attack were inoculated on October 28 last in a monkey, the Macaucus synomolgus:

"Recovery from the anesthetic was prompt and the animal remained well until November 11, when it was noted to be excitable and to drag the right leg. The left leg proved to be weak. November 12 the right leg was definitely flaccid."

Two days later portions of the spinal cord and medulla showed typical lesions of experimental poliomyelitis."

COFFEE THRESHED HER. 15 Long Years.

"For over fifteen years," writes a patient, hopeful little Ills. woman, "while a coffee drinker, I suffered from Spinal Irritation and Nervous trouble. I was treated by good physicians, but did not get much relief.

"I never suspected that coffee might be aggravating by condition. (Tea is just as injurious, because it contains caffeine, the same drug found in coffee.) I was down-hearted and discouraged, but prayed daily that I might find something to help me.

"Several years ago, while at a friend's house I drank a cup of Postum and though I had never tasted anything more delicious.

"From that time on I used Postum instead of coffee and soon began to improve in health, so that now I can walk half a dozen blocks or more with ease, and do many other things that I never thought I would be able to do again in this world.

"My appetite is good, I sleep well and find life is worth living. A lady of my acquaintance said she did not like Postum, it was so weak and tasteless.

"I explained to her the difference when it is made right—boiled according to directions. She was glad to know this because coffee did not agree with her. Now her folks say they expect to use Postum the rest of their lives." Name given upon request. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

"Postum now comes in concentrated powder form, called Instant Postum. It is prepared by stirring a level teaspoonful in a cup of hot water, adding sugar to taste, and enough cream to bring the color to golden brown.

Instant Postum is convenient; there's no waste; and the flavour is always uniform. Sold by grocers—45 to 50-cup tin 30 cts., 90 to 125-cup tin 50 cts.

A 5-cup trial tin mailed for grocer's name and 2-cent stamp for postage. Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., Battle Creek, Mich.—Adv.

The editor has been "under the weather" for the past two weeks, suffering intensely with lumbago. If you've had it we are confident we have your sympathy; if you've never had it, don't court it, for it's unpleasant company.

With the coming of the oil mill —which is certain—there will be several other improvements that are bound to follow. Improvements which are vital necessities to the welfare of the town.

Well, one more home has gone up in flames all for the want of water works and an adequate fire fighting system. How much longer, Oh, patient and long suffering citizens? How much longer ye property owners and insurance payers?

In this issue of the Press will be found a letter from Judge Deason on the road situation. Goodness knows the present condition of the roads is enough to make most of us talk.

Judge Deason defined his position clearly; he is not attacking the position of any other person—nor does he want to lag politics or religion into the controversy. He is seeking for light; having tried, ineffectively the old "warning" system and the new road law, he now advocates a bond issue. Not so much that he and his court may be in control as that we may secure good roads by the only method known to science for building them cheaply, conservatively and well. Who next? It's bound to come.

In this issue occurs a communication from Prof. Pickens of the Clanton High School with reference to the free trips to the inauguration of President-elect Woodrow Wilson. This occasion will, perhaps, be one of the most simple and yet most brilliant and historical that has taken place in Washington for many, many years. W odrow Wilson is a Southerner —l birth and by choice; he is the first to occupy the presidential chair in more than a generation; the second democrat in the memory of the oldest of most of us.

This free trip—offered by the Birmingham Ledger—will be accorded to sixty young men of Alabama; it will prove a liberal education; a pleasure to linger in the memory of the successful boys long after their heads have been silvered by time and their eyes grow dim with age.

It will cost comparatively little if our citizens should undertake to help the two worthy Clanton boys who now stand a most excellent chance to win the coveted places; without question the aid given them will be deeply appreciated. Give them your assistance; do not try to "crowd them out" in the hope of conferring the pleasure upon some other Chilton county boy; they are the only ones in this county who have now a chance; if they fail we will be without a representative; if they succeed Chilton will have had the pleasure of assisting two worthy young boys in a laudable ambition—an ambition which they cannot see realized without your help.

The report of Tax Commissioner VanDerveer, who was appointed by the City as special tax agent, which appears today, shows two things very clearly; first it demonstrates the willingness of the citizens to support its institutions when properly approached, and second, it shows what systematic, intelligent work can accomplish.

There is no doubt that much, if not all, of the property listed in Clanton for taxation is valued far below its actual cost—but few citizens would take twice the amount assessed for the property; this, however, cannot be avoided by the city tax officials as they are not permitted by law to go above the state and county for the year previous; if, though, the county and state officials would "set the high water mark" Clanton's list of taxable property would more than double the amount required for its support and a first-class sewerage and waterworks could be installed which would bring in a certain, safe and sane revenue to the city, besides protecting property from fires and greatly reducing the insurance rate.

Would this not be a "safe" investment? Would it not be a wise one? Commissioner VanDerveer is to be congratulated upon his report; even more so than the report as presented would indicate, for since that report was submitted all but five of those owning property in Clanton have paid up —in full; three of the delinquents are non-residents and will doubtless pay as soon as notices are served; the other two, we understand, are young ladies who manage their own affairs and having never before paid City taxes were perhaps not aware of the fact that they would be required to do so this year.

Heart Symptoms

The ailments of women include symptoms of heart trouble known as palpitation of the heart. The palpitation is so violent at times as to be really painful and leads the patient to fear she has heart disease. Ninety per cent of such cases are not heart disease at all but only a symptom of a liver disorder which has affected the normal action of the heart, and on applying the proper remedies the unusual throbbing ceases. The stomach and digestion need strengthening and the depressing effect of these disorders on the female organism must be corrected. For the latter purpose there is no more effective remedy to be found anywhere than

DR. SIMMONS
Squaw Vine Wine

It conveys a strengthening influence to the delicate female organism, re-establishes regular and healthy periods, overcomes the painful symptoms, builds up the nerves and puts the generative system in fine healthy condition. For the liver and bowel disorders one or two doses of Simmons Liver Medicine is all that is needed. It clears the stomach and bowels of impurities, helps digestion and the proper nourishment of the body the result of which is sound, healthy conditions all through the system.

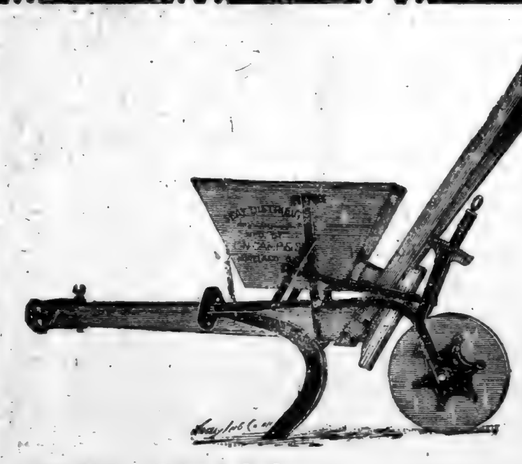
"Clean Up the Bowels and Keep Them Clean"

There are many remedies to be had for constipation, but the difficulty is to procure one that acts without violence. A remedy that does not perform by force what should be accomplished by persuasion is Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets. After using them, Mr. N. A. Waddell, 315 Washington St., Waco, Tex., says:



"Almost all my life I have been troubled with constipation, and have tried many remedies, all of which seemed to cause pain without giving much relief. I finally tried Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets and found them excellent. Their action is pleasant and mild, and their chocolate taste makes them easy to take. I am more than glad to recommend them."

"Clean up the bowels and keep them clean," is the advice of all physicians, because they realize the danger resulting from habitual constipation. Do not delay too long but begin proper curative measures.

Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets are a new remedy for this old complaint, and a great improvement over the cathartics you have been using in the past. They taste like candy and work like a charm. A trial will convince you.

Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets are sold by all druggists, at 25 cents a box containing 25 doses. If not found satisfactory after trial, return the box to your druggist and he will return your money.

Temperate Humanity.

The driver of a brewery wagon stopped at a restaurant where he delivered beer and prepared to water his horses. He had filled a pail from the street hydrant and was about to offer it to the near horse when the command, "Put that down," caused him to drop the bucket with a splash. Then a woman plunged a thermometer into the water.

"Too cold by several degrees," she said. "Get a pail of hot water from the restaurant."

The driver mumbled "What for?" but he was awed by the woman's commanding manner and he fetched the hot water as directed.

"Now," she said, "pour some of that cold water out and pour hot water into the pail until it registers about 57 degrees. Then water your horses. It is cruel to make a horse drink water colder than that, and every member of the S. P. C. A. that I have any influence with is going to keep an eye on you drivers and see that you temper the water you give to your horses."

When the Peanuts Ran Out.

For two hours an old back countryman, who had never before seen an elephant, had been standing before a row of them in enrapt silence dealing out peanuts one at a time. When the last was gone and no more forthcoming, Jumbo, the largest elephant, reached over and removed the entertainer's hat from his head to the top of a lion's cage nearby.

For the first time in two hours the old man expressed his emotions in words: "You old two-tailed Indian-rubber nuisance you!" he exclaimed, indignantly. "If I knew which end your head was on, I'd slap your face."

BOY OBEYED ORDERS GIVEN

Meant Well, but Information Was Not Welcomed by Hotel Manager Just at That Time.

A certain New York hotel manager is one of these nervous men who constantly warn their employes against keeping them in ignorance of any happening around the place. He hired a new bell boy recently, and gave him the usual warning:

"Remember," he warned, "if anything happens around here I'm to be the first person to know about it."

Soon after that he was showing three haughty Daughters of the Confederacy one of the best rooms in the place, when the new bell boy rushed in with his hair on end.

"Something's happened!" he yelled.

The three Daughters of the Confederacy turned coldly, and the manager, anxious to get rid of the boy, demanded to know the trouble.

"That old cat down stairs," said the boy, "has just had kittens. What shall we do?"

The manager's suggestion was rought.

THE JESTER'S VALENTINE

The writing of a Valentine
May seem an easy thing;
But you must use discretion
When you do it for a King.
—Mark Fenderson.

HEARTS AND DARTS OF ST. VALENTINE

'Tis the returning festival of the venerable Bishop Valentine, as berhymed by poets and beloved of lovers in these wireless telegraph days, as it was in Merrie England of old, when, as Charles Lamb records, "the weary and all forspent twopenny postman sank beneath a load of delicate embarrassment not his own."

What manenr of person was this saint of eternal youth, whose name so brightly burns and glows in the rubric? The Church Calendar assigns him to the distant date of 270 A. D., but gives no particulars. We do know, however, that through all these intervening centuries Saint Valentine's name has typified "that universal sweet unrest which impels poor humans to seek perfection in union." Also, that hearts and Hymen's darts, and rhymed madrigals, in which the sender's name must be read between the lines, have been from time immemorial associated with the date of Feb. 14, the good Bishop's birthday. The more chivalrous and devout men have been the more ardent in their observance of the sentimental anniversary.

Can any twentieth century valentine surpass this one of the Spanish knight-crusader, quoted by Lockhart?

"My ornaments are arms,
My pastime is in war,
My bed is cold upon the wold,
My lamp yon sear.

"My journeyings are long,
My slumbers short and broken;
From hill to hill I wander still,
Kissing thy token.

"I ride from land to land,
I sail from sea to sea;
Some day more kind I fate may find,
Some night kiss thee."

George Washington passed through more than one violent valentine courtship before he led the Widow Custis to the altar. You can read his love lyrics in any grown-up "Life."

His ecclesiastical contemporary, John Wesley, the founder of Methodism, could also pen an occasional valentine verse as well as a church hymn—as witness the following, only recently unearthed in one of his dairies, relating to his Georgia love affair with Sophy Hopkey:

"This day, to hearts united dear,
Sees my fond romance ever,
Why should her light feet linger here
To wait a laggard lover?

"Since my bereavement is begun,
I try, but cannot pray.
O Lord, since first I saw the sun
Was never such a day!"

On Cupids Day
One may, they say,
Send tokens to a friend,
Of love most true,
As mine for you
A love that never shall end.

Accept then, dear,
The token here,
That tells this love of mine.
Or else a dart
Will pierce the heart
Of your fond Valentine.

A Valentine Revival

Dr. March, on his rounds, dropped in to see Annie Tupper as a matter of course. Annie was a cripple and dependent for a home upon her married brother, a hard-working mechanic; and though her good friends, busy folk all called as often as they could to make sure that comforts were not lacking, she spent many hours alone. When Annie saw who was at the door her face brightened with pleasure, for the bluff, kindly old surgeon had been her friend and confidant for many years.

"What's all this, Annie?" he asked with interest; "been playing paper dolls all by yourself?"

She laughed in some embarrassment "There, now! I was hoping you didn't notice; but if you won't tell I'll let you into the secret. Well, doctor, I'm making valentines."

"Valentines!" There was wonderment in his tone.

"Sounds foolish, don't it? But it's like this: Sitting here alone, I guess I think more about the holidays than if I was up and doing; and sometimes I get low-spirited, thinking how much more they used to mean than they do now. Wicked; ain't it, and me so well fixed? The other day, when I saw how near the 14th was, I began thinking about the days when I was young and straight and pretty and used to get a peck of valentines every year. I was getting real sorry for myself, when all of a sudden, thinks I, 'Annie Tupper, do you s'pose your plain, middle-aged face is the only one St. Valentine don't notice nodadays? How many of your friends that's over fifty ever see a valentine any more?' To be sure, their lives are fuller'n mine, so maybe they don't miss such things much! but all the same I bet they like it when some one remembers. So I made a list of the getting-middle-aged ladies with no beaux or husbands, and the married ones with husbands that look too busy or matter-of-fact to remember birthdays and Valentine days and such things, and I made up my mind I'd send 'em each a little remembrance my own self, even if it wasn't much.

"I think it's a beautiful idea," said the doctor, heartily. He was deeply touched by the thought of those patient hands undertaking such a labor of love; he wondered, too, whether his own quiet, gray-haired wife was on the list, and counted remorsefully the years since he had remembered her violets on the good saint's anniversary. "You're a good little soul, Annie!" he added, impulsively.

"Not such a saint as I might be," Annie confessed, with a twinkle of fun in the brown eyes; "sometimes, looking through the list, I can't help being tickled, thinking what good subjects for 'comics' some of 'em would make. There's Mrs. Adams' slack housekeeping, and her bonnet over one eye; and the way Mrs. Wood gossips; and Mary Trask, with her big hats and short dresses and high heels, trying to look like a spring chicken; and—oh! lots of funny little ways that folks have. But when such things come to me, I remember how Mrs. Adams wore herself out nursing me when I had fever, and how generous Mrs. Wood is; and as for Mary, she's a perfect angel to her grumpy old father, and a master hand at cooking, as I've reason to know. Every one of 'em's been good to me, and I only wish I had something better to give than my little paper fixings."

Valentine's day arrived, bright and cold. Toward evening Doctor March could not resist dropping in to see Annie for a few moments. The invalid sat in her chair by the window, her face flushed with excitement and happiness. In her lap, caressed by her thin fingers, was a heap of bright cards and dainty trifles, while more substantial reminders of the day were in evidence.

Annie looked at him with radiant eyes, "Oh, Doctor March, what a good time I've had!" she sighed, blissfully. "Why, all day long the doorbell's been ringing, and valentines just pouring in—some of 'em so funny and cute they made me laugh, and some so sweet I 'most cried. And even my pussy cat got one—didn't you, Topsy? See the dear little bundle of catnip some one sent her! Folks have been good to me before, but it just seems as though these lovely, frilly, not-useful things make 'em seem more friendly than ever. Doctor," her face clouded with sudden anxiety, "you didn't tell on me, did you? I'm afraid it wouldn't be quite ge-neer-ous, if [illegible] to them. And wanted to sort of even up, you know."

After Long Suffering

Women Are Constantly Being Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"Worth mountains of gold," says one woman. Another says, "I would not give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for all the other medicines for women in the world." Still another writes, "I should like to have the merits of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound thrown on the sky with a searchlight so that all suffering women could read and be convinced that there is a remedy for their ills."

We could fill a newspaper ten times the size of this with such quotations taken from the letters we have received from grateful women whose health has been restored and suffering banished by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Why has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound accomplished such a universal success? Why has it lived and thrived and kept on doing its glorious work among the sick women of the world for more than 30 years?

Simply and surely because of its sterling worth. The reason no other medicine has ever approached its success is plainly and simply because there is no other medicine so good for women's ills.

Here are two letters that just came to the writer's desk—only two of thousands, but both tell a comforting story to every suffering woman who will read them—and be guided by them.

FROM MRS. D. H. BROWN.

Iola, Kansas.—"During the Change of Life I was sick for two years. Before I took your medicine I could not bear the weight of my clothes and was bloated very badly. I doctored with three doctors but they did me no good. They said nature must have its way. My sister advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I purchased a bottle. Before it was gone the bloating left me and I was not so sore. I continued taking it until I had taken 12 bottles. Now I am stronger than I have been for years and can do all my work, even the washing. Your medicine is worth its weight in gold. I cannot praise it enough. If more women would take your medicine there would be more healthy women. You may use this letter for the good of others."—Mrs. D. H. Brown, 809 North Walnut Street, Iola, Kan.

MRS. WILLIAMS SAYS:

Elkhart, Ind.—"I suffered for 14 years from organic inflammation, female weakness, pain and irregularities. The pains in my sides were increased by walking or standing on my feet and I had such awful bearing down feelings, was depressed in spirits and became thin and pale with dull, heavy eyes. I had six doctors from whom I received only temporary relief. I decided to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial and also the Sanitive Wash. I have now used the remedies for four months and cannot express my thanks for what they have done for me.—Mrs. Sadie Williams, 455 James Street, Elkhart, Indiana.

REALLY NAMED FOR STATE

Mississippi River Steamers Originated Cognomen That Has Now Become Universal.

On the Mississippi river in olden days the passenger steamboats were very ornate affairs, vying with each other in garish glory. One owner hit on the idea of naming his steamboat's cabins instead of numbering them. So he named them in honor of the states of the union, each having above the door the gilt title of some state, the big central cabin being called the "Texas," after the largest state. Other boat owners took up the idea, and thus the word cabin was gradually alternated by "state" room. For years the best cabin was still known as the Texas. Then that sobriquet died with the ebbing glory of the old river steamers. But the word "stateroom" became incorporated into our language, and in time even broke into the dictionary, as does many another catch phrase. Not one person in a thousand who occupies a stateroom knows the term once meant "a room named for a state."

ROAD IMPROVEMENT

BOOST FOR GOOD ROADS LAW

Much Interest Shown at Meeting Held At Bloomington, Ill.—Many Improvements Are Made.

When a little country town of 700 people raises $4,200 to put in concrete pavement around the square, it is a sure sign that the good roads germ is active there. This is what the people of McLean, in McLean county, Ill., have done. Now they have hard pavement the year around where before the mud was frequently so deep that it was unsafe for a man to get out of the buggy to tie his horse.

The good roads germ has been working in several places in McLean county. Just outside of McLean is a strip of macadamized road that is still in good condition after eight years of service. Leading southwest from Bloomington is a stretch of the finest country road in the state—asphalt-bound macadam. Out a little farther on the same road a mile or two of water bound macadam is being put in. Next year the plan is to lay a mile of concrete road. Nor does the effort stop with the attempt to get satisfactory hard roads. There are drained, well crowned, well dragged earth roads everywhere—roads that good care has made as perfect as an earth road can be.

These were some of the things that members of the Illinois Highway Improvement association and others saw on a hurried visit to McLean county November 30. They came on invitation of Eugene Funk, a member of the state highway commission, says the Prairie Farmer. They went away more determined than ever to carry the fight for improved roads to a successful finish.

In a talk at the evening meeting President Edens of the highway improvement association stated that the association was not organized primarily in the interests of automobiles, but for the best interests of the state as a whole.

S. E. Bradt of Dekalb county, a road commissioner, said that his township has put in an average of two miles of macadam roads per year for the past seven years, at a cost of about $4,000 a mile. This money was taken out of the regular road funds. This year a mile of concrete road was put in. Mr. Bradt believes that this will prove the coming material for hard roads, as macadam roads need repairing all too frequently.

State Highway Engineer Johnson stated that if two per cent. of the roads in Illinois were paved these hard roads would reach all cities of 3,000 or more inhabitants, with possibly one exception; would reach most of the cities of 2,000 or more; and would serve four-fifths of the through traffic needs of the state. He advocated using the automobile license fund to make a start on such a system.

C. S. Miller of Alexander county stated that the people in the southern end of the state want the state to build the main roads, this to be followed by county improvement of the other roads, with perhaps some help from the state. They also advocate the use of convict labor on the roads, and the abolishment of two-thirds of the present number of highway commissioners.

He was followed by Mr. Donovan of the Highway Commissioners association. He said that the commissioners do not wish to block all changes of the present laws, but they do want fair treatment. He stated that much more would be accomplished under the present system if the commissioners had more money.

There is probably no man in Illinois who knows more about the road question than Homer C. Tice, chairman of the legislative good roads committee. His committee has devoted much time to investigating the problem from every possible angle, and is preparing a very comprehensive report to back up the bill which it will introduce into the legislature. Some of the best information received by the committee was from the rural mail carriers of the state. Answers to the questions sent out by the committee were received from 3,660 carriers.

To Provide Good Roads.

Every farmer and every automobilist in the country probably will be interested in knowing that the government, as the result of an appropriation of half a million dollars the last session of congress, is about to cooperate with the several states to provide good roads.

Experiments are to be made in the way of constructing smooth and broad highways in each state, if the authorities of the state agree to expend double the amount of money the government will disburse.

On account of bad roads many farmers report they are unable to get their produce promptly to the market, with the result that they lose millions of dollars annually.

IRON AND STEEL CONTINUE ACTIVE

Important Construction Work in Prospect—Stocks Are Quoted.

New York.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Review of Trade says:

"The business expansion which began in 1912 was steadily maintained throughout the first month of the new year, and reports from various sections continue satisfactory. Weather conditions affect trade adversely in certain lines and tariff uncertainty is responsible for conservative buying in lines affected. Labor troubles now apparently approaching adjustment have interfered with the demand for materials used in the manufacture of clothing, but the general effect on the dry goods trade is comparatively small. The iron and steel trade continues so active that only the incapacity of the mills to make prompt delivery prevents further expansion. The open winter has been generally favorable for new building and important construction work is in prospect.

"In view of the large excess of merchandise exports from this country during the past year, the fact that we have recently sent over $15,000,000 gold out of the country, is regarded as unusual development.

"Most of this has gone to Paris where the markets as in other European centers, are still disturbed by the Balkan crisis.

"Our own securities markets are quiet with little speculation."

New York.—Bradstreet's Review of Trade says:

"Although trade trends are running in a favorable direction, yet there is enough irregularity to divest the situation of uniformity. Over and beyond all is the fact that the larger centers of distribution continue to do remarkably well, this being most patent in cereal producing regions that were favored by heavy crops.

"Comparatively few places can boast of good seasonable retail trade, and for this mild weather must be held responsible. Money is easy, funds are returning from the interior in volume, and western bankks are liberal buyers of commercial paper though it is reported that the demand exceeds the supply. Stock market operations have been more active.

"The stock market appears to have been heavily oversold, and, on the whole, the tendency has bbeen upward. Most of the activity, however, has been contributed by a few stocks.

"Business failures for the week ending January 30, were 361, which compares with 312 in the like week of 1912. There were 25 failures in Canada.

"Wheat, including flour exports from the United States and Canada for the week ending January 30, total 5,370,916 bushels, against 3,157,469 bushels this week last year.

ALABAMA WINS KNAPP TROPHY.

Awarded Prize for Best Exhibition of Boys' and Girls' Canned Products.

Columbia, S. C.—The state of Alabama wins the national corn exposition trophy for the best showing in the girls' and boys' club work during the year 1912, according to the result of the judging announced.

This trophy is a handsome bronze bust of the late Dr. Seaman A. Knapp, the founder of the farmers' co-operative demonstration work, and is offered in connection with the exposition school for prize winners held during the first week of the exposition.

The team from each state competing for this prize is composed of five girls and 20 boys, all students at the prize winners' school.

It is on the combined score of these girls and boys that the state's score is made up. Alabama was found to have a score of 1672 out of a possible 2000. The boys have on exhibition here ten ears of corn each, the girls displaying 25 articles of canned products. The boys' score is based upon yield, ten ear exhibit, profit, written report of crop and percentage of members of the club reporting the girls' score is made up on quality and variety of exhibits, written history of crop and percentage reporting.

The formal presentation of the bust was made at the banquet given in honor of the students by the city of Columbia, which was attended by Secretary James Wilson and the agricultural committee of the House of Representatives.

ALMOST GOT PAST GOING

Miss Duff Writes Interesting Statement For Publication in the Behalf of Women.

Webster Springs, W. Va.—In an interesting letter from this place, Miss Agnes Duff says: "I had been afflicted with womanly trouble for three years, and felt weak all the time.

My back and sides ached so, I almost got past going.

I had used a great many different kinds of remedies, but they failed to do me any good.

I had heard of Cardui, the woman's tonic, and decided to try it. When I had used the third bottle of Cardui, I felt like a new person entirely. I gained both in health and weight.

I praise Cardui for my recovery and good health, and I feel sure it will do the same for others, as it has me, if they will only give it a trial."

The above letter is an earnest, frank statement of Miss Duff's opinion of Cardui. She has confidence in it, because it relieved her, after many different kinds of other remedies had failed, and she believes it will help you, just as it did her, if you will give it a fair trial.

We join Miss Duff in urging you to give Cardui a trial. It cannot harm you, and, judging from the experience of thousands of others, is almost sure to do you good.

Bachelor—I guess not. Do you count your money every night and morning.

Irreclaimable Skeptic.

How big an income should a young man have before he is justified in getting married? This question is asked in various departments of the Sunday papers at various seasons of the year, and it is variously answered. Conditions change and domestic happiness changes with the conditions.

The best answer we remember to have heard was given by a cynical bachelor and skeptic last week. This person was in the newspaper office when the woman editor opened her mail and read forth this question:

"Could a young couple be happy on $900 a year?"

"Sure they could," answered the skeptic eagerly. "They couldn't live together on it."

SCURF ON BABY'S HEAD

Campbell, Va.—"I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment for scurf on my baby's head and they made a complete cure. It came on her head soon after birth. It broke out in pimples and itched and she would scratch it and cause sores to form. Her head was very sore and her hair fell out in bunches. She was very cross and fretful and could not sleep at night. I tried many remedies, all failed, then I tried Cuticura Soap and Ointment and they commenced to heal at once. I put the Cuticura Ointment on, and a half hour after washed her head with the Cuticura Soap. I used them a month and she was cured entirely." (Signed) Mrs. W. B. McMullen, Mar. 8, 1912.

Smaller doses to children according to age. But be sure to get only the genuine Globe Pine Compound (Concentrated Pine). Each half ounce bottle comes in a sealed tin screw-top case. If your druggist does not have it he will quickly get it. Many mixtures are of large quantity and cheaper, but it is risky to experiment. This formula comes from a reliable doctor and is certain. WHY THE MEAL WAS HALTED

Nothing Seriously Wrong, but Old Gentleman Had Some Trouble With the Elusive Onion.

An aged country couple, on the urgent invitation of a grandson who lived in the city, were on for a visit. The grandson's wife was very anxious that the first meal should be one which the aged couple would enjoy after their long ride in the train, and accordingly the table groaned under its burden of good things to eat.

In the course of the repast she noticed several times that the old man seemed to be making little progress with the meal.

"What is the matter, grandfather?" she asked, "don't you like my dinner?"

"No, no, granddaughter," mumbled the old man, "it isn't that. Only I've a pickled onion in my mouth, and I hain't got but one tooth left, so it's harder'n Sam Hill to catch it, it's so lively. Just rest easy a spell till I git a holt on it and I'll be all right!"

Friendly Blow.

Louis Brownlow, Washington newspaper man, paused in a drug store in Greensboro, N. C., not so long ago, to ask for a match. While he was there a young colored chap came running in with a big gash the whole length of his skull, and apparently a good deal put out about some accident that had befallen him.

"What's happened to you?" asked Brownlow, excitedly but sympathetically.

"A friend hit me with a hatchet," replied the bleeding stranger.

Editor Press:—Please allow me space in your valuable paper to say a few words, as I haven't seen a letter from this place for quite a while.

This community has been seemingly dead for quite a while, but she is coming to the front. Our new church is almost completed; we have gotten it to where we can hold service in it. Now, I think God being our helper, we shall complete it in a short while.

The Sunday school is moving along nicely under the careful management of J. S. Wright.

Our Sunday school has appointed a committee to select a subject every Sunday and a speaker for that subject. The subject last Sunday was "The Pleasure of Obedience." The next subject will be "God a protection if we obey." This is one of the greatest subjects that the committee has introduced; it is to be explained by H. Honeycutt. I am sure if you give him your attention you shall be greatly benefitted.

DISCRIMINATION vs. PROSPERITY

In two previous statements of facts we have demonstrated conclusively, and to the entire satisfaction of any fair-minded man:

First, that by executive agreement and legislative enactment the Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company was seriously and unjustly discriminated against in the classification of railroads under the "110 Commodity Rate Act," and,

Second, that serious decreases in earnings were sustained by the Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company, amounting to more than one million two hundred and fifty thousand dollars per annum, directly traceable to that unjust discrimination.

We have also demonstrated, by official records on file in the State Capitol at Montgomery, that the people of Alabama were taxed approximately $200,000 by those responsible for the condition to defray the expenses of this unfair and unjust fight "the status of which is practically the same as it was in the beginning."

We want now to present to the public a further statement to demonstrate the effect, not only on the earnings of the L. & N., but on the earnings of other railroads originally placed in Class 1. In doing so we request that you bear in mind two facts:

First, that the rate discrimination was practiced between the fiscal years of June 30, 1907, and ending June 30, 1909, and,

Second, that in the final wind-up of executive agreements, legislative enactments and Railroad Commission orders, the L. & N. and the Western Railway of Alabama were the only railroads required to charge the standard, or minimum scale of rates prescribed by the "110 Commodity Rate Act;" and that, too, in spite of the then and now greater earnings of other roads within the state, as is shown by the following comparison of the earnings per mile of road for the fiscal years 1906-7 to 1911-12 inclusive:

Year	A. G. S.	St. L. & S. F.	L. & N.	W. Ry. of Ala.	A. C. L.
1906-07	$12,459	$11,211	$ 9,908	$ 8,771	$5,914
1907-08	11,090	10,149	9,017	8,464	5,684
1908-09	11,027	9,885	8,743	7,527	5,589
1909-10	13,310	10,271	10,349	8,621	5,852
1910-11	14,144	10,976	10,729	9,719	6,497
1911-12	15,510	10,871	11,459	10,433	6,874
Average	$12,923	$10,561	$10,035	$ 8,993	$5,867
Percentage of Increase 1911-12 over 1906-7	24.5	†3.0	15.7	— 16.2	19.2

†Decrease

Even a casual investigation will disclose the staggering decrease in earnings sustained during that time by the various railroads, and especially by the L. & N., because the L. & N. has far greater mileage than all the other Class 1 roads combined. To be exact, the total mileage in the state of Alabama in 1907 of the A. G. S., the St. L. & S. F., the W. Ry. of Ala. and the A. C. L. was 767 miles, whereas, the L. & N. operated within the State of Alabama a total of 1,256 miles of road.

The railroads need the people of Alabama, and of all other states. But the people of Alabama, and of all other states, need the railroads. It is, however, a self-evident fact that such a policy, if persisted in and if relief from such discrimination had not been granted by the courts, would have resulted in the people of Alabama being without adequate railroad facilities to conduct present day business, not to speak of ability for future development.

And we say to the people of Alabama not in the language of the alarmist, but out of sober, conservative thought, and from actual business experience, that in permitting their duly elected representatives to practice such extreme and unjust discrimination against the railroads of the state they are permitting the stream of commerce to stagnate; are polluting the life blood of development, and are destroying the very heart of progressive business.

We have great and important interests at stake in the State of Alabama; but your interests, Mr. Farmer, Mr. Merchant, Mr. Manufacturer, are far greater than ours. And as your fellow citizen we ask you to join with your fellow citizen to see that an intelligent understanding of the problems involved is arrived at, to the end that our mutual interests may be safeguarded.

VOL 3. CLANTON, ALA., THURSDAY FEBRUARY 13, 1913 NO. 34

DR GULLEDGE ON MENINGITIS

PHYSICIAN OF MUCH EXPERIENCE TALKS FOR PRESS READERS.

While the Press has no desire to renew the "meningitis controversy" or to worry its readers further with "facts or fancies" with reference to the much dreaded disease, yet it feels encumbent upon us to give our readers the benefit of experience gained from one who has had wide practice and who is thoroughly posted on epidemic diseases of this kind. Dr. R.H. Gulledge of Mooringsport, La., (a nephew of our own Mr. F. A. Gulledge) in writing him some days since, talks freely of the meningitis epidemics through which he has gone and the treatment which he has found to be most efficacious. We, by permission of Mr. Gulledge, copy a part of what Dr. Gulledge has to say in his letter:—

Symptons:—Not unlike grippe to begin with; always pain in head, begins with chill. Aching all over, not much fever to begin; fever and all other symptons by no means regular, hence a diagnosis is hard to make positive by objective symptons only in the beginning. A few hours after the chill, patient begins to complain of headache and stiff neck; which increases rapidly and in few hours is unconscious or in semi-conscious condition; very restless, may soon become blind and deaf with reflexes disturbed. As the disease may first begin at different parts of the brain it will naturally give a variety of symptoms. In an epidemic of meningitis we are naturally on the look out for it and any severe nervous symptoms of more or less sudden onset should be regarded with suspicion. With first symptoms give 30 c.cs injection in spinal canal after having as much spinal fluid drawn out; this should be repeated every twelve hours.

Great care should be used in its introduction else the treatment might prove fatal. In all cases we could reach early we were very successful. I saw one death result from too hasty injection. (Here the Doctor gives minute instructions as to the proper method of injection and the position of the patient at the time of the injection; but as this should always be left to the skill of a physician, the Press omits it lest some one unfamiliar with medical science should undertake to follow instructions and bring about fatal results.) I, continues the Doctor, always employ Tr. Iodine over the sight of the puncture, and then put a film of cotton, sealed over with collodion. We had a great many cases last winter, but after we got well acquainted with it we had splendid success. Our only dependence was the serum treatment; of course the bowels and kidneys must be kept active as a great amount of poison must be drained from the system. The nourishment must be carefully considered; however, the patient is unable to swallow much till after the rigidity of the muscles is overcome, which is shortly after a sufficient quantity of the serum has been introduced. They are always able to eat after two to four days and can be supported in various ways till then.

The thing that most concerns you and the public is:—how to prevent it? The question of how we can live on is one of deep concern always, but in this disease, as with many others, there is no positive answer. Fortunately these epidemics are like lightning, they seldom strike twice in the same spot.

The Gulf Refining Company paid a pathologist $25.00 a day and expenses for two months to come out here and stay; he took swabs from the nasal-pharynx of all who who had been exposed and all others free of charge if they were unable to pay the fee for the services; he made miscropic examinations and found dozens of "carriers" of the germs. On these he used a douche of 2 per cent Sol Tr. Iodine and sterile water. He would insert the douche in the pharynx, behind soft palate and wash out through the nose. This was done twice each day if they would come—and it was not a difficult matter to get them to come.

I was a "carrier" for awhile and took his treatment.

While a daily spray of Dobell's solution was recommended, we afterward decided it was not to be encouraged, much preferring the Tr Iodine wash or flushing, as by this method the current of water thrown from a fountain syringe would pick up and wash out the germs. This must have been efficacious as the epidemic played out in every community where the pathologist operated. It proves that a party may carry the germs, or be a "Carrier" and yet not have the disease himself."

Dr. Gulledge writes most interestingly of his experience in the meningitis epidemics through which he has gone and of his success in the treatment of the disease; but, as he says, lightning and meningitis but seldom strike more than once in the same place, and as Chilton has had her stroke and is now fast recovering from it, perhaps it would be best not to discuss the matter too freely; let us, rather indulge the hope that the disease has bidden us a long farewell.

A LIZZARD ON THE RAIL

The oil mill for Clanton, which was pronounced last week as one of the approaching sureties, is now somewhat in doubt. As is usual with all large bodies, they move somewhat slowly, even when no obstructions are placed in the way, but, in this instance, it seems that an obstruction of some proportions has been placed upon the otherwise smooth track. As soon as it was definitely determined to erect the mill, one of the large oil mill concerns—which had not heretofore even thought of Clanton—decided that it would also erect a mill and become a competitor of the independent mill proposed. That's usually the case with a location as well as large corporations, when they discover that individuals propose to do things, then they step in and propose to do the same thing, with no intention of carrying out their proposition but, merely to scare the other fellow off. This time they have succeeded in a measure; till the "big" fellow decides whether or not they will build a mill, the local promoters are "laying on their oars;" it has always been their scheme; they do not want opposition and will not brook it if, by bluff they can prevent it; if our local men would start with the determination to complete the mill and operate it, the "big" fellow would crawl in his hole.

The Press hopes to see the mill erected; it believes it will be erected and it also believes that it will be erected with local capital—the bluff of the big company is to the contrary notwithstanding.

The negro nurse who was attending the meningitis patient just on the outskirts of the town, on Monday night sometime played the Arab act on the town officials; or, in other words, he quietly and quickly folded his blanket and even more quietly and quickly took his departure.

THREW A SNAKE ON THEM

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE SHERIFF ASKING INVESTIGATION.

While it is not the business of the Press to pry into private affairs, or to publish articles that tend to discredit any one (except when those articles are founded in fact) still it is the duty of a newspaper man, when things are brought to his attention to give them such publicity as the circumstances will warrant. There is a certain school of newspaper men, some not far away, who are unwilling to publish anything except hearsay—or who, if a legitimate news article happens their way—publish it with apologies for having done so; there are others who emasculate articles to such an extent that one reading them has no conception of the true facts after the article is read—they are what one T. R. calls mollycoddles, afraid of their shadows.

We studied at a different school—our school taught us to tell the facts or say nothing whatever. We do not like to wound the feelings of any one, but we make no sort of apology for publishing the following letter which found its way (now matter how) into the Press office. If what is contained therein be true somebody should be brought before the next term of court and be politely informed that he or they will be required to wear clothing with a dark brown strip running in checker form around his or their bodies and that they will have to reside at a certain little village south of Clanton about twenty-nine miles for a term of weeks or months. If the charge is not true, then those who have brought the charge should be punished for having maligned an enterprise that is worthy the commendation of every business man.

But the letter speaks for itself; let it talk:

Birmingham, Ala., Jan. 25, '13
To the Sheriff of Chilton county, Clanton, Ala.:

We, as a Society for the Prevention of Cruelty, have been asked if we could do anything towards preventing the alleged cruelty to animals employed in the building of the resevoir, or dam, on the Coosa river said to be about eleven miles from Clanton. It was reported to us that animals used, were beaten and mistreated, and many unfitted for work by ill-treatment. I know of no way to take up this matter at present, only through the Sheriffs, and I trust you will respond in all cases of cruelty. The Alabama law clearly protects the animal from man's neglect and abuse, and I, or we, most urgently ask you to investigate and protect the animal from cruelty to the furtherest extent that the law will allow, and if possible report the result to our Society.

You will greatly oblige: The Birmingham Humane Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Children and Animals.
Address: Mrs. W. N. Wood,
Pres., 3301, Ave. E, Ensley, Ala.

TELEPHONES AND DEPUTY SHERIFF

Too Quick for Meningitis Sufferer.

Friday morning the telephones connecting Clanton with the eastern part of the county were kept tingling and frequent calls for the Sheriff and County Health officer were made. The tenor of each message was: "There's a meningitis negro coming to town!" "He has just passed our house and is bawling with pain." "The folks with him say he came from out near the river." "He's on his way to Birmingham, he says, but we want you to be sure he doesnt stop around here, send the Sheriff after him." Such were the messages sent in with trembling voices. The Health officer and a deputy Sheriff got exceedingly busy. Just as the wagon rolled over the line dividing the county and the town of Clanton, the negro was apprehended. County Health officer Gragg sent Dr. Marcus to examine the negro and to report the substance of his investigation.

This was soon done. Dr. Marcus stated that the negro had unmistakable signs of cerebro-spinal meningitis. Then Dr. Gragg made a personal investigation which confirmed the diagnosis of Dr. Marcus. The wires were brought into requisition and Dr. Sanders. State Health officer was brought into consultation. This official stated that he would have Dr. Moss, State bacterologist, come to Clanton on first train for a microscopic examination.

In the meantime the county and town officials had a small tempest in a tea-pot as to the disposition of the negro.

The Probate Judge was then sitting in judgment upon a fellow man; acting Mayor, Pinckard, tried to consult with him in an effort to have the county take charge of the case. Judge Deason stated very promptly, and very properly, that as the negro was then in the town it was the duty of the town to look after him and not the duty of the county. But, contended the official, "we have no place of detention and no where to put him." "Sorry, but that is not the fault of the county," retorted the judge. Anyway, the negro was made comfortable, or as comfortable as possible under the circumstances, under an improvised tent just on the outskirts of the town and guards and nurses left to minister unto him.

Dr. Moss arrived; extracted a quantity of spinal fluid, and carried it to Montgomery for microscopic examination. The next morning he reported to Dr. Gragg that there were unmistakable germ of spinal meningitis present.

BUT, that the negro had no doubt had the disease SO LONG that he was now on the road to recovery! Listen ye Gods! Had HAD the disease SO LONG that he was now probably on the road to recovery! Read between the lines if you will; if you just won't do so, let us try to read it for you.

The negro said he had worked at Wright's camp and was transferred to the lower camp. He was on his way to Birmingham when overtaken by the authorities! Where did he come from? Had HAD the disease SO LONG that he was now probably on the road to recovery!

But, we disgress, we merely threw that in gratuitously—it don't count; its put there to stimulate imagination, to permit speculation, and to arouse prognostications. Anyway, Drs. Marcus, Gragg and Moss pronounced it cerebro-spinal meningitis regardless of the recent working places of the unfortunate negro; regardless too, of the duration of the disease. He might have been out in the hills and valleys suffering for all we know; he might have been doctored by the ravens—the same birds that fed Elijah when he was hungry—for all we know; then again he might have been somewhere else and he might have been doctored by something besides ravens for all we know. Anyway he HAD HAD it and anyway he came from out somewhere. He got into Clanton and he's in Clanton today (dead!)

Of course no one sent him in here; that would be inhuman; he was going to Birmingham—of his own volition—to be sure. Those folks up in Birmingham are not frightened at a little thing like cerebro-spinal meningitis, and that is a good dumping ground for such things—if you can get by the Sheriff of Chilton county and his deputies with the "goods."

Just the same, that cerebro-spinal meningitis negro was coming out of the east and going to the north by way of Clanton. He wasn't alone; no he was a poor workman but he was being hauled into town on a wagon and was accompanied by others—nurses, no doubt, who were to "put him off at Birmingham"

The town of Clanton is charged with the duty of feeding him and nursing him; the town officials have to wait upon him as if he was its potentate and, if he dies, the town of Clanton will have him to bury! He's resting very well at this writing and may entirely recover, but mind you—mind you—he had HAD cerebro-spinal meningitis SO LONG that he is probably recovering when Moss examined him!

Where did he come from?
Who treated him?
Ravens, did you say?
Yes, ravens!
But, what's the use? We

TRIAL OF MR. REYNOLDS

TWENTY FIVE DOLLARS AND COSTS ASSESSED.

Friday morning last the south bound train unloaded quite a large list of passengers from Jemison. They had all come for one purpose, it seems: to attend the trial of Mr. Reynolds before Judge Deason.

Much interest was manifested in the case, as Mr. Reynolds is one of Chilton's most popular citizens.

Mr. Reynolds was charged with an assault but he and his attorneys did not believe he was guilty and so they went into an examination of the witnesses. After the conclusion of the examination, Judge Deason thought that he was sufficiently warranted from the testimony to impose a fine of $25 and costs. Mr. Reynolds felt aggrieved at this imposition and, through his attorneys, gave notice of an appeal. Bond was fixed at $200 which he readily made.

Not more than half of the witnesses present were examined, but it is probable that at the approaching term of the Circuit court, all of them will have an opportunity to take the witness stand.

"SO WHY FRET?"

Are the trains too slow for you? Ceasar, with all his court, never exceeded the speed limit.

Are your wages too small? In Europe people are content with making a living.

Are the lights too dim? David wrote his Psalms by the light of a smoky torch.

Are you ugly? "Cleopatra" tho' homely, bewitched two emperors.

Are you "cold?" The soldiers of Valley Forge, walked barefoot on the ice and snow.

Are you hungry? The children of India are starving for a crust of bread. Not you.

Are you tired? Why fret about it? Jacob was tired when he dreamed of the angels of heaven.

Are you sick? Suppose you had lived two thousand years ago, when sickness was fatal.

Are you poor? The Saviour of men was not wealthy.

Cheer up. Praise God that you live in the midst of His blessings.

Surprise for Mother.

A Chicago school teacher tells with great gusto of the shrewd little "colored brother" who once arrived at school provided with a most unusual excuse for tardiness. "I couldn't help bein' late, please, teacher," he bubbled, shrilly. "Somepin happened to us las' night. My maw, she went ter bed wit' a headache, and when she wakes up dis mornin', dere's two little quins (twins) one on each side ob her, and —she won' know nuffin 'bout 'em tell she wakes up. A DIFFERENCE.
It Paid This Man to Change Food.

"What is called 'good living' eventually brought me to a condition quite the reverse of good health,' writes a N. Y. merchant.

"Improper eating told on me till my stomach became so weak that food nauseated me, even the lightest and simplest lunch, and I was much depressed after a night of uneasy slumber, unfitting me for business.

"This condition was discouraging, as I could find no way to improve it. Then I saw the advertisement of Grape-Nuts food, and decided to try it, and became delighted with the result.

"For the past three years I have used Grape-Nuts and nothing else for my breakfast and for lunch before retiring. It speedily set my stomach right and I congratulate myself that I have regained my health. There is no greater comfort for a tired man than a lunch of Grape-Nuts. It insures restful sleep, and an awakening in the morning with a feeling of buoyant courage and hopefulness.

"Grape-Nuts has been a boon to my whole family. It has made of our 2-year-old boy, who used to be unable to digest much of anything, a robust, healthy, little rascal weighing 31 pounds. Mankind certainly owes a debt of gratitude to the expert who produced this perfect food." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. "There's a reason."

Look for the above letter! A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

MEXICAN ARMY RISES IN REVOLT

FEDERAL ADHERENTS ARE SHOT DOWN IN STREETS OF MEXICO CITY.

MADERO SEEKS OLD PALACE

Gen. Felix Diaz, Released from Prison, Now Heads Revolting Troops, Who Who Have Control of City.

Mexico City,—The army rose in revolt in Mexico City, took possession of the public buildings, shot down federal adherents in the streets, released General Felix Diaz, leader of the Vera Cruz revolt, from prison, and falling in line under his banner, practically captured the Mexican capital.

Francisco Madero, president of the republic, and members of his cabinet, took refuge in the national palace, where they were besieged, but, with some loyal troops at their back, succeeded in defending the palace from the assaults of ther evolutionists.

Madero's family has taken refuge in the Japanese legation and the president is making a fight desperate in its efforts against what appears to be enormous odds for retention of his power.

General Diaz, who is the nephew of the deposed president, Porfirio Diaz, is now at the head of a majority of the capital troops, including most of the artillery, and is in possession of the arsenal in the city and the powder works nearby.

Madero is relying on the loyalty of General Blanquet, who has been summoned from Toluca, 40 miles distant, but Blanquet has only a thousand men under his command and the rebels are confident of defeating him should he refuse to join the revolt.

The day was marked by four separate engagements, the most sanguinary of which took place in front of the national palace. But the most important was that which terminated in the formal surrender of the troops in the artillery barracks.

It is believed that no less than 200 people wee killed in the fighting. Among the number was General Bernando Reyes, a strong adherent of Porfirio Diaz, and ex-secretary of war.

The mutinous troops were led by students of the military school at Tlalpam, a suburb. They marched to the prison to which Gen. Felix Diaz had been transferred for safe keeping and released him. Gen. Bernando Reyes was also freed from the Santiago military prison, there being no resistance in either quarter.

To the army of the mutineers quickly came portions of the First cavalry, Twenty-fourth cavalry and Twentieth infantry. Gen. Manuel Mondragon, retired, was in command, but gave way to Generals Diaz and Reyes.

Steamer Rammed By Tug Rests Under Forty Feet of Water in Tennessee River.

Florence, Ala.—As a result of its collision with a tug boat, the steamer "City of Florence," was sunk below Savannah, Tenn., in forty feet of water. Five lives were lost; the dead being Miss Ruth Tarbet, a young girl of Satello, Tenn.; Hanks Kelley, a member of the crew; Carrie Williams, a colored passenger, and two other negroes.

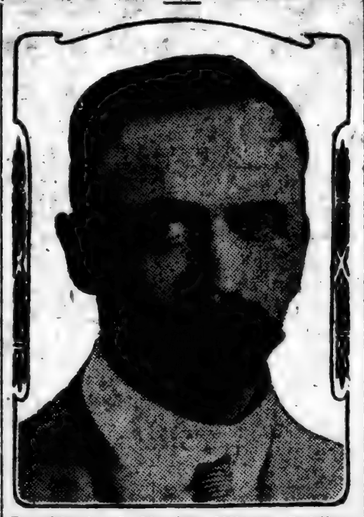
The steamer is a complete wreck. No part of the boat is visible save the pilot house. The cause of the accident is unknown. The amount of insurance carried by the owners of the steamer cannot be given.

The steamer "Alabama" reached Florence bringing passengers rescued from the "City of Florence."

PRESIDENT ARAUJO DIES.

Salvador's Chief Executive Shot February 4 By Assassin, Mulatillo, Succumbs.

San Salvador.—Manuel Araujo, president of the republic of Salvador, who was wounded by the bullets of an assassin on February 4, is dead.



Don Carlos Melendez succeeded to the office of chief executive.

President Araujo was attacked and shot February 4 by several men; one of whom, a Guatananamo man, Virgilio Mulatillo, was arrested. Mulatillo, in a confession, declared the plot to assassinate President Araujo had been contracted in Guatanamo city.

West Virginia Senators Cleared

Washington.—Senators Watson and Chilton of West Virginia are exonerated of the charge of corruption in connection with their election two years afo in a report decided upon by the Senate election committee. He has retracted the charge.

STOCK EXCHANGE CHANGES

DRASTIC RULE IS MADE TO PREVENT ANY "WASH SALES."

Wall Street Starts to Reform as Bills to Control It Are Introduced at Albany.

New York.—The New York stock exchange adopted a stringent resolution against "wash sales." This action followed closely the introduction in the state legislature of the bills recommending stock exchange reforms as outlined in the governor's recent message.

The board of governors of the exchange adopted the following resolution:

"No members of the stock exchange or anybody connected with a stock exchange firm shall give or with knowledge execute orders for the purchase or sale of securities which involve no change in ownership."

Punishment for this offense is already set forth in the constitution of the exchange, under the head of "fictitious transactions." Any violation of the rule makes a member liable to suspension for a period not exceeding one year.

The rule as now adopted is broader, in that it applies not only to a member of the exchange, but to anyone connected with a stock exchange firm.

DESERTED SHIP IS FOUND

No Soul on Board, Bark Is Wandering on the High Seas.

Newport News, Va.—With sails snugly furled, the lifeboats in the davits, the galley plentifully supplied with provisions and water, but without a vestige of human life aboard the Norwegian bark Remittent, Rio Grande to Liverpool, was picked up January 19 in mid-ocean by the British steam Roumanian, according to Captain Claridge, of the latter vessel, who arrived here.

The strange disappearance of the Remittent's crew recalls the famous schooner Marie Celeste mystery which puzzled the maritime world for many months.

The bark sailed from Rio Grande October 25 last and never was reported until found by the Roumanian. Captain Claridge refused to hazard a guess as to the possible whereabouts of the Remittent's crew.

$1,800,000 Will Be Spent.

Washington.—Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood, chief of staff of the army, has discussed at length with Representative William Schley Howard the department's plans for the enlargement and further development of Fort McPherson, Ga. These plans contemplate the expenditure of $1,800,000 for new land, buildings for barracks and quartermaster's stores, sewers, lighting, water mains and for new walks and roadways.

Negro Lynched in Mississippi.

Houston, Miss.—Andrew Williams 35, negro, was lynched by a mob here. Williams is suspected of having murdered Mrs. John C. Williams, wife of the deputy chancery clerk of this county, who was found dead in her home here. Her body was found in an abandoned pit under the house.

Bacon to Rap Jamestown Gavel.

Washington.—Another interesting chapter will be added to the history history of the Jamestown gavel, now owned by the Atlanta chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution when Senator Bacon uses it at the joint session of the two houses to announce the election of Woodrow Wilson as president. In reply to a letter from Mrs. Sam D. Jones, Senator Bacon said he would use the gavel when the two houses met in joint session. This gavel is the wood of a tree that grew beside Patrick Henry's grave.

Horses Dash Into Woman's Parlor.

Chicago.—"Well, the nerve of some people's horses!" exclaimed Mrs. John McCarons, when she rushed from the kitchen to investigate a crash in the front part of her home and found a team of draught horses tramping on the parlor carpet. The team had run away and the front of the frame dwelling of the McCarons had offered but slight resistance to their maddened impact. All that kept the horses from continuing through the place was the bear wagon to which they were attached.

WARSHIPS SENT TO CENTRAL AMERICA

INTERESTS OF UNITED STATES ARE REPORTED TO BE IN DANGER.

WAR CLOUDS ARE GATHERING

Uprisings Are Feared in Salvador, in Honduras, Guatemala and Nicaragua and Other Places.

Washington.—Storm clouds over Central America, with the signal exception of Costa Rica, caused the United States to order four warships there.

Reports upon which this government took action come from many quarters and though, in most cases, they are somewhat vague and speculative, they are strongly of the same general tenor—that it was no longer thought wise to permit American interests in Central America to remain exposed to any dangers.

In Salvador, where for a long period peace has prevailed, the attempted assassination of President Arajo by a band of conspirators is believed here to threaten trouble, although the president sent assurances to his minister that the country was quiet.

From time to time have come rumors of rebellious movements in Honduras and unrest in Guatemala, while in New Orleans there are gathering soldiers of fortune and adherents of Zelaya, the deposed dictator, credited with sinister designs on the government of President Diaz of Nicaragua. To meet the situation, so far as it is possible at this time, the navy department has ordered the gunboat Annapolis, now at San Diego, Cal., to proceed immediately to Amalpa, Honduras. The cruiser Denver will proceed from Acapulco, Mexico, to Acajustal, Salvador.

NOTE PRESENTED TO CUBA

Government Insists on Punishment for Attacks on Legation.

Havana.—Arthur M. Beaupre, American minister to Cuba, acting under direction of the state department at Washington, presented to Secretary of State Sanguily a peremptory note insisting that measures be taken for the prosecution and exemplary punishment of persons responsible for the recent attacks on the American legation by the newpaper Cuba. The note intimates that should the Cuban laws be insufficient for the protection of foreign diplomats, the United States will insist that means for their protection be found promptly.

It is announced that Representative Soto, who is described as the editor of Cuba, will present a bill to congress demanding that President Gomez submit to the house copies of the notes presented the government by Mr. Beaupre and Hugh S. Gibson, secretary of the American legation.

The announcement that Senor Soto has assumed the editorship of The Cuba is taken here to indicate that the actual editor, Jose Maria Villaverde, will attempt to take shelter behind Soto, who, as a representative, is immune from prosecution without the consent of congress.

HEIRS RENOUNCE CLAIMS

Fortune Left by Founder of Christian Science Goes to Church.

Boston.—Litigation over the bequest of $2,000,000 made to the First Church of Christ, Scientist, of Boston, by Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy, ended when her natural heirs joined with the trustees of the church in proposed decrees entered in the several court involved.

Coincident with this action the Massachusetts house concurred with the senate in an enabling act which permits the mother church to accept the use of the money for the advancement of Christian Science as directed by its founder.

Four stipulations compose the decrees which were entered simultaneously in the courts of Massachusetts and New Hampshire and the Federal court for the district of New Hampshire.

5,000 Turks Are Killed.

London.—A Constantinople dispatch says that heavy fighting has been going on for two days in Gallipoli, and that the Bulgarians have won all along the line. The Turks, on their own admission, have lost 5,000 men. The fighting began when the Bulgarians advanced from Kadikeui toward Kavak, which the Turks occupied. The fight lasted until night when the Turks retired to Bulair. Another Bulgar force on the Marmora coast occupied Myriophylo.

As the words "not guilty" reached the ears of those in the crowded courtroom there was a mighty stir, but no applause, not a sign of a demonstration of any sort was made.

Who Was Killed While Leading a Revolt in Mexico City.

FALSE REPORTS TO U. S.

SENSATIONAL CONFESSION IS MADE BY THE FORMER MEXICAN AMBASSADOR.

He Says in Predicting End of Revolution He Was Wrong—Mexican Situation Is Desperate.

Mexico City.—"I lied to the American government for ten months, telling them that the Mexican revolution would be over in six weeks. I was forced to invest my diplomatic mission with a domino and a mask."

This statement was made by Manuel Calero, formerly Mexican ambassador to the United States during the discussion of the loan measure in the senate here.

"The truth is that the department of finance has not painted the situation as it really is. We should speak the truth, though it destroys us," declared Calero.

"The truth is that the situation is desperate."

Senor Calero's speech created a tremendous sensation.

Ernesto Madero, minister of finance replied, calling Manuel Calero "an indiscreet ambassador and a bad financier."

El PaPso, Texas.—A document signed by General Jose Blanco was made public in which the former commander of Madero's rebels orders his captains to "do as their conscience dictates" in disbanding their troops or joining the revolution.

MISSISSIPPI DELTA FLOODED

Beulah Crevasse, 800 Feet Wide, 1,000 Square Miles Being Inundated.

Memphis, Tenn.—The crevasse in the Mississippi river levee at Beulah, Miss., is now 800 feet in width, and, with the river rising rapidly in that section, water is pouring through the opening in great volume, according to dispatches. Further caving, however, is not anticipated, the ends of the gap being composed of tough "buck shot" earth. The stretch of levee which collapsed was largely of a sandy loam. It is now estimated that approximately 1,000 square mies of farming lands will be flooded.

At the solicitation of the Mississippi delegation in congress, who were appealed to by Governor Brewer of that state, Secretary of War Stimson authorized the shipment of all tents at the disposal of the Mississippi Nation Guard to the overflowed section.

Twenty Years for "Human Bomb."

Los Angeles, Cal.—Carl Reidelbach, who terrorized the central police station November 19 last with an infernal machine, was sentenced to twenty years in the penitentiary. The sentence was imposed after Reidelbach had declared he believed dynamite was a good means of righting some social wrongs. "If I thought your allegation was an unalterable principle I would sentence you to life imprisonment," said the court, "but I think twenty years in the penitentiary will give you plenty of time to change your mind."

Net Gain Made by Boll Weevil.

Washington.—Despite the check in the movement of the cotton boll weevil during the last year on account of the unusual climatic conditions of the winter of 1911-12, the insect has made a net gain of 7,300 square miles, according to a report made to the department of agriculture by W. D. Hunter and W. D. Pierce, in charge of the Southern field crop insect investigations. The total area infested with the boll weevil in 1912 was 278,800 square miles as compared with 271,500 in 1911.

Wilson for Changes in Primary Laws

Princeton, N. J.—President-elect Wilson declared himself in favor of a radical change in the primary laws of New Jersey to be applied not only to the nominations for United States senator, but the governorship as well. A bill is being prepared, he said, modeled after the Wisconsin system which was championed before its adoption by Senator LaFollette. It would amend the present law to permit second choice voting. A majority would be required to nominate rather than a plurality.

WOMAN SICK FOURTEEN YEARS

Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Elkhart, Ind.:—"I suffered for fourteen years from organic inflammation, female weakness, pain and irregularities. The pains in my sides were increased by walking or standing on my feet and I had such awful bearing down feelings, was depressed in spirits and became thin and pale with dull, heavy eyes. I had six doctors from whom I received only temporary relief. I decided to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial and also the Sanative Wash. I have now used the remedies for four months and cannot express my thanks for what they have done for me.

"If these lines will be of any benefit you have my permission to publish them."—Mrs. SADIE WILLIAMS, 455 James Street, Elkhart, Indiana.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotic or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record of being the most successful remedy for female ills we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., seem to prove this fact.

TRYING A TARIFF LAW

TIME FOR TESTING IT IS NOT MAIN REQUISITE.

Measure to Be Constructed by Democrats Must Have General Party Approval Before It Is Given to Country.

A prominent Democrat expresses the hope that Mr. Wilson will call congress together as early as March 15. "Let us," says he, "get the new tariff law on the books and in operation by August 1, and that will give the country fifteen months in which to appraise it before passing on it at the polls." A very good point, but not all of the case.

The country voted on the McKinley law when it was only about a month old, and condemned it. Mr. McKinley always insisted that a trial of twelve months would have saved the measure, insured the election of a Republican house in 1890, and the re-election of General Harrison in 1892. As he believed, the verdict was formed more under the influence of the bitter debate which had marked the measure's passage through the house than from a knowledge of what the law actually contained.

The Gorman-Wilson law came up for judgment at the polls within less than ninety days after its passage. But it would have been condemned had the time been a year. Time would have been no help in such a case. The measure carried from the day of its birth the displeasure of the party responsible for it.

The Dingley law had a trial of more than a year, and was approved. But approval would have come at the end of a month. Business, indeed, began to pick up while the measure was taking shape. The bare promise of a revision of the tariff on lines frankly protective after a period of deep depression had set the wheels of industry to turning again; and the army of the unemployed trooped back to work. The White House and congress were in full agreement.

The Payne law had a trial of more than a year, but, as the Gorman-Wilson law before it had been, was hobbled from the outset. It had divided the responsible party in congress to the extent that the best campaign material in use by the Democrats when the law came up before the people was of Republican preparation. They could, and did, support their denunciation of the law by quoting from the deliverances of many Republican orators and newspapers. At the polls the law was bound to lose.

Time is an element, but a greater element is party agreement if it can be reached while the measure is on the stocks. If it slides into the water with great acclaim and with reasonable smoothness, everything subsequently should go well. But if the launching is bungled, and some of the workmen express doubt about the seaworthiness of the craft, everything may go wrong. Boss Underwood should have an eye to the framework, and impress upon his men that the country expects every builder to do his duty.

Wilson's Constructive Mind.

Governor Wilson is strengthening himself in public opinion by demonstrating that he has a constructive mind. The trouble in the past has been that everybody realized that conditions ought to be remedied, but no one has undertaken to attack the problem with definite recommendation. Even Mr. Roosevelt, with all his mental activity, lacks the power to grasp details which Mr. Wilson has displayed. Whether the latter's suggestions are the true solution, and whether they can be embodied into a practical and effective law, is a question which can only be determined by experience. In the meantime, the country will commend the new president for the zeal as well as the wisdom which he has displayed, and which is an earnest that he will bring to the discharge of his duties a determination to accomplish something toward solving the most complex problem of the times.

Steel Trust Is Stubborn.

The steel trust has no notion of surrendering. It will not dissolve voluntarily, and there will be no decree of dissolution in case its able lawyers can prevent it. And unless the combination can be resolved into its constituent companies it is not certain that any useful purpose would be served by a dissolution. The dissolution of the oil trust effected nothing because it left the ownership of all the properties just where it was before. The dissolution of the tobacco trust may have been somewhat more real, but there is dispute about that. Mr. Morgan says you can't unscramble eggs, but he didn't scramble his eggs; he only put them into a single basket. Each of those subsidiary companies maintains its corporate existence.

Will Follow Strong Man.

The people feel the need of a strong man in the White House. They are ready to follow a strong man bent upon putting down the professional politicians. That constituted at least half of Mr. Cleveland's stock in trade. Turgid, but self-willed, wholly unequipped in knowledge and experience, Mr. Cleveland had the country behind what the people thought were his real objects. He failed because of his limitations.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

ECZEMA BEGAN BY ITCHING

Goldsboro, N. C.—"My daughter suffered from eczema. The trouble began in the ears by itching and running water, and later it formed pus and became very offensive. She began to scratch it and it went into sores. When the scabs came off there was a yellowish watery discharge. The outside of the ear was one solid sore. She tried several different remedies but received no relief. She had been troubled with it between one and two years when she finally began using Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment.

"She had not made but two treatments when all the scabs came off and the flesh just looked very red and dry. She kept up the treatment four or five weeks and she was entirely cured. It also cured other sores on the children, especially chapped feet on one of the little boys." (Signed) Mrs. W. H. Edgerton, Jan. 24, 1912.

Little Chance That Voice-Culture Student Attempted to Gratify Old Gentleman's Friend.

Patinetly the old gentleman had been sitting through the ordeal of hearing the voice-culture student in the hall bedroom below practicing with a zeal which left no room for criticism, but with a talent by no means so kindly described.

Finally he crept down the stairs and rapped at the door of the young woman's room.

"I can't come in," he said in response to an invitation, "but I simply came to tell you of a friend of mine who would, I know, be willing to pay almost any amount of money to hear you sing."

Overwhelmed with joy the young woman begged the kind old gentleman to write his friend's name and address on a piece of paper.

When he had gone upstairs she looked at the slip of paper which he had handed back to her inscribed and neatly folded. It read: "John W. Jones, Asylum for the Deaf."

Inscriptions in complimentary copies of learned works do not always serve the graceful purpose to which one was dedicated by the celebrated Professor Wilson of Edinburgh.

When the suitor for the hand of Professor Wilson's daughter had gained the young woman's approbation, she, of course, referred him to her father. Having stated his case, the young gentleman was asked to bid the young lady to come to her father. Her obedience was prompt.

Professor Wilson had before him for review a ponderous volume, on the fly-leaf of which was duly inscribed, "With the author's compliments."

He tore this fly-leaf out, pinned it to his daughter's dress, solemnly led her to the anxious lover—and went back to his work.—Youth's Companion.

Are You Subject to Constipation

Here is a Simple Way of Correcting it Instantly Before it Becomes Chronic.

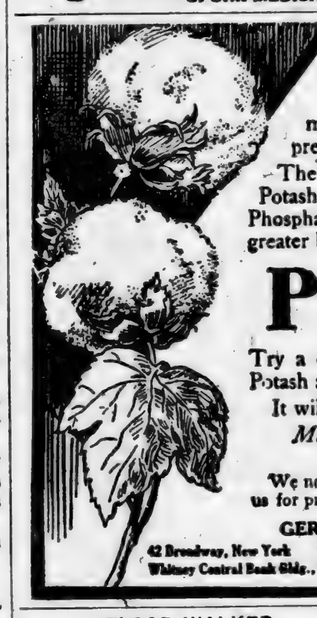
MRS. G. B. PRUITT

Very few people go through life without some time or other being troubled with constipation. Thousands injure themselves by the use of strong cathartics, salt mineral waters, pills and similar things. They have temporary value in some cases, it is true, but the good effect is soon lost, and the more one takes of them the less effective they become.

A physic or purgative is seldom necessary, and much better and more permanent results can be obtained by using a scientific remedy like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It does not hide behind a high sounding name, but is what it is represented to be, a mild laxative medicine. It is so mild that thousands of mothers give it to tiny infants, and yet it is so compounded, and contains such definite ingredients that it will have equally good effect when used by a person suffering from the worst chronic constipation. In fact, among the greatest endorsers of Syrup Pepsin are elderly people who have suffered for years and found nothing to benefit them until they took Syrup Pepsin.

It is a fact that millions of families have Syrup Pepsin constantly in the house, homes like those of Mrs. G. B. Pruitt, Berea, Ky., who used Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin as a laxative tonic. Mrs. Pruitt writes that it so strengthened and cleansed her system that she was quickly relieved of a severe cough which had troubled her for months. The special value of this grand laxative tonic is that it is suited to the needs of every member of the family. It is pleasant-tasting, mild and non-griping. Unlike harsh physics it works gradually and in a very brief time the stomach and bowel muscles are trained to do their work naturally again, when all medicines can be dispensed with.

You can obtain a bottle at any drug store for fifty cents or one dollar. The latter size is usually bought by families who already know its value. Results are always guaranteed or money will be refunded.



If no member of your family has ever used Syrup Pepsin and you would like to make a personal trial of it before buying it in the regular way of a druggist, send your address—a postal will do—to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 203 Washington St., Monticello, Ill., and a free sample bottle will be mailed you.

Every Good Boll Counts

In many cotton fields there is too much "weed" and the bolls fall. To prevent this balance the plant food.

The old idea that cotton does not need much Potash is hard to eradicate. But the longer Phosphates have been used on the crop the greater becomes the need of more.

POTASH

Try a cotton fertilizer with 6 to 8 per cent. Potash and use liberal side dressings of Kainit.

It will pay because Potash Pays.

Mix your old style fertilizer with an equal quantity of Kainit.

We now sell Kainit and all Potash Salts direct. Write us for prices and for our free book on Cotton Culture.

Fuller's Earth.

Fuller's earth, so named from its earliest use in fulling wool, is a rather rare, soft, friable rock whose value depends altogether on its texture and its filtering and absorbent properties. It has no definite composition, mineralogically, its physical properties rather than a chemical analysis determining its commercial value. Fuller's earth was first produced in the United States in the early 'nineties.

MRS. A. M. WOOLLEY STRICKEN

Carried to Birmingham for Treatment. Admission refused.

Word was brought to Clanton Wednesday over the phone that Mrs. Dr. A. M. Woolley of Thorsby had been stricken with meningitis and asking that a certain physician come up immediately to look after the case. The physician for whom the call was made could not get off at the time and afterward learned that the patient had been carried to Birmingham for treatment, taking the 10:20 train from Thorsby north. She was accompanied by her husband and another physician. Upon arrival at the South Highlands Infirmary an immediate diagnosis was made by Dr. Prince, who pronounced it a case of cerebro spinal meningitis. Dr. Prince afterward called in Dr. Peters, an expert on diagnosis, who agreed thoroughly with Dr. Prince. The South Highland Infirmary is not prepared to care for infectious or contagious diseases, so Mrs. Woolley had to be refused admission. Efforts were made to get her in other places but these also proved ineffectual. Dr. Prince secured some of the spinal fluid and submitted it to microspic examination, showing the presence of meningitis germs. Mrs. Woolley, having been refused admittance into the infirmaries of Birmingham, was returned to her home in Thorsby on the early Thursday train. We learn that she is now resting well. Just how they secured passage on the train to Birmingham, or from Birmingham to Thorsby is not our business, but it is certain that if the trains are hauling meningitis patients indiscriminately it will result in lessening the travel of well patients over that road—and it might—it might also spread the disease.

We understand that at Thorsby several homes have been quarantined as a result of the declaration of the Birmingham physicians.

Well, what YOU got to say now?

NEGRO DEAD AND BURIED

TOWN OF CLANTON BEARS EXPENSE.

Since writing the article about the negro with meningitis which appears on the first page hereof, the poor negro has died; he closed his eyes in endless sleep Wednesday afternoon. Wiley Williams and Jim Baker buried him in the local cemetery at the expense of the town of Clanton. The town of Clanton furnished the coffin, the medicines, the food—for the patient and the nurses—and all other necessary expenses, as well as the trouble and anxiety. Still that poor, unfortunate negro came from the eastern part of the county—from a section, a place, if you please, where it is insisted no epidemic diseases exist and from a place whose people should have borne the expense and trouble. So long as Clanton and Chilton county submits to such treatment just so long will they have to bear it. It seems to the Press that it is high time these people were made to understand that they cannot dump ir sick upon the town just be- it suits their convenience to y the existence of the di- rot—the heighth of —IT DOES exist and at the camps. Rep- state so positive- ly and to us it appears time to MAKE them understand and understand thoroughly that we will not sacrifice our people in order to bring them pecuniary aid.

Dr. Gragg is today spraying the negro woman nurse who attended the dead negro; she should have all consideration—it is not her fault that she is placed as she is—but it is not Clanton's or Chilton county's fault either. As soon as she is ready to travel she should be made, under guard if necessary, to go back to the camps from which she came—and they should be made to keep her. If they are not prepared for such emergencies then they should prepare for such.

"QU'S CUSTODIAT II 3OS CUSTODIES?"

For some time complaints have been lodged with the county officials with reference to the indecent use of the facilities at the court house and so persistent and strong have these complaints grown that last Monday the Court ordered the Sheriff to keep close watch upon those using the places of retirement and to report the first offender to the Court. This the Sheriff did; he was all eyes and no noes. Every one who made his way to those particular compartments was under the close scrutiny of the eagle-eyed Sheriff and his deputies. Well, to make a long matter short, Deputy Smitherman approached a gentleman whom he did not know, or whom he did not at the time recognize, and was about to place him under arrest and conduct him before the Court—then in session. The gentleman looked up into the face of the deputy and promised not to offend any more. He was released on this promise. Imagine the bewilderment and chagrin of the deputy when he discovered that the offender was a member of the Court!

We do not write this to offend any one—that is far from our purpose—but we do write it to ask the question "Who shall guard the guards while they themselves are on duty?"

If we cannot secure observances from the "upright in spirit" from whom then may we expect to secure it?

Constipation, if Neglected, Causes Serious Illness

Constipation, if neglected, leads to almost innumerable complications affecting the general health.

Many cases of typhoid fever, appendicitis and other severe diseases are traceable to prolonged clogging of the bowels. Regarding the effects of constipation, C. E. Ayers, 6 Sabin St., Montpelier, Vt., says: "I was afflicted with constipation and billousness for years and at times became so bad I would become unconscious. I have been found in that condition many times. Physicians did not seem to be able to do me any good. I would become weak and for days at a time could do no work. Not long ago I got a box of Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets, and after using them found I had never tried anything that acted in such a mild and effective manner. I believe I have at last found the remedy that suits my case."

Thousands of people are sufferers from habitual constipation and while possibly realizing something of the danger of this condition, yet neglect too long to employ proper curative measures until serious illness often results. The advice of all physicians is, "keep your bowels clean," and it's good advice.

Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets are sold by all druggists, at 25 cents a box containing 25 doses. If not found satisfactory, your money is returned.

THINKS JUDGE IS PERSECUTED

HE IS HANDS OFF IN ACTION AGAINST A. E. SINGLETON.

SHORTAGE IS MADE GOOD

Recommendations of Grand Jury Have Not Reached Attorney General.

Montgomery.—Announcement was made from the office of Examiners of Public Accounts that A. E. Singleton, Probate Judge of Bullock county, settled every item charged against him by the State Examiner in 1911, immediately after he had been apprised of the amount of errors in his accounts.

Impeachment proceedings against the Bullock county official were recommended by the grand jury of that county because of the shortage in his books, which was shown by the examiner to have been more than $7,000 in the aggregate. Some of the errors were possibly technical ones, according to the examiner, but Judge Singleton settled them at once without question. Both county and state amounts were paid by the official.

Governor O'Neal declared he was cognizant of the fact that Judge Singleton had at once paid up the errors discovered in his accounts and stated that the action of the Bullock grand jury took the matter out of his hands.

The governor believes, however, that Judge Singleton is possibly being persecuted by a certain element which has consistently endeavored to injure him. The governor called attention to the promptness with which the probate judge had rectified the mistakes which occurred in his office and also pointed out the slpendid record that he has since made.

The chief clerk of the State Auditor's office also showed where Judge Singleton had promptly settled with the state for the discrepancies discovered in his books.

The recommendations of the Bullock grand jury have not been received by Attorney General Brickell, to whom they must becertified by the clerk of the supreme court before action can be brought.

PAY NO TOLLS TO STATE.

Alabama Has Only Right to Regulate Water Power, Says Governor O'Neal.

Montgomery.—Alabama has surrendered her right to exact tolls from water power companies for the use of her streams and specific control over such corporations; but the stte still possesses the right to regulate such water power companies as public service corporations, according to Governor O'Neal, who has issued a statement explaining his position on the subject. The statement of the governor was prompted by an article appearing in one of the newspapers of the state comparing the attitude of Governor O'Neal and the attitude of Governor Sulzer of New York toward water power companies.

The laws of Alabama governing power grants differ from the laws of New York on this topic, according to Governor O'Neal. In New York the state is permitted to exact tolls from the companies, because the rights have never been surrendered. In this state the opposite condition exists.

CHILDREN ELIGIBLE FOR MILLS.

Law Places Restrictions on Age and School Attendance.

Montgomery.—Dr. W. H. Oates, state prsion inspector, has issued a list of all the children in Alabama who are eligible for employment in the mills, factories and manufacturing establishments of the year for the year of 1913.

This statement is issued annually in compliance with the child labor law.

Children are required to reach a certain educational standard each year before they are permitted to labor in the mills.

Montgomery.—Fifty seven white teachers and 12 negroes passed the state examinations in Sumter county, and will be granted certificates, according to an announcement of the state board of examiners.

STATE LOSES FIGHT.

Governor Says Trouble Over School Lands May Be Carried to Supreme Court.

Montgomery.—Claims of the State of Alabama on thousands of acres of sixteenth section school lands were abrogated by a decision of the Supreme Court in the case of State vs. Sudie Schmidt, affirming the verdict of the Talladega City Court. The Supreme Court holds that adverse possession of these lands for a period of twenty or more years prior to the enactment of the laws contained in the code of 1907 ripens into a good title as against suits of the State brought for the recovery of the lands.

The case was brought in the Talladega court for the purpose of ejecting Sudie Schmidt from certain sixteenth section school lands which had been in the possession of her family more than twenty years. The question before the court was whether or not the statute of limitations ran against the possession of the school lands.

The court holds that there is no provision of the organic law of Alabama from which it could be concluded that sixteenth section lands should be exempt from the application and effect of the laws of limitation, which are applicable to all other lands save those set aside to any public governmental purpose or temporarily owned by the State.

The sixteenth section school lands were set aside by an act of the Federal government in 1819 for school purposes and the income from these lands had been devoted to this purpose in Alabama.

The decision of the Supreme Court in the case has a far reaching effect, as many thousands of acres of the lands have been occupied by private citizens for a long period of years.

Governor O'Neal declared that the State probably will appeal the case to the United tSates Supreme Court.

SANDERS FILES DEMURRER.

State Health Officer Says Money Is Not Property of Plaintiff.

Montgomery.—Declaring that the money in question was not the property of the plaintiff, Dr. W. H. Sanders State Health Officer, filed sixteen demurrers as answer to the suit of the State of Alabama against him to recover $4,998.65, which is alleged in the complaint he has been paid as salary without authority.

The bill of complaint against Dr. Sanders was filed in the civil division of the City Court January 7 by Attorney General Robert C. Brickell, and charges that the defendant, having been elected as State Health Officer for a term of six years at a salary of $4,200, did at various times during 1911, and subsequently thereto up to date, collect and receive out of the funds appropriated by the State of Alabama for the State Board of Health the said sum in excess of salary allowed by law.

JONES AND WATSON TO HANG.

It is expected same date will be fixed for the hanging of Jones.

Jones and Watson will be the first white men ever hanged in Jefferson County for killing a negro.

EXPLORER SCOTT AND PARTY DEAD

MEN WERE OVERCOME BY BLIZZARD AND WERE FROZEN TO DEATH.

HAD REACHED SOUTH POLE

Explorer Had Made Report of Accomplishment January 18, 1912.

London.—Capt. Robert F. Scott, the famous British antarctic explorer, and four members of the south pole expedition have perished in the antarctic after being the first to discover the south pole. News of the tragedy was received here in a dispatch after the exploration ship Terra Nova, which had gone to McMurro Sound to bring the explorers back to civilization, had reported the deaths by wireless as she was passing Cape Saunders.

The Scott party, after having reached the south pole on January 18, 1912, were on their way back to their base of supplies when they were overtaken by a blizzard and lost their way. All froze to death. The victims, in addition to Captain Scott, were Dr. Wilson, chief of the scientific staff; Captain Oates, of the Inniskillen dragoons, who was in charge of the dogs and ponies; Lieutenant Bowers, of the Royal Indian marines, and Lieut. R. E. Evans, in charge of the equipment.

It was learned from the family of Captain Scott that Mrs. Scott had sailed from San Francisco on February 5 for New Zealand to join her husband, who was scheduled to arrive at Christ Church from the antarctic this month.

Scott reached the south pole 35 days after Captain Amundsen, its discoverer. Amundsen reached the point further south on December 14, 1911, and remained there three days. In accounts he says that the weather on the return trip from the pole to his base was excellent. He saw no trace of the Scott party.

There are still Japanese and German expeditions in the antarctic looking for the pole. An Australian expedition also started out to make scientific discoveries in the antarctic and its members may have decided to make a dash for the pole.

JAPAN'S CABINET RESIGNS.

Scenes of Disorder in Tokio and Premier Stoned—Many Injured.

Tokio.—A mob in the streets of Tokio stoned Prince Taro Katsura, premier and minister of foreign affairs, and then attacked a number of newspaper offices. The attack came shortly after the premier had offered the resignation of all the cabinet to the Emperor. The premier took refuge in a government building and soldiers drove away the rioters.

A number of persons, including some of the police, were injured during the fighting. The mob attempted to burn newspaper offices. The disorders continued during the afternoon and further clashes with the police were feared.

The resignation was the result of the refusal of liberals and constitutionalists in the diet to join Saionji in withdrawing a vote of lack of confidence in the government. Admiral Baron Minoru Saito, minister of marine, refused to sign an order for the dissolution of the diet and the resignation of the cabinet was the only step left.

WEBB LIQUOR BILL PASSED.

Prohibits Interstate Shipments of Liquors Into "Dry" States

Washington.—The Senate by a viva voce vote passed the Webb liquor bill already passed by the House as a substitute for the Kenyon-Sheppard bill.

The Webb bill would prohibit shipment of intoxicating liquors from one state to another when intended to be received or sold in violation of the law of the state to which the shipment is made.

WASHINGTON GOSSIP

Uncle Sam Wants Goats for Service in the Army

WASHINGTON.—Whether for administrative purposes a short-haired goat should be classified with a paste pot, a fumigator or a six-inch gun is a question now demanding the serious attention of the wise men of the war department.

The war department wants goats. Goats that will eat mosquitoes, or at least that will eat the foliage where the mosquitoes breed and congregate, are particularly desired. Just how many goats the department will want has not yet been settled because the acreage capacity of a goat for weeds and browsing has not yet been accurately determined. However, the officials are looking for goats if they can find the right appropriation to charge them to, and it has not yet been decided whether this should be equipment, sanitation or miscellaneous expenditures.

The root of the trouble is Fort Washington, down the Potomac. This has long been known as one of the most unhealthy posts in the army. The hospital there usually has the "S. R. O." sign out, and the compounders of quinine and kindred remedies have come to look upon the post as a regular meal ticket.

All that seems to ail the fort is malaria. Now, as every one knows by this time, the malaria mosquito is the only insect to carry malaria. Usually it is a rather simple matter to get rid of the mosquitoes by eliminating their breeding places, which are always collections, large or small, of stagnant water. But in the case of Fort Washington there has been trouble getting at the breeding places. There is a stretch along the water front that is not wet enough to drain and yet is too wet for sanitary purposes. The grass and weeds there have been cut and recut, but they will not stay cut, and an impoverished government cannot let the war department have money enough for a sea wall or other sort of permanent binding on the edge of the river.

So the war department has put in a requistion for goats, twenty of them, and they, being cheerful and pretty constant feeders, it is thought they can be depended on to keep the vegetation in check so that the sanitation experts can find the wet spots on the ground and standard oil the mosquitoes out of existence.

This start of twenty sounds modest, but it is as many healthy goats as the government can afford to buy. Billies and nannies both are desired.

There Is Balm in Gilead and Salve in Africa

LET joy expand like a choking canary and pleasure spout forth as water from a broken pipe. There is still balm in Gilead and salve in Africa There will be a grand inaugural ball. It will be such a scene of gaiety as the modest electric light bulb seldom smiled upon.

The die is cast. The gorgeous event will come to pass despite the prohibition of President-elect Wilson. Preparations are going forward like a detachment of Turks retreating from the Balkan frontier. While the event may prove a trifle disappointing to the ultra fashionable set, and somewhat dazzling to the new chief magistrate, there will be all sorts of compensations. The tickets will cost less. There will be more room in which to swing partners.

The colored brother has beaten everybody to it. He has put the inaugural committee on music up a tree and circumvented Governor Wilson. He has chartered Convention hall, the largest auditorium in this city. He will have an affair that will make former events look like pine cones falling from a redwood tree.

The National Negro Woodrow Wilson league of Richmond, Va., has taken the initiative. Also it deposited the necessary cash guarantee. Giles B. Jackson, the negro millionaire, is president of the league. The inaugural ball under negro auspices is scheduled for the night of March 5. It was deferred a day in order that all might recover from the frolics and follies of March 4.

Gold pieces at half price never went off like the tickets for this ball. Between five and six thousand have already been sold. The price per is $2.50.

President-elect and Mrs. Wilson have been extended a cordial invitation to attend a reception which the league will give prior to the opening of the ball.

Spirit Squad Is Needed as Adjunct to Police

AS AN innovation, a "spirit squad" has been suggested as a desirable addition to the Metropolitan police force. This, it is argued, would greatly tend to clear up some mysterious robberies that have been reported to the central office.

The reason why a spirit squad is necessary was told the other day by Maj. Richard Sylvester, superintendent of police. Major Sylvester declares that many of the robberies which have been reported to the police occurred only in the dreams of those who reported them.

Speaking of the queer kink in the human brain which permits such things to happen, Major Sylvester said:

"In every walk of life we meet with queer and at times surprising experiences, but the police hear and see more that tends to question humanity than employes in any other line of work.

"It seems strange, but nevertheless it is true, that persons have dreams and hallucinations which are reported to the police as facts for investigation. Dreaming of robbers, they have awakened suddenly with all the excitement and alarm that would attach to the genuine case, fired revolvers at the supposed intruder, and only been reconciled to their mistake after close inquiry proves it such.

"The greatest imposition is that which occurs a great many times a year when persons who cannot or do not want to pay their just debts report that they have been robbed of sums of money. They will prearrange to give color to the truth of their report, but are generally found out in the end.

"The public should not believe everything they read and hear about burglaries and highway robberies, for many of the cases so reported, after investigation, are shown to be without foundation.

"So, the 'spirit squad.'"

Politics at a Funeral Leads to Swift Arbitration

ALL THREE of the big political parties were involved in the row over the corpse of Charles Curtis, a colored messenger at the capitol, and the funeral was delayed one day. Curtis, who was a strong Democrat and organizer of the Personal Liberty league, died Tuesday. His erstwhile friend and political ally, George Robinson, head of the house of representatives' tonsorial parlor, called upon the widow with his condolences and was horrified to find that a Republican undertaker had been engaged for the last touches. Robinson protested and the widow allowed him to go forth and hire a Democratic undertaker, who, he said, would not present so large a bill.

Robinson went on his mission. A few hours later two undertakers appeared at the house and the ensuing argument drifted from business to politics, and finally to fisticuffs, and the two men had to hunt up Robinson at the house barber shop to try to settle the matter by arbitration. They all made such a row there that the capitol police gathered in all hands and took them before Captain Megrew, superintendent of the capitol police. He is a wise man, but he had to acknowledge the complications were too swift for him.

As a last resort, the interested parties bethought them of Jerry South, the plain and unvarnished son of Arkansas, chief clerk of the house and steam roller savant. He decided the matter in a terrific hurry. He fired both colored undertakers, the Democrat and Republican alike, and hired a white undertaker.

And the odd part is that the final undertaker is a Bull Moose enthusiast.

Watch These Columns For The Announcement!!

Beginning next Thursday, February 20th, the Press will inaugurate the most interesting contest ever held in this section of the State. It will be altogether different from any contest ever before had; it will be managed by competent contest people who have established a reputation throughout the United States for fairness and direct dealing.

Ten beautiful and useful prizes will be offered--the capital prize being a handsome mahogony finished piano--worthy a place in the home of any one.

That it will be conducted under a rule of strict fairness is guaranteed when you consider the fact that such business houses as the Gamble Hardware Company, J. M. Potts Grocery Company, Mrs. Clara Mullins Millinery Company, Bryant McKee, Meat and Produce, Potts & Nix Shoe Company, J. V. Higgins, Jeweler and Optician, Spigener's Cash Store and W. I. Mullins, all of whom have thoroughly investigated the merits of the contest, have joined hands with the PRESS to make it a success.

Do not get this confused with former contests; it is nothing like it. Do not think it is going to be a contest in which the best "jockey" can win out--nothing of the kind will happen. It will be conducted on merit, decided on merit and the prizes awarded on merit.

Read carefully the rules announced next week and prepare to enter from the beginning and remain till the close.

It's going to be short, quick, snappy. Watch for the announcement of prizes. Interest your friends NOW so that when the ccntest opens you will be ready for the fray.

It will be opened to every white person in Chilton and adjoining counties regardless of age, sex, political faith or religious belief.

Watch, get ready, prepare yourself and give a good account of yourself

LIQUID REFRESHMENTS GALORE

Did you ever hear of a trunk full of booze? That's a funny way to transport the stuff isn't it? Well, some folks have queer ways. You remember long ago some one, perhaps it was James Riley, wrote "for tricks that are vain and ways that are queer the heathen Chinee is peculiar."

Well, the slant-eyed Mongolian hasn't anything on the swarthy-faced Sam Areno; he carries his liquids in a trunk—and he carries trunks full too. Yes, literally trunks full of liquid pizen; that is, if the tales told at the Sheriff's office can be relied upon, and up to this writing we have failed to corner the Sheriff in anything but the straight, unadultered goods—truth we mean.

Last Friday morning he was "put neat" and went to Lomax; at this classic little village he located one Sam Areno; he also located the Areno "luggage." Areno was dam bound; his trunks were dam checked and through his mind flitted ever and anon dreams of a dam good time (that isn't cussing). Areno had in those two precious trunks just three hundred and eighty one half pints of red-eye; he anticipated great profits out at the dam, for he was to arrive just the day before the 'boys" were to receive their weekly stipends; he would have ample time to advertise his goods, wares and merchandise and become acquainted with his prospective customers. Sam didn't go the dam—the Sheriff saved him the trip—also his luggage and the contents thereof.

Snugly ensconced under a few shirts and other articles of wearing apparel were those gleaming, glistening half pints. Now they repose in stilly quietude within the feited walls of the county bastile—so does Sam, though he's far from quiet; he feels that he has been unjustly treated; he should have been allowed to dispose of his wares first—he needed "de mon" to pay the fine that will doubtless be imposed upon him.

PUBLISHED IN THE INTEREST OF CHILTON COUNTY AND HER PEOPLE

VOL 3. CLANTON, ALA., THURSDAY FEBRUARY 20, 1913 NO. 35

LETTER OF THANKS FROM JUDGE DEASON

I desire to thank Mr. S. E. Waldrup and Mr. R. L. Wells for their reply to my letter on the subject of good roads. I like to see men willing to help, by their suggestions solve the problem of road improvement in our county.

By doing as Mr. Waldrup suggests we could improve our roads; no one will deny that fact, but I am of the opinion that he nor anyone else will ever be able to have overseers and hands work the roads as he thinks they should work. He says we should enforce the laws we now have, and I agree with him fully on that point, but can we do that? We are working under the same general laws that we ha had for many, many years, possibly for fifty or seventy years. Have they ever been enforced? I am inclined to believe that the majority of the people are really opposed to working the roads under the old system of warning them to give their time and furnish tools to work a few days on the roads.

I don't think you can keep up the roads now by using the ordinary farming tools—hoe, scoop and small plow. The earth's surface is no stronger to-day than it was 25 years ago, but the roads in our county are called upon to support 25 or 50 times as much travel with much heavier loads than were hauled when the majority of the roads in Chilton county were covered with pine straw.

We have one of the best counties in the State for building good roads. We have the material—sand, clay and gravel—almost at the point needed for road building. How will you have it properly placed?

Mr. Wells says that he is ready to be shown that he is wrong when he opposes a bond issue for road building. That is the fair thing—speak out for what you think is right Show me that I am wrong and that you can and will build roads without a bond issue and I will strike hands with you and do all I can to help put your plan into effect. I agree with you as to the right of way for a road. Fifteen feet is not enough; it takes that much, in some places, to carry the water that is turned into the road by terraces from the fields along the road. We all know that such is the case in many instances, but just what is best to offer along that line now, I will leave some one else to suggest.

Let's build the rural routes so that we can be able to receive the full benefit of the parcel post service. If we will build the rural mail routes every one will be near a good road, and a farmer needs the roads more than any one else, or at least he uses them more, hence, it would be better for him to be in a mile or so of a good road than to be 40 or 50 miles from one. I am for bonds to build the rural mail routes. I think we can build them and that we need them, Respectfully,

E. B. Deason.

SCOTT LANDED IN NORTH CAROLINA

CALLS BALLS AND STRIKES IN TAR HEEL STATE.

A few days ago, in the office of the Clanton Press, Mr. Scott E. Chesnutt signed and sealed a contract whereby he becomes one of the official umpires for the approaching season.

Mr. Chesnutt was an applicant for a birth in the Southern League, but as there were sixty-two previous applications she failed of appointment.

However, Senator Kavanaugh, President of the Southern League, wrote him that he should have the first vacancy in that league. He was offered a place on the staff of the New York State League, but preferred to go to the Tar Heel State. The cities composing this league are Charlotte, Greensboro, Durham, Winston-Salem, Raleigh and Asheville.

GOOD ROADS MEN IMPRESS WASHINGTON

President John Craft and Vice-President John W. O'Neill, of the Alabama Good Roads association, who appeared before the joint congressional committee on federal aid in road building and presented Alabama's desires on this important question, made a splendid impression on the committee, accordihg to the reports from Washington.

Mr. O'Neill writes that the committee will probably report the Shackelford bill which provides for the building of post roads by the government in the various states. He writes that under this plan Alabama will receive annually from the government $500,000 to aid in road construction.

Mr. O'Neill expresses confidence that this bill will be passed.

IN MEMORY OF LITTLE ALLIE

On Sunday, 28th 1913, the Lord in his infinite wisdom visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. B. McCary, of Riderville, and took their sweet little Allie—just five years of age. She was sick but five days with that dread disease, Diptheria. The visit of the death angel to this home was indeed a severe stroke to its inmates for it removed from earth to heaven the sweet spirit of the light of the home. Allie was layed to rest in the Plantersvile cemetery by loving honds.

Weep not dear friends and bereaved parents, little Allie has gone home to Jesus there to dwell; she has gone His praise there to swell.

GOOD ROADS FOR MARSHALL COUNTY.

MEETING HELD TO ASCERTAIN SENTIMEMT REGARDING BOND ISSUE

Huntsville, Ala., Feb. 14.—Special.)—Marshal county has interested her people in the building of a system of pike roads like in Madison county, and her commissioners are holding a special session in Guntersville Thursday for the purpose of ascertaining if the sentiment is strong enough to issue bonds for the amount of $150,000 for this purpose. Madison has taught her neighboring county the good there is in a fine pike system, and interest in road building has been strong for the past year.

MRS. E. M PINCKARD ENTERTAINED

We clip the following from a recent issue of the Atlanta Journal:

Gadsden.—Mrs. Wilber Pinckard entertained Friday afternoon from 3 to 5 at her attractive home on Walnut street with a large and brilliant reception in honor of Mrs. E. M. Pinckard, of Clanton, Ala., who is her charming guest. The lovely interior of the Pinckard home is well adapted to entertaining and filled with handsome palms and ferns intermingled with the brilliant red hearts and other pretty valentine suggestions was a fitting background for the handsome women receiving. Mrs. W. D. Pinckard was charming in white charmeuse and Mrs. E. M. Pinckard was regal in a handsome impertede lace gown. Those receiving with them were Mrs. W. J. Beggs and Mrs, A. G. Smith. The guests were welcomed by the Mesdames Roy White, Arthur Ralls, Misses Milliee Wilson and Ruth Agricola. The dining room was most inviting. The tea table holding shaded lights and cupids and hearts were filled with bonbons and nuts, the centerpiece being a large basket filled with crimson carnations Mesdames James Elliott, R. B. Talliferro, Harry Bellinger and Annie Joe Hughes received here. Miss Rena Barber, disguised as Cupid, with wings and the graceful bow and arrow, was an interesting figure, flitting among the guests with crimson hearts of mints. The valentine table, filled with bique cupids, was presided over by Misses Maud Belbuger and Margaret Hood. A number of handsomely gowned women called during the afternoon-

Among the number of pretty affairs given in honor of Mrs. E. M. Pinckard, the charming guest of Mrs. W. D. Pinckard, was the moving picture party Monday afternoon when Mrs. W. J. Beggs entertained in her honor. Her guests included Mesdames W. D. Pinckard, E. M. Pinckard, George S. Vann, W. A. Bellinger, R. B. Tailiferro, C. P. Butcher, A. W. Taylor and Miss Nena Hammond. After several interesting pictures, delicious ices were enjoyed at "Vances."

SENATOR BOURNE'S LETTER

MAKES INQUIRY AS TO ATTITUDE OF PRESS ON FEDERAL AID

Notwithstanding the fact that we stated that Senator Bourne's letter would not be published till next week, we deem it of so much importance and are so anxious to acquaint the people with the real situation, that we have decided to print it this week.

The letter speaks for itself; it shows plainly that the Federal government is ready and willing to co-operate in any sensible feasible measure to assist the people of the country to secure good roads. Its hows that the federal government is not afraid to issue bonds to secure good roads; it shows that the Federal goverament is willing, to a certain extent, to issue bonds and turn the money over to the proper officials to expend in securing good roads. It, in fact, shows many things that our people are hesitant about believing, simply because they thave been misled, or are unwilliug to read and inform themselves.

For the government to aid in the building of post -roads would require an issue of at least Fifty Millions dollars in bonds—this would give each state about one million for post roads.

But we do, not propose to discuss the measure here; our purpose is to invite others to discuss it. The columns of the Press are open for a full and free discussion provided the discussion is carried on without asperity or [illegible] derstood that each one has a perfect right to his individual views; do not, therefore, criticise anyone for exercising this right. Try to convince people that you are right but do abuse because they refuse to be convinced.

The Press will be glad to print all articles on the question free of charge, but they must be confined to as few words as possible; we cannot give more than one column to any one communication.

The reply of the editor to Senator Bourne's letter will be published later; it is sufficient to say that he favored the building of the post roads first by liberal aid from the Federal government.

CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES
JOINT COMMITTEE ON FEDERAL AID IN THE CONSTRUCTION OF POST ROADS.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 1, 1913

My Dear Sir: I am very anxious to obtain for the benefit of the Joint Committee an intelligent expression of public opinion on the basic questions involved in the granting of Federal aid in road improvement. It occurs to me you might like to-operate in this matter to the extent of stimulating the public to an expression of their views. If this suggestion strikes you favorably, will will you kindly advise me as early as practicable as to public opinion in your section of the country on the following questions:

1. Should the Government make appropriations in aid of public roads?

2. On what roads should the first Government appropriation, if made, be expended: (a) all roads; (b) post roads (r. f. d. and star routes); (c) main travelled market roads; (d) main highways connecting important cities and towns in State; (e) trunk line, interstate highways connecting State capitals and large cities?

3. Should the Government appropriation be expended on construction, on maintenance, on general improvement, or on any or all of these, or should the allotment by the Government be unconditional, or paid as a reward after local authorities have constructed or maintained a highway in good condition?

4. What proportion of cost of construction, improvement, or maintenance should be borne by National Government, State, county, road district, and abutting property owners, respectively, or what amounts per mile should be paid as rewards?

5. Should the Federal appropriation be apportioned among the States on basis of population, area, mileage of roads, mileage of rural and star routes, taxable valuation, or a combination of these?

6. Should the supervision of construction or maintenance of Government aided roads be by the Federal Government, the State and local authorities, or jointly?

Kindly let me know in what manner you submit these questions to the people of your community, and how soon you can probably report the concensus of opinion.

Yours very truly,
JONATHAN BOURNE, Chairman.

Note:—The federal government has already appropriated $500,000.00 to be used in aid of post roads; $10,000 00 to be alloted to each state provided the state appropriates twice that amount. The selection of the roads upon which expenditures are to be made is left with the governor. But of this later on; let us hear from you first.

ODE TO WASHINGTON.

The following ode was found in an old scrap book, and is supposed to have been written by Mayor Gaynor of New York when he was still too obscure to persuade the magazines to publish his literary efforts.

Again we celebrate the birth
Of one of the greatest men of earth—
Great in peace and great in strife,
Great in the council hall:
Great in the sight of a critical wife—
The greatest thing of all.

Neither a saint nor a demigod,
Just a sprout from the virgin sod,
Faults he had as have other men;
He sowed some wild oats, too,
But he did his duty sublimely when
He found that the thing to do.

Weak in the flesh, he still could stand
Colossus-like for his native land!
Brave in the face of the jealous foe,
He smirked at his looking-glass,
And was plunged in the deepest depths of woe
By a freckled country lass.

Of one of the greatest men of earth!
He had his faults; he loved and made
A fool of himself as others do;
When women praised him he displayed
A human greed for flattery, too.

Let us praise him,
Let us raise him
To fame's highest place, since he
Though so great in council hall
And in war was, after all,
So very much like you and me.

BREEZY BITS ABOUT G.W.

Washington powdered his hair and wore a shirt which was made of the material that was used for lace curtains. He was not a statesman who felt that it was necessary to affect a slouch hat and proclaim his unwillingness to be seen in evening clothes, in order to win the support of the plain people.

It is alleged that Washington once threw a silver dollar across the Potomac river, but he never threw away money by purchasing lobster for a chorus girl.

A set of false teeth that were worn by Washington are preserved in the National museum at Washington. One is surprised when one examines them to find that there is no trade-mark or other sign upon them to indicate that they were "made in Germany."

If all the men and boys who have been named for George Washington could be drilled and armed and gathered into a cohesive force they could whip any army in the world.

Washington was the richest man in America when he retired from public office, and a large majority of the office-holders who have followed him seem to have had a desire to claim the same distinction.

The Father of his Country possessed small ability as a public speaker. When it was necessary for him to deliver an address he read it from manuscript and became so nervous that he could hardly keep the pages from eluding his grasp. He never had the advantage of early practice at a high school commencement.

Some men think that inability to sign their names so that they may be deciphered is an indication of greatness. Washington does not appear to have regarded that as an infallible sign.

When Washington was a candidate for the presidency there were many people who feared that he would upset business and wreck the government owing to his inexperience as a chief magistrate. He insisted, however, that it would be possible to have a president who had not had to begin somewhere.

We have no proof that Washington ever rolled a cigarette or tasted grape-fruit, or bought on margins or had himself paged in a hotel or tried to write a play or attempted to become a fiddler or posed as a village cut-up or threatened to stop his paper because he did not like the editor's policy.

Washington never traveled abroad, never saw a baseball game, never played golf (and never kicked his wife's waist; but it is alleged that he did lay a cornerstone or two.

WAS DISTRUSTFUL OF FRANCE

Washington, With Prophetic Eye Foretold the Conflict That Later Sundered the Two Countries.

George Washington was not one of those who was disposed to consider France as a trustworthy friend of this country. He had been reluctant to take up arms against England, and after the Revolution he was deeply anxious to reestablish and maintain friendly relations with the mother country. A letter which he wrote in 1789 to a former friend in England throws an interesting light upon his feeling at that time. The letter is as follows:

"Mount Vernon, 15th August, 1798.

"Revd. Sir,

"I know not how it has happened, but the fact is, that your favour of the 8th of Novr., last year, is but just received; and at a time when both public & private business pressed so hard upon me, as to afford no leisure to give the 'View of the Causes and Consequences of the American Revolution' written by you, and which you had been pleased to send to me, a perusal.

"For the honor of its Dedication, and for the friendly & favorable sentimts. which are therein expresesd, I pray you to accept my acknowledgment & thanks.

"Not having read the Book, it follows of course that I can express no opinion with respect to its Political contents—but I can venture to assert, beforehand, and with confidence, that there is no man in either country, more zealously devoted to Peace and a good understanding between the two Nations than I am—nor one who is more disposed to bury in oblivion all animosities which have subsisted between them & the Individuals of each.

"Peace, with all the world, is my sincere wish.—I am sure it is our true policy.—And am persuaded it is the ardent desire of the Government—But there is a Nation whose intermedling, & restless disposition, and attempts to divide, district & influence the measures of other Countries, that will not suffer us, I fear, to enjoy this blessing long, unless we will yield to them our Rights, & submit to greater injuries and insults than we have already sustained, to avoid the calamities resulting from War.

"What will be the consequences of our Arming for self defence, that Providence who permits these doings in the Disturbers of Mankind; & who rules and Governs all things, alone can tell.—To its all powerful decrees we must submit, whilst we hope that the justice of our Cause if War must ensue will entitle us to its protection.—With very sincere respect I am

UNSOPHISTICATED GEORGE.

George never saw an Ibsen play
Nor heard of Alexander's band;
The hobble skirt in George's day
Remained a thing as yet unplanned;
He never had Wall street to fight
Nor found insurgents to entrap,
And when he journeyed home at night
He did not dangle from a strap.

No manicurist laid
A shining polish on his nails;
With dynamite he never played,
Nor bought his shirts at bargain sales;

Never Saw a Hobble Skirt.

He never dodged a taxicab
Nor feared the teeth in Teddy's mouth;
He never started out to grab
A delegation from the South.

He never heard Caruso sing
In anybody's phonograph;
He never wrote an ode to spring
And Champ Clark never made him laugh;
He never heard of "Schedule K"
Nor drew three cards to fill a pair;
He never walked the Gay White Way
To see the actors strolling there.

He never met a suffragette
Nor ever traveled fast or far;
He never had to go in debt
To get his wife a motor car;
He never sent for Morgan when
A panic threatened or began,
Nor ever used a fountain pen—

Not Altogether a Case of Love.

Here is a story to illustrate the point that one never can judge by appearances.

"A young boy with golden curls, a regular cherub in appearance, was on the front porch playing with a little dog and putting him through a lot of tricks. A minister passed by and was struck by the appearance of the little chap and the celerity with which the dog obeyed all his commands.

"Ah, little boy," he said, you must love your dog. Are you good to him?"

"'Sure,' answered the cherub.

"And I suppose he loves you, too, and that's why he minds you so well?"

"'Well, if he didn't mind me, I'd knock his blooming block off,' was the unexpected retort of the child."

Flattery.

Visitor—So he trimmed the people here out of thousands of dollars? He must have been smooth. How did he do it?

Native—Simply by addressing every Democrat in town, in an apparently absent way, as "postmaster."—Puck.

MARINES TO CUBA FOR USE IN MEXICO

ARE READY TO MOVE AT ONCE SHOULD INTERVENTION BE NECESSARY.

CENSORSHIP CUTS OFF NEWS

Meagre Reports Indicate That Fighting Between Government and Rebels Continue.

Washington.—Two thousand United States marines from various barracks along the Atlantic coast were ordered to Cuba, there to be held in readiness for possible use in Mexico. Half of them will leave from Philadelphia on the transport Meade, already on its way from Newport News for the purpose. The second thousand left from Norfolk on the naval transport Prairie. The marines were drawn from the barracks at Norfolk, Washington, Philadelphia, New York, Portsmouth, Boston and Charleston.

Guantanamo is the present objective point of the marines, who will be established in camp in connection with the fleet under the command of Rear Admiral Badger. Whether these men will get further than Guantanamo will depend upon Mexican developments.

The withdrawal of this large number of marines means, it is said, that that branch of the defensive service of the country will be obliged to go entirely unrepresented in the inaugural parade. It was planned to have about 1,000 marines in the long line on that occasion.

Besides the movement of the marines, two army transports were ordered to proceed at once from Newport News to Galveston, Tex., where they might be close at hand for the movement of troops from the border should an emergency arise. Early in the day the Third cavalry at Fort Sam Houston was directed to hold itself in readiness to entrain for Galveston prepared for foreign service.

The government has not transports available in gulf waters and investigation disclosed that to engage commercial vessels in time of emergency would entail enormous expense and delay would result in preparing them for transport. It was, therefore, determined to send two of the transports at Newport News to the Texas port to await further orders.

At the various Atlantic coast barracks there are 3830 marines, the number at the places to be drawn on in the present movement being:

Norfolk, 785; Philadelphia, 769; New York, 573; Portsmouth, N. H., 364; Washington, 356; Boston, 347, and Charleston, 148. In addition there are with the Atlantic fleet 1,462 marines.

President Taft is plainly worried by the fact that although he has only a few more days to serve in the White House the situation in Mexico shows little signs of becoming less troublesome. The President has no desire to have over for Mr. Wilson the settlement of this country's relations with Mexicao, but he is decidedly opposed to taking any measure himself unless extreme provocation and wholesale murder of Americans drive him to it.

The President told friends that he realized what a difficult thing it would be for a new administration to gather up the reins of the government and understand the conditions in the southern republic in a few weeks or in a few months.

HOUSE PASSES BUILDING BILL.

Authorizes Construction of $25,000,000 Worth of Structures.

Washington.—After acrimonious debate the House passed the buildings bill, authorizing erection of $25,000,000 worth of public structures throughout the country. The vote on the bill was 184 to 46 and the opponents of the measure were unable to muster enough votes to seure a roll call to insure a record vote.

Representative Burnett, Representative Clark of Florida and Representative Austin of Tennessee defended the bill.

GETS A YEAR IN JAIL.

Head of Cash Register Company Must Also Pay Fine of $5,000.

Cincinnati, O.—John H. Patterson, president of the National Cash Register company, who with 28 other officials or former officials of the company was convicted of criminal violation of the Sherman anti-trust law, was sentenced to pay a fine of $5,000 and to serve one year in jail.

The other defendants were sentenced to terms ranging from nine months to a year in jail and to pay the costs of the long trial.

FIRE RAGING IN ADRIANOPLE.

Quarter Adjoining Sophia Mosque De Vastated By Fire.

Constantinople.—The quarter adjoining the St. Sophia mosque in Constantinople is burning. A hundred and fifty houses and shops so far have been destroyed, and the fire still is burning. It is said the situation around Bulair is unchanged. A Bulgarian column advancing through Belgrade forest to the west of Derkos lake, in the direction of Ormanli, and is controlling the heights west of Sirenkeui.

ACTIVITY IN DRY GOODS

Industry As Whole Presents Cheerful Aspect—Shipments Forward.

New York.—Bradstreet's Review of Trade says:

While there are many cross currents in trade, industry as a whole presents a cheerful aspect and shipments on spring accounts go forward with alacrity. Relatively most activity is shown in dry goods, which is running in excess of a year ago.

Western reports breathe a distinct tone of confidence and strength.

From these the sharing is downward to the rather slow conditions reported in parts of the south. Strikes existing, or projected, also act as a restraining feature in trade, but there seems to be rather less stress laid upon the tariff as a disturbing feature, either because preparations have been made accordingly, or because fuller knowledge leads to less uneasiness as to prospective changes. An interesting feature in the general situation is the closely restricted volume of speculative operations witnessed alike in securities, cereals, cotton and other commodities. Business failures for the week ending February 13 were 285, which compares with 305 in the like week of 1912. There were 27 failures in Canada.

Wheat, including flour, exports from the United States and Canada for the week ending February 13, total 4,354,168 bushels against 2,299,137 last year.

New York.—Dun's Review of Trade says:

Bpusiness maintains its position of steady, conservative expansion as yet unaffected in any material degree by the stirring events happening or impending in many parts of the world.

Although the renewed war in the Balkan peninsula continues to put a strain upon the international markets, it is noteworthy the situation in Paris seems easier. European crop advices are somewhat disappointing but the winter wheat outlook in this country is favorable in spite of considerable snow deficiency.

The weather in the west and southwest has recently been quite severe and this accounts for some falling off in the rate of gain in railroad earnings.

Railroad purchases of equipment continues to be the leading feature of the iron and steel trade

Grain prices have tended downward but cotton displays a firm undertone. Domestic conditions are against wheat values and the markets are palpably in need of support which has been derived to some extent from the situation abroad.

"AFTER TEA DANCE" LATEST.

Broadway Restaurant Starts New Craze Among New Yorkers.

New York.—Not satisfied with "turkey trotting" from dinner until daybreak, the dance-made pleasure seekers of this city invented the "after tea dance," from 4 to 6 o'clock. The first of the restaurants to introduc this latest craze was a Broadway resort, where turkey trotting and bunny hugging rule the night from after the theatre until breakfast, usually somewhere around 8 o'clock. The innovation proved immensely popular and profitable to the restaurant, as between cocktails and dances the "tea nests" worked up a fine appetite for dinner.

MAY EXPEL HAYWOOD.

I. W. W. Workers May Be Ousted From National Socialist Party.

Chicago.—All votes cast in the socialist party referendum on the expulsion of William D. Haywood, I. W. W. workers, from the board of directors, were on their way to the national headquarters here, but the results will not be known until February 26.

Haywood's expulsion was asked because he is an organizer for the I. W. W., which believes in sabotage and direct action, and is charged with having "anarchistic" tendencies. For several weeks members of the party have been voting on the question.

IMPROMPTU INAUGURAL BALL.

Democrats Get Up Affair—Invite Wilson To Be Present.

Washington.—Though President-elect Wilson has decreed against the time honored inaugural ball, the National Democratic association, including one hundred congressmen and senators from all parts of the country, just are bound to trip the light fantastic on inauguration night. Plans for the ball were announced and it was added that the new President, his cabinet and other distinguished guests have been invited to be there—if they will come.

Held for Big Theft.

St. Louis.—Raymon Llano, a Spaniard, who was arrested here recently when he attempted to change two $10,000 bills at a local bank, was said to have confessed complicity in the theft of $900,000 from the National Bank of Havana, Cuba.

On his confession five men have been arrested in Havana. Llano said he was to have received $1,000 for each $10,000 bank note he passed. The money was stolen from a package consigned to a New York bank.

IT'S HARD TO WORK

It's torture to work with a lame, aching back. Get rid of it. Attack the cause. Probably it's weak kidneys.

Heavy or confining work is hard on the kidneys, anyway, and once the kidneys become inflamed and congested, the trouble keeps getting worse.

The danger of running into gravel, dropsy or Bright's disease is serious. Use Doan's Kidney Pills, a fine remedy for backache or bad kidneys.

A New Jersey Case

Louis Henry, 626 Grove St., Jersey City, N. J., Says: "I suffered almost everything from broken down kidneys. My back was stiff and pained terribly. I was all run down. Doan's Kidney Pills gave my kidneys new life and a few boxes cured me completely."

MOTTO FOR CHRISTIAN HOME

Ideals Which Consistently Lived Up to, Cannot Fail to Make for Happiness in Life.

This home is dedicated to good will. It grew out of love. The two heads of the household were called together by a power higher than they. To its decree they are obedient. Every tone of the voice, every thought of their being, is subdued to that service. They desire to be worthy of their high calling, as ministers of that grace. They know their peace will go unbroken only for a little time. And often they suspect that the time will be more short even than their anxious hope. They cannot permit so much as one hour of that brief unity to be touched by scorn or malice. The world's judgments have lost their sting inside this door. Those who come seeking to continue the harmony which these two have won are ever welcome. The rich are welcome, so they come simply. The poor are welcome, for they have already learned friendliness through buffeting. Youth is welcome, for it brings the joy which these two would learn. Age is welcome, for it will teach them tenderness.—Collier's Weekly.

MOODY LADY NOT MOODY

For Five Years Miss Davis of Moody Was in Terrible Plight, But She Is Now in Fine Spirits.

Moody, Tex.—In an interesting letter from this place, Miss Cora Davis, of R. F. D. No. 6, Box 20, writes as follows:

"I had been taking different medicines for the past five years, without any relief, and last spring my system was so completely run down, and I felt so tired and nervous all the time, hardly felt like staying out of bed.

Friends advised me try Cardui, the woman's tonic, and after taking six bottles, I felt like an entirely different person.

I was relieved of my nervousness, and bad headaches, and could sleep soundly all night,—something I hadn't done for years.

I also gained 13 pounds in weight after taking Cardui, and am in better spirits, and feel better, than I have felt for five years.

I cannot say enough in behalf of Cardui. It is the grandest medicine ever discovered, and a God-send to all suffering women and girls."

We do not ask you to accept our statements as to the merits of Cardui, the woman's tonic.

We receive thousands of letters, similar to the above, from grateful ladies, every year, telling what this medicine has done for them, and giving us permission to publish their letters.

These letters speak for themselves.

LARGE FLY IN THE OINTMENT

Successful Candidate Should Have Been Happy, but There Were Reasons Why He Was Not.

"I suppose you're very happy, now that you're elected mayor?"

"Well, I can't say that I am. I thought I would be, but it hasn't worked out that way."

"But you got such a splendid vote. It ought to make you feel happy to think the people have such confidence in you."

"That is cheering, of course. It is fine to know that the majority of the people believe in you. Still, I'm not altogether contented."

"I can't understand it at all. Here you've been elected to the highest honor in the community; you have splendid opportunities to do good work; you may graduate from this position to broader service in the state, and possibly from the state to the nation. You ought to be happy if anyone is."

"I know it. But I'm not. The fact is I am up against it. I have four political managers who did splendid service for me, and each one demands the same job."—Detroit Free Press.

BAD CASE OF HEMORRHOIDS

Okalona, Ark.—"I had a bad case of itching and burning piles, and tried many remedies without relief. I could not sleep nor rest at night. The affected parts were irritated, also inflamed, and my family physician said I would have to undergo an operation.

"I bathed good with Cuticura Soap in pure water about fifteen minutes, then I applied the Cuticura Ointment. I did this four times a day for two weeks, then three times a day for another week, and in the space of three weeks I was cured sound and well. One box of Cuticura Ointment with Cuticura Soap cured my case of piles of six years' standing. When I commenced to use the Cuticura Soap and the Cuticura Ointment, I only weighed one hundred and twenty-eight pounds. Now I weigh one hundred and eighty-eight pounds." The downfall of Madero in Mexico may mean peace in that country for at least sixty days. Who can tell?

The senate passed the immigration bill over the veto of President Taft by practically a unanimous vote—but eighteen of the "venerable fathers" siding with the present head of the nation.

The terrible calamity which overtook Lieutenant Scott and his band of noble heroes who had reached the South Pole, is to be deeply deplored by civilization regardless of creed or place. It was a distinct loss to the scientific world.

Mr. Mallory has stated emphatically and unequivocally that he is not in the race for nomination for Governor. That ought—and does—settle the matter so far as he is concerned. But, what of Comer? Has any one heard from him yet?

Representative Hobson says he proposed to carry on his senatorial campaign just as a great nation carries on its war operations. Does he mean by this that he intends to fight his way to the front? If so, what's he going to do with those Merrimac-earned kisses and things?

The passage of the Webb-Kenyon bill in the House and Senate make a fellow feel real thirty down in this section. But now that it is a law, or rather has been passed as a law, put it into operation and jail the first cuss that dares to violate it. Laws are worthless unless they are enforced. A law enforced against the poor or the weak, but fails to operate on the carcass of the strong and rich, is oppression of the veriest kind.

Representative Blackmon had a good politcal eye in the voting contest on the Webb-Kenyon bill; he remembered November, 1909, and he introduced an amendment which provided that liquors shipped in from wet districts to dry districts for private consumption should not be applied to the provisions of the bill. His effort to provide a little panacea for his friends in the dry districts in cases of severe snake bites was voted down, however. Nevertheless it shows that Fred Blackmon is on his job and is trying to meet the demands of his "home folks" without fear.

In two more weeks Wilson (a democrat) will be president of these United States and yet the price of cotton has not gone down. Will some of our republican-Bull Moose friends please write us a card of explanation? We admit that we can't understand it. By all the rules heretofore laid down by Chilton republicans cotton should be selling at not more than five cents. Of course there's an explanation, just like there's an explanation about that Eighteen thousand dollars tax money, but what is it? That's what we want to know.

The Press has a most interesting letter from Senator Jonathan Bourne, Jr., with reference to Federal aid for roads. It was our intention to publish the letter in full this week, but that all lumbago took a new hold just at the psychological time which prevented its appearance. Next week, however, it will appear and will no doubt open the eyes of some of the doubting Thomases, or rather some of the antis, for there are really none who doubt the reasonableness of road building by bond issue.

Prof. Woodrow Wilson will ride to the Capitol building with President Taft, after which Prof. Taft will ride from the Capitol building with President Wilson.

Mr. Wilson has decided to go back to "law" and sign himself as "Thomas Woodrow Wilson," the name given him by his parents.

We have had quite a number of compliments on the "meningitis service" given recently by the Press, and at the same time we have enjoyed not a few "cussings" from those whose opinions we did not reflect. It's rather a difficult duty to please every one, especial-when all seem to hold different opinions. However, we have done nothing or written no word which we wish to retract; nevertheless, we have about decided, unless there is grave provocation, to say nothing more about the meningitis affair.

It mashes the toes of some folks pretty hard and seems not to create any great degre of pleasure to others—so let it die.

Let's give our attention to good roads, corn clubs and such things as will tend toward the upbuilding of the county.

This is the season of the year when mothers feel very much concerned over the frequent colds contracted by their children, and have abundant reason for it as every cold weakens the lungs, lowers the vitality and paves the way for the more serious diseases that so often follow. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is famous for its cures, and is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all dealers.

We are in business right here where you live. You are an acquaintance, neighbor or a friend of ours. This money-back-if-not-satisfied offer should prove the sincerity of our claims.

Our experience with them and the many reports we have received from those who have used them prove that they are really the most pleasing and satisfactory bowel remedy we know of.

Rexall Orderlies taste like candy. They are soothing and easy in action. They don't cause griping, nausea, purging or excessive looseness, as do the usual physic or laxative. Rexall Orderlies seem to act as a tonic-strengthener upon the nerves and muscles of the bowels. They promptly relieve constipation. They act to overcome the cause of constipation. They tend to eliminate the cause of sick headache, biliousness, bad breath, nervousness and other ills attendant upon inactive bowels.

LOCAL & PERSONAL

Clanton is getting up a "rep" as a conservative town. Week before last a horse was sold at auction for one dollar and forty cents, and last week the "flying jenny" man took in the munificent sum of twenty-five cents! That's going some, isn't it?

Mr. Scott Chesnutt received last Saturday an offer from the president of the South Atlantic league to umpire the coming season in that league, but having signed a contract with the Carolina league, he was forced to turn the offer down.

Surprise Your Friends

For four weeks regularly use Dr King's New Life Pills. They stimulate the liver, improve digestion, remove blood impurities, pimples and eruptions disappear from your face and body and you feel better. Begin at once. Buy of Upchurch Drug Co.

Mr. W. W. Fox, since coming to Clanton, has purchased quite a lot of real estate, and has erected several buildings, showing his faith in the stability and growth of Clanton; it appears that he has a perfect right, if he chooses, to plant a few oats for his personal use, otherwise to the contrary notwithstanding.

CABBAGE PLANTS that GROW We have on hand ready for distribution, the celebrated "Frost Proof" cabbage plants which grow regardless of cold weather. Exactly suited to this climate; large or small quantities. See us; prices always right.—Alred Drug Co.

There is no better medicine made for colds than Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It acts on nature's plan, relieves the lungs, opens the secretions, aids expectoration; and restores the system to a healthy condition. For sale by all dealers.

Mr. Mitchell, connected with the Bosa river dam in an official capacity, was in Clanton consulting with the Probate Judge with reference to the public roads in the neighborhood of the dam. His visit may prove a blessing in disguise to the people of Chilton. While here he incidentally stated that with the least particle of encouragement on the part of the citizens of Clanton, it would be an easy matter to establish a cotton factory here with sufficint capital to make it a "go" from the very beginning. Who next?

FOR SALE—Single comb Rhode Island Red Eggs; $1.00 for 15—Apply to W. O. Durbin, Clanton. Ala., Route 3. 1-30-12t.

Mrs. A. M. Woolley, of Thorsby, the wife of Dr. A. M. Woolley, who was stricken last Tuesday with meningitis, died at the family residence on Friday morning and was buried Friday afternoon. The funeral services were private because of the nature of the disease from which the patient died. The heartfelt sympathy of all go out to Dr. Woolley in this his hour of bereavement.

Do you know that more real danger lurks in a common cold than in any other of the minor ailments? The safe way is to take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, a thoroughly reliable preparation, and rid yourself of the cold as quickly as possible. This remedy is for sale by all dealers.

Miss Dovie Roper returned last Friday from an extended visit to relatives in Montgomery.

Mrs. J. E. Robinson, Sr., and little daughter, Miss Marguerite, have been spending some time with relatives in Georgia.

A Nervous Woman Finds Relief After Many Years

Women who suffer from extreme nervousness, often endure much suffering before finding any relief. Mrs. Daniel Kintner, of Defiance, O., had such an experience, regarding which she says:

"I had stomach trouble when I was eighteen years old that broke down my health, and for years I suffered with nervousness, headache, indigestion and nervous spasms. The spasms got so bad I would have them three or four times a week. After trying nearly every remedy recommended, I began taking Dr. Miles' Nervine, and I must say it helped me wonderfully. I have had no severe nervous spasms for several years."

MRS. DAN KINTNER,
1107 Pleasant St., Defiance, O.

Many remedies are recommended for diseases of the nervous system that fail to produce results because they do not reach the seat of the trouble. Dr. Miles' Nervine has proven its value in such cases so many times that it is unnecessary to make claims for it. You can prove its merits for yourself by getting a bottle of your druggist, who will return the price if you receive no benefit.

BILL VETOED BY PRESIDENT

Rushes Reasons for Veto to the Senate in Special Message.

Washington.—President Taft vetoed the Dillingham-Burnett immigration bill, which would revolutionize the immigration policy of the United States by imposing a literacy test upon all foreigners seeking a home in America.

In a short message to the senate, in his own handwriting, the president announced his disapproval of the measure solely because of the provision which would lock the doors of the United States against the alien who could not read some language or dialect.

The veto message was accompanied by a letter to the president from Secretary Nagel denouncing the literacy test as a radical provision, "based upon a fallacy in undertaking to apply a test which is not calculated to reach the truth and to find relief from a danger which really does not exist.

Attacks Appropriation Bills.

Washington.—A hot attack upon Democrats of the house for their "extravagant" appropriations was delivered on the floor by Representative Roddenbery of Georgia, who declared that the appropriation bills should die at this session and go over to the next congress when "they could be properlyly pruned by a Democratic house and senate." "The agricultural appropriation bill, the army bill," he said, both show an increase. The rivers and harbors bill is nearly twice as large as last year.

Standard Bale Wanted.

Savannah, Ga.—At a meeting of cotton exporters and others held here, a campaign to eliminate complaints of improper baling of cotton at interior points was decided upon. The exporters assert that because of the lack of a standard bale the staple cannot be compressed sufficiently to come within the recognized 22 1-2-pound density to the cubic foot. They are penalized 10 cents a bale in consequence. They insist a standard size bale can be had only through the changing of the box forms used in baling in the country.

ELECTORAL VOTE COUNTED

SENATE AND HOUSE CANVASS ELECTORAL VOTE FOR PRESIDENT AND VICE PRESIDENT.

Georgian Presides When Congress Declares Wilson and Marshall Are Elected.

Patrick Henry Gavel Used.

Washington, D. C.—Senator Bacon of Georgia, in presiding over the two houses, used the wooden gavel sent him by the Atlanta chapter of the D. A. R's, made of the wood of a tree that grew by the grave of Patrick Henry. Senator Bacon and former Vice President Fairbanks are the only men now living who have ever presided over the two houses.

Washington.—With elaborate ceremonies the senate and house, in joint session, canvassed the electoral votes of the various states of the Union 6N officialy declared Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey and Thomas R. Marshall of Indiana elected president and vice president of the United States for the term beginning March 4.

Senator Bacon, presiding over the joint session, proclaimed the election, when, to the crowded floor and galleries of the house chamber, he delivered the following proclamation prescribed in the official rules:

"This announcement of the state of the vote by the president of the senate pro tempore shall be deemed a sufficient declaration of the persons elected president and vice president of the United States, each for the term beginning March 4, 1913."

Democrats of the house and senate greeted the announcement with a round of applause, a few cheers and several shrill, long yells, the usual Democratic indications of approval. The galleries joined in the demonstration and the dignified senate, led by Senator Bacon and two pages bearing the wooden caskets containing the electoral vote certificates, returned to its own classic confines.

The nature of the house asserted itself, however, and there were cheers and handclapping and yells as the canvass proceeded. The announcement of the California vote drew applause from the Roosevelt supporters. A real Democratic outburst followed when Senator Martine, one of the tellers announced New Jersey's fourteen votes for Wilson and Marshall, and applause came from the Republican side when Utah and Vermont each gave Taft and Butler four votes.

Legislators Arrested for Bribery.

Chaleston, W. Va.—With marked money in their pockets, alleged to be the price of their votes in the United States senatorial contest, which is causnig a deadlock in the legislature four members of the house of delegates and one member of the senate of West Virginia were arrested in a hotel here by Sheriff Bonner Hill in the presence of the public prosecutor Thomas C. PRESIDENT WILL NOT INTERVENE

LATEST NEWS CONSIDERED AT THE WHITE HOUSE CONFERENCE.

NO CHANGE IN NAVAL PLANS

President Much Disturbed by Censorship—Keep in Touch with Ambassador Wilson.

Washington.—Despite the alarming information that has continued to come into Washington, not a member of the president's cabinet favored intervention when summoned to the cabinet meeting. Most of the official family believes that the Mexican factions will solve their own troubles and are of the opinion that interference by the United States is uncalled for at this time.

The president was plainly disturbed to learn that communication between Mexico and the United States was precarious, and that an apparently strict censorship had been instituted by Mexican authoritiese.

His fear has been that just such a condition might arise, and that Americans in Mexico City might find themselves facing a situation like that which existed in Pekin during the Boxer rebellion.

With the shadow of possible Mexican intervention hovering over congress, general legislative activity in both houses has come practically to a standstill.

No immediate need to take up the question of warlike moves against Mexico is anticipated, but both houses of congress are prepared to receive the issue should it be thrust upon them in the remaining days of the Taft administration or after the new congress comes into being March 4.

Mexico City.—The strongest censorship has been established in Mexico City. Hostilities were resumed with renewed fierceness in the Mexican capital after a truce which lasted only a few hours.

The armistice signed by the representatives of both sides agreeing to suspend operations for twenty-four hours, was broken before noon. Soon the sound of heavy cannonading and the whirr of machine guns announced the return of the Federal troops to their posts in front of the arsenal.

President Madero has reiterated his refusal to comply with the suggestion of the senators that he will resign. He declared that he was still able to dominate and that, if given time, he would crush the rebels.

Brief dispatches giving a general idea of the situation prior to the fresh outbreak of hostilities were received by the censors and allowed to pass along to their respective destinations, but the government apparently is determined that not a word of the fighting which has torn the city asunder for eight days shall be communicated to the outside world if that can be prevented.

TURKS WITHOUT SUPPLIES

Campaign Against Balkans Has Failed—Anxiety for Peace.

London, England.—Uncensored special dispatches reaching London from Constantinople all confirm the utter failure of Enver Bey, the Turkish chief of staff, to land troops on the coast of the Sea of Marmosa. His forces, the dispatch says, are now huddled at Gallipoli, where they are unable to secure supplies. The Daily Chronicle correspondent reports the landing of 40,000 Greeks at Bosika bay, on the coast of Asia Minor, near the entrance to the Dardanelles. The situation between Roumania and Bulgaria has again become serious. The negotiations at Sofia did not result in an agreement being reached on the points at issue.

Hakki Pasha, former grand vizier, has arrived in London. Secrecy is observed as to his mission, but there seems little reason to doubt that Turkey's military operations are utterly hopeless, and that when the expected decisive battle is fought for the possession of Kurudagh, in the Bulair district, a fresh attempt will be made to negotiate for peace.

Mawson Expedition Is Back.

London.—A dispatch from Sydney, N. S. W., says that a wireless message has been received there stating that Dr. Douglas Mawson and the members of his Antarctic exploration party are on board the relief ship Aurora. All the members of the party are well. The expedition had not been heard from for three months. The Australian expedition under Doctor Mawson set out the latter part of 1911. It consisted of fifty men, mainly graduates of the universities of Australia and New Zealand.

Bandit Captured After Lining Up 12.

Kansas City, Mo.—A dozen men lined up in the street at the point of his revolver proved more than a highwayman could control here, and when they began to break away at the ends of the line the bandit commenced shooting. After fatally wounding a boy and barely missing several men with his bullets, the bandit turned and ran, with his intended victims at his heels. He was overtaken two blocks away, but was rescued on the arrival of the police.

HITCHCOCK MAKES REPORT

FOR WIRE CONTROL HITCHCOCK PLEADS IN HIS COMPLETE ANNUAL REPORT.

Postmaster General Wants Government to Control the Telegraph Lines.

Washington.—Government ownership or control of telegraph lines is again recommended by Postmaster General Hitchcock in his complete annual report transmitted to congres. Mr. Hitchcock says:

"In the last annual report the opinion was expressed that telegraph lines in the United States should be made a part of the postal system and operated in conjunction with the mail service. It is believed that under proper management such a consolidation would result in important economies and permit adoption of lower telegraph rates. Now that a postal savings system has been established and a parcel post provided for, there would seem to be no better opportunity for the profitable extension of our postal business than through the adoption of a government telegraph system."

Three Die in Electric Chair.

Ossining, N. Y.—Three murderers were executed in the electric chair at Sing Sing prison. Two of the murdered were women. All three went to the chair with firm steps and each, as he passed from the cell house to the death chamber, called back a cheerful farewell to to those who remained awaiting their end. The first man to die was Joseph Garfalo, a huge Italian, who killed his wife because she threatened to divorce him. George Bishop, a negro, small and frail, was the second to take the chair. His crime was the murder of a white woman, Mrs. Margaret Bell, in Brooklyn. Donato Cardillo, the third, was convicted of killing Stephen H. Dickson, whose body was found in a brook near Sing Sing

Auto Records Broken.

Fresno, Cal.—Earl Cooper of Fresno broke the 75 and 200-mile automobile records for a one-mile circular dirt track here, making the former in 1:17:05 over that of 1:19:30 made by Strang at Columbus, Ohio, July 3, 1909. Time for the 200 miles was 3:28:05 4-5 against the American Automobile association second of :45. The race was sanctioned by the American Automobile association. Only one stop was made during the 200-mile run and no tire changes were made.

Double Misfortune for Preacher.

Lakeland, Fla.—The Rev. Royal J. Lellogg, of McHenry, N. D., met with a double misfortune while returning north from a trip through Florida, which proves that a Bible is not a safe pocketbook. At Sanford he was robbed of $190, while eating breakfast during a 20-minute stop. He at once placed his remaining cash, $65, between the leaves of his Bible, and when he arrived here it had been taken from him and he had only some smal change left. Luckily he is traveling with friends.

2,000 Women Are Swindled.

Philadelphia.—More than 2,000 women who had invested from 10 cents to $32 in credit stamps of a supply company were responsible for an exciting scene in the bankruptcy court in the Federal building here. Benches were overturned, cushions hurled around and some of the women surged to the judge's bench, demanding their money back. Notices of a hearing had been sent to the 2,500 creditors of the company, which was declared an involuntary bankrupt and hundreds of women thronged the court room.

POLICIES COME FIRST

WILSON TO HAVE LITTLE TIME FOR JOB SEEKERS.

Loyal Democrats Will Insist That the New Administration Be Given Chance to Make Record While in Power.

With every change of administration, especially when it involves a change of parties, it is assumed by many that the chief function of the president is to fill offices. On the whole, there has been comparatively little talk about the offices since the election. But we may be sure that it will increase, and that the new president will be subjected to considerable pressure. Some changes, of course, there must be. Some there are that ought to be made. But if we will but remember that such changes are for the good of the service we shall realize that the quality of the service and not the personnel of the force is the thing to be considered.

The people chose Woodrow Wilson as their president and voted the Democrats into power because they wished certain policies carried out. Few of the Democrats who supported their party in the recent campaign care anything whatever about the offices. What they wish is to see their party and its president make a record that shall commend itself to the people. That is all they ask. The country as a whole is deeply interested in the work that is to be done. And it will not show much patience with the few who demand that Mr. Wilson turn from serving the people to serving those who desire jobs. Rather they will resent any such interference as a piece of impertinence.

Mr. Wilson is going to have no easy time. He will need all the help and support he can get. If he does his duty—as we believe he will—he will have little time to devote to the distribution of patronage. The question is not one of keeping Republicans in office, but of strengthening the hands of the administration for the great work that it will be called on to do. Democrats who are really loyal to their party on the ground of principle will, we are sure, insist that it have a chance to prove that popular confidence in it is not misplaced. Four years hence it will be judged, not by the number of men it has found jobs for, but by its record in legislation and administration—by what it has done for the people. It will be well if all those charged with responsibility will constantly remember that the day of judgment is only four years away.

We do not mean to intimate that there is to be any wild rush for place, or that the situation is likely to be worse than ever before. But a word of warning may, nevertheless, be helpful.—Indianapolis News.

In an Age of Reconstruction.

We are in a temper to reconstruct economic society, as we were once in a temper to reconstruct political society, and political society may itself undergo a radical modification in the process. I doubt if any age was ever more conscious of its task or more unanimously desirous of radical and extended changes in its economic and political practice.—Woodrow Wilson in the World's Work.

An Expensive Victory.

Senator Hoar said ten years ago that the Philippines had cost the United States $600,000,000; and his figures were not disputed. The expense of these "possessions" since that date has been not less than $40,000,000 per year.

Admiral Dewey is probably the only sailor who ever won a victory that cost his country a billion dollars.

Example of Honest Manufacturer.

The example of the occasional manufacturer who says he does not want protection is of far-reaching effect. Such testimony in Massachusetts has gone far toward destroying the old New England superstition that graft and prosperity for American industries are inseparable.—Louisville Courier Journal.

Tail Wagging the Dog.

The assistant secretary of the treasury rules that a silk hat is not a silk hat if it has a woolen band around it, but is dutiable as a manufactured article of wool. This would seem to be a case of the tail wagging the dog, but the decision maintains the high grade of subtlety of tariff classification.

Outlook Is Promising.

The Democrats now are assured of a majority of two in the next senate, with a look-in for two more senators, which would increase the majority to six. That would be sufficient for a start, anyway, and we can carry the rest of the states in 1914 and 1916, making the senate solidly Democratic.—Houston (Texas) Post.

Time for the Peace Pipe.

It is likely that the Democratic differences in the senate are exaggerated in the telling. With so very narrow a margin to draw upon it would be an inexcusable blunder for either the oldsters or the youngsters in that body to go on the warpath against the other. The situation does not call for paint and feathers, but a comfortable squat in a circle, with the peace pipe lighted and passing around. Let the party take a lesson from the pest.—Washington Star.

HOW MRS. BROWN SUFFERED

During Change of Life—How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Her a Well Woman.

Iola, Kansas.—"During the Change of Life I was sick for two years. Before I took your medicine I could not bear the weight of my clothes and was bloated very badly. I doctored with three doctors but they did me no good. They said nature must have its way. My sister advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I purchased a bottle. Before it was gone the bloating left me and I was not so sore. I continued taking it until I had taken twelve bottles. Now I am stronger than I have been for years and can do all my work, even the washing. Your medicine is worth its weight in gold. I cannot praise it enough. If more women would take your medicine there would be more healthy women. You may use this letter for the good of others."—Mrs. D. H. BROWN, 809 N. Walnut St., Iola, Kan.

Change of Life is one of the most critical periods of a woman's existence. Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to so successfully carry women through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

QUITE EQUAL TO EMERGENCY

How Resourceful Young School Teacher Procured Eggs When the Outlook Seemed Dark Indeed.

And men relate a tale of a brave and resourceful little school teacher in one of our suburbs who supports her mother and three young sisters on her by no means munificent salary. Last week her mother called her up by telephone. "Listen," wailed the old lady, "a whole bunch of relatives is coming to supper tomorrow evening. I'll have to make a cake or something, and I haven't an egg in the house. And the grocer won't trust us any more, and there won't be any money until next week, and—"

"Never mind, mother—I'll fix it," answered the young teached, cheerily. Then she turned again to her class.

"Now children," she said, "tomorrow we will have the beautiful story of Columbus, and how he made the egg stand on end. Each of you will please bring an egg to school tomorrow. The class is dismissed."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Packing Food in Ferns.

In Germany the use of ferns is coming into more and more favor for packing food which is transported either short or long distances. The practice became common in England before it gained equal vogue in Germany, and the results are said to be excellent, especially in shipping fresh fruit, butter, flash and other food products which require unusual care.

AS TO FLAVOUR.
Found Her Favorite Again.

A bright young lady tells how she came to be acutely sensitive as to the taste of coffee:

"My health had been very poor for several years," she says. "I loved coffee and drank it for breakfast, but only learned by accident, as it were, that it was the cause of the constant, dreadful headaches from which I suffered every day, and of the nervousness that drove sleep from my pillow and so deranged my stomach that everything I ate gave me acute pain. (Tea is just as injurious, because it contains caffeine, the same drug found in coffee.)

"My condition finally got so serious that I was advised by my doctor to go to a hospital. There they gave me what I supposed was coffee, and I thought it was the best I ever drank, but I have since learned it was Postum. I gained rapidly and came home in four weeks.

"Somehow the coffee we used at home didn't taste right when I got back. I tried various kinds, but none tasted as good as that I drank in the hospital, and all brought back the dreadful headaches and the 'sick-all-over' feeling.

"One day I got a package of Postum, and the first taste of it I took, I said 'that's the good coffee we had in the hospital.' I have drank it ever since, and eat Grape-Nuts for my breakfast. I have no more headaches, and feel better than I have for years." Name given upon request. Read the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a reason."

Postum now comes in concentrated, powder form, called Instant Postum. It is prepared by stirring a level teaspoonful in a cup of hot water, adding sugar to taste, and enough cream to bring the color to golden brown.

Instant Postum is convenient; there's no waste; and the flavour is always uniform. Sold by grocers—all to 50-cent tin 30 cts., 30 to 100-cup tin 60 cts.

A 5-cup trial tin mailed for grocer's name and 2-cent stamp for postage. Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., Battle Creek, Mich.—Adv.

Clanton, Ala., March 4, 1913
ditor Clanton Press: Again I t ask for a little space in your r to say a few words about roads and the bond issue. r. Franklin, as well as Mr. droup, has some good sug- ions. But can he have all e people do their duty as he it? Don't you think the road ects are doing more for the s today than their ancestors I am inclined to believe that are. But on account of the y traffic and the demand for r roads we are likely to feel not much is being done for roads. We people are not fied with the things our fath- and grandfathers had. MAD DOGS AGAIN the risk of having it said that re continually trying io stir up or contention, we are going port that on last Monday two ional mad dogs were located anton. They seem to have from the Cooper neighbor- and were traveling in a erly direction.

ief Fallon, as soon as he heard report, assigned several men e duty of dispatching the ill ered canines.

would appear to the Press ever, that a much better way ld be for the Town Council to or enforce an ordinance if one is in existence, requiring all dogs to be securely muzzled.

It is rather early for mad dogs to appear, and if those which have been reported to be affected with rabbies are really so affected, it is high time something be done; later on when the weather becomes warmer and the dog days appear, their visits may become more frequent and their bites more numerous.

It does'nt hurt anyone to take precautions; sometimes it saves life, liberty and property; it assuredly is no sign of cowardice.

Last week two children were bitten by md dogs; this week none have been reported but what a day may bring fourtn is uncertain.

Of course there are going to be doubting Thomases, as to whether those dogs are affected with rabbies, and that our position may be clearly defined we print the following letter with reference to the dog which bit the children last week:—

Montgomery, Ala.
Dr. Arthur. Johnson,
Clanton, Ala.
Dear Doctor:—

The brain of the dog received from you today contains Negri bodies, proving tbe dog to have been rabid. If any one was bitten and desires treatment, we should have two days notice in order to prepare for them before they arrive here.

Yours very truly,
P. B. MOSS,
State Pathologist.

THE BARACAS ENTERTAIN

Next Friday evening at the Palmer Hotel the Baraca class of the Methodist Sunday school will entertain the Philathea class.

For some weeks past there has been a generous though unannounced rivalry between the two classes as to which should secure the larger membership; just at present the Baracas have the edge on the Philatheas, there being twenty seven enrolled with the Baracas, though of course, they are not all regular attendants.

After the feast of good things to be enjoyed at the hotel, the two clases will adjourn to the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. L. White, where games and other pastimes will be indulged in until the wee small hours call for departure.

Mrs. W. W. Fox is teacher of the Philathea class and F. M. Wood of the Baraca class.

The entertainment is in the hands of Messrs P. D. Wilson, Mack C. Broadhead and Scott Chesnutt, which, of itself, is a guarantee of its success and pleasure.

The Philatheas have promised to return the favor some day and the Baracas are longing for the days to pass speedily so that they may enjoy the good time which they feel assnred is in store for them.

ROCKY MOUNT ITEMS

Farmers are all getting busy again making preparations for another crop.

Those on the sick list, we are glad to say are improving.

Our school is moving along nicely, tho' a number have stopped to help start the new crop—a bad mistake of course, but hard to make the farmer see.

The school Improvement Association is doing some good work now; they will soon present to the pubiic a play, "The Village Skewl of Long Ago," given by the patrons of the school.

Will let you have program soon; watch for them and come.

RIGHT SMART BOOZE

TAKEN FROM L. & N. DEPOT BY SAERIFF'S OFFICERS.

Some time during last week there arrived in Clanton, by freight, sixteen cases of whiskey and one cask of beer. They all came in the regular way that booze travels, by rail, and were consigned to a party whose name appears not to be known in these parts; in other words the whiskey was ordered under an assumed name from one of the large distilleries of the country. When it arrived, it appears, the party for whom it was intended become suspicious of something and failed to call for his merchandise.

The railroad officials were "up against it" to a large extent and just what to do was a problem they had to solve.

Under the present law a railroad ceases forty-eight hours after the arrival of such merchandise to be a common carrier, and if it continues to hold the goods, becomes warehouseman. That was the problem for them to solve. How would you have worked the problem?

If they returned the goods or if they dumped it out then the owner or consignee might call for it, and the railroad, having no authority to dispose of the goods, would have been subject to a damage suit—provided the consignee thought it wise to enter suit.

If, on the contrary, it took care of the goods it then become, as above stated, warehousemen, and would be subject to the law which prohibits the storing of large quantities of liquors in a public place.

The railroad, we have no doubt, exercised all the means it had to deliver the goods within the prescribed time; failing to do so, however, there seemed to be no course open to it but to store the goods and await the arrival of the consignee, for aside from the delivery of the goods there was a considerable amount of freight due upon the shipment.

Anyway, the goods were stored and the officers gathered it all in—sixteen cases and one cask, and carried it to the county jail; besides that a warrant was sworn out against the railroad for storing liquors contrary to law.

Now, there are supposed to be twenty-four quarts of this whiskey in each case; sixteen cases would aggregate three hundred and eighty-four quarts. On a basis of fifteen liberal drinks to each quart this would furnish fifty-seven hundred and sixty thirsty throats with a liberal allowance of fire water; estimating further that five liberal drinks would put an ordinary man on the blink—and perhaps three liberal drinks of ordinary whiskey would turn the trick, or rather the man,—there was enough red-eye in that shipment to put eleven hundred and fifty-two men in the gutter!

Our calculations may be wrong; there may be a less number quarts in a case (we are not authorities on that subject) but basing the calculation on half that number, surely each quart would furnish fifteen liberal portions to any one, then the number "drinks" in that shipment would be five hundred and seventy-six not counting the ten quarts of beer, which of itself would produce something in the neighborhood of a dozen more drinks!

The railroad may have to suffer for having stored the whiskey, but there is some one who also should be made to suffer.

The only reason the consignee failed to take his goods out was because he feared personal injury, the thought of meeting the sweet and gold men of the county never entered his head; had he been able to [illegible] would now perhaps be dispensing his distilled damnation to the everlasting injury of those who made purchases of him.

However, this particular shipment will not be for sale; the Sheriff has it under lock and key and will doubtless at an early date be ordered by the court to destroy it. Then again, it might happen that the L. & N. will plead that this was an interstate shipment, and being such they are not liable as warehousemen in which case some pretty judicial points may be brought forth.

HEAVY DOCKET

JUDGE DEASON DISPOSES OF MANY CASES.

County Court convened last Monday morning, it being the first Monday in the month, and a heavy docket faced Judge Deason when he ascended to the seat of justice:

Marvin Aldridge, V. P. L., case taken under advisement by Judge Deason and decision not rendered up to the time we go to press.

Emile Aldridge, V. G. L.; case same as that above.

O. S. Smith, abandonment; defendant pleads guilty and is fined $5.00 and costs.

Caroline Jackson, larceny; pleads guilty and is fined $5.00 and costs.

Sewell Driver, V. G. L.; waived to Grand Jury, bond fixed at $200.

B. A. Walker, V. G. L.; continued to April term, (two cases.)

J. A. Traywick, assault; defendant pleads guilty, fined $5 and costs.

R. F. Bates, A and B.; defendant pleads guilty, fined $15 and costs.

Wimp Coleman, S. L.; defendant pleads guilty, fined $75 and costs.

Jack Gentry, assault; discharged on insuffiency of evidence.

R. L. Carter, V. G. L.; waived to Grand Jury; bond fixed at $200. (Two cases).

Chas. Wilson, riding trains; pleads guilty, fined $10 and costs.

R. A. Day, defaulting witness; nol prossed.

F. L. Day, defaulting witness; nol prossed.

Lawson Collins, defaulting witness; defendant charged with costs in case number 417 and the costs of attachment.

The case of Jenk Gentry, charged with assault to murder was set for preliminary hearing on March 10th, next Monday.

Chas. Wilson, the white man charged with riding trains, was taken from one of the through freight trains last Saturday morning. Upon examination of his person by the Sheriff there was found in his pockets a complete set of fine steel files; Wilson claimed to be a printer and stated that these files were used in the printers trade; they are beauties to behold, but no one in these parts who follows the printing trade has ever seen such files used in a printing office. They resemble more a part of the outfit of a skilled burglar or second story man.

A band of South American gypsies passed through Clanton Monday, having made the trip from Oklahoma through the country in the past three months.

Fox & Co. Real Estate & Rental Agency has sold for Mr. Pierce to Mr. Morrow of Columbiana, the bottling works formerly conducted by Mr. Pierce. Mr. Pierce will remains in Clanton, however. Mr. Morrow will not remove his family here till after the school term closes.

BOY PAID FOR HIS WHISTLE

Obeyed Father's Instructions All Right, but Made No Sort of a Hit With the Teacher.

It all happened in a wayside village. She was the village schoolmistress, prim and proper, but a bad hand at settling accounts with the local tradesmen; he was ten years of age, one of her pupils, and son and heir of the village grocer.

"Tommy," she yelled in class one morning, "don't you know it's rude to whistle in the presence of a lady?"

Tommy was not abashed nor chastened.

"But dad told me to whistle," he replied.

"Your father told you to whistle, Tommy?" queried the school teacher, in considerable doubt.

"Yes'm. He said when he sells you anything we've got to whistle for our money."

Tommy then took up a conspicuous position in the adjacent corner.

You Can't Tell.

Interested Lady—Oh, dear, look! That's Mr. Rhymer, the celebrated poet. See how his finger touches his lip, and how his lofty brow is knit in thought. Oh, I wonder what sweet morsel of verse he is mediating?

Mr. Rhymer (to himself)—I have to order sugar from the grocer's, beef at the butcher's, pay for last week's bread and bring some soothing syrup for the baby. I wish to goodness Mary would attend to all these things herself!

What's the Use?

"It did Jack no good to marry his stenographer, for she continued the habit of the office in their home."

"How so?"

"When he starts to dictate she takes him down."

CONDITIONS IN THE FACTORY DISTRICTS

OATES DECLARES CHANGES IN CHILD LABOR LAWS NECESSARY.

LETTER TO GOVERNOR O'NEAL

Designates Those Who Work in Cotton Mills As "A Race Within a Race."

Montgomery.—Designating those who work in cotton mills as "a race within a race," declaring that Alabama must do something to remedy conditions in factory districts and contending that changes in the child labor laws are necessary for the protection of children William H. Oates, state prison inspector, has prepared a letter which will be given to Governor O'Neal with the annual report of the department soon.

"They are absolutely illiterate, cannot read or write and eke out a miserable existence by ignorantly farming a few acres of land," says Dr. Oates of the recruits who are continually brought to cotton mill villages, and given employment in factories.

"In a vast majority of cases they have hookworms, are dull listless and apathetic, have little to say, and in fact, are a race within a race. Education finds no place in the heart of the average cotton mill operative.

"Almost universal indifference is evidenced on the part of the parents of the children as to sending the children to school," says the letter. "Every subterfuge they can devise has been tried to dodge the educational requirement of this law. Likewise the children are apathetic, indifferent and negligent and on every occasion try to evade the school."

Dr. Oates declares that health of operatives is what any person can picture. "It varies in different mills," says the letter, "in certain localities the hookworm is pictured on the faces of nearly all the children. Red is conspicuous by its absence. The trained eye of the inspector is often times unable to tell whether the age of a weakened dried up, anemic specimen of genus homo is 12 or 18.

Inspector Oates declares that the work "knowingly," practically nullifies that section of the child labor law which provides that persons who knowingly make false affidavits about the ages of children are guilty of perjury. The law should be changed so as to yearly change the age limit of children working within doors at any location and various outdoor vocations, acording to the inspector. "It should be further modified so as to make it illegal for any operator of any business enterprise to employ any child between the ages of 14 and 16 who cannot produce satisfactory evidence of having attended school for at least 12 weeks during the preceding calendar year," says Dr. Oates.

Thanks of Dr. Oates are extended to Governor O'Neal "for the co-operation, aid, good advice and unfailing support you have invariably extended to head of this department."

THREE RECEIVE CLEMENCY.

Paroles Conditional on Future Good Conduct—Nine Turned Down.

Montgomery.—Three out of one dozen applications for clemency that were made to Governor O'Neal were granted. Irby Collins of Clay county, sent up for assault to murder; Walter Hill of Clark county, sent up for burglary, and Robert Lewis of Bibb county, sent up for violation of the prohibition law, were paroled, conditioned on their future good conduct.

In the case of Collins the brother of the defendant went into court after his conviction and pleaded guilty. An application for clemency was made to the governor and the executive, upon the brother's testimony, immediately paroled Collins and restored his civil rights.

Hill was paroled on the recommendation of the trial judge, solicitor and the state pardon board. The evidence in the case showed that Hill was convicted on the testimony of an accomplice.

Lewis was paroled upon the recommendation of J. Friz Thompson, solicitor, who wrote the governor that he "had serious doubts at to the guilt of the defendant."

Nine applications for clemency were refused by Governor O'Neal.

Bridge Company Fined $500.

The Joliet Bridge Company, of Joliet, Ill., was fined $500 by the State Board of Compromise for failure to qualify in Alabama as required by the code.

TO PREVENT AN ESCAPE.

Five Men Under Death Sentence Are Being Carefully Guarded.

Birmingham.—With five men under death sentence, three of them white, with dates set for the execution, and besides a number of men charged with capital offenses, extra precautions are being taken at the county jail that there be no escapes. Extra guards have been hired to watch the three white men whose execution dates have been fixed.

TEXT BOKK COMMISSION.

Present Appointees Will Hold Office For Five Years.

Montgomery.—Governor O'Neal announced the personnel of the state text book commission, who will hold office for five years from March 1. The commission will have the selection of the books to be used in the public schools of the state during the period they are in office. The contracts to be awarded will amount to approximately $200,000 annually.

The following is the list of appointees on the commission:

First district, J. W. Watson, president of the First District Agricultural school at Jackson, Clarke county; Second district, E. M. Shackelford, president of the Troy State Normal school at Troy; Third district, Prof. E. C Pugh, superintendent of city schools of Union Springs; Fourth district, Dr. T. W. Palmer, president Alabama Girls' Technical institute at Montevallo; Firth district, J. M. Pearson, principal public schools at Alexander City; Sixth district, J. J. Doster, professor Secondary Education University of Alabama, Tuscaloosa; Seventh district, H. T. Wallace, principal DeKalb County High school, Fort Payne; Eighth district. W. R. Harrison, professor mathematics, Florence State Normal school, Florence; Ninth district, A. M. Spessard, superintendent public schools, Uniontown.

The committee met in the office of Governor O'Neal and adopted rules and regulations. The resolutions adopted by the commission are considered of a most important nature, in that they set forth some strict regulations for the guidance of publishers and book concerns offering text books for sale in the state. In brief each company offering books for sale will be required to file with the secretary of the commission the names of its representatives, including attorneys, and these names will be submitted to each member of the commission.

The commission will meet in June for the selection of the books. Governor O'Neal will preside over the sessions of the commission, and Superintendent of Education Henry J. Willingham will act as secretary.

JUDGE SINGLETON RESIGNS.

J. D. Norman of Union Springs Appointed Probate Judge.

Montgomery.—Governor O'Neal has appointed J. D. Norman of Union Springs probate judge of Bullock county, to succeed Judge A. E. Singleton, resigned. Impeachment proceedings against Judge Singleton had meen recommended by the Bullock county grand jury on the grounds that certain shortages had accrued in the office of the probate judge.

Judge Singleton's resignation will have the effect of staying all further efforts looking toward his impeachment.

31 ASK FOR HIGHWAY MONEY.

Engineer Expects Number For Year To Reach About Sixty.

Montgomery.—Thirty-one counties have made application for the 1913 State-aid road appropriations, acoording to W. S. Keller. State Highway engineer. This is far more than the number that had applied up to the same time last year. Interest in the State-aid fund is growing among the counties and before the year is out it is expected that nearly sixty counties will have made application for the State aid money.

EDUCATION PROGRAMME.

Annual Session of Alabama Educators in Montgomery March 20-22.

Montgomery.—The programme for the thirty-second annual session of the Alabama Educational association, which will be held in Montgomery, March 20-22, is probably the most complete that has ever been prepared for a state educational meeting. The full programme has just been received from the printer and is being sent out to the teachers over the state by the educational department.

State Will Appeal Railroad Case.

Montgomery.—It was announced that an application for a rehearing of the case of the state vs. the Birmingham Southern railroad, will be made to the supreme court by the state. When the supreem court upheld the decision of the Birmingham city court in the case it declared the section of the state revenue law making assessments for taxes at 60 per cent of the property valuation to be legal. The state contended that the section was invalid and that it could make assessments on 100 per cent of valuation.

EVENTS OF THE WEEK HAVE BEEN FAVORABLE

Market for Securities More or Less Unsettled.—Railroads Buy Heavily.

New York.—Bradstreet's review of trade says:

Events of the week have been mainly favorable. Prominent among these have been a widespread visitation of moisture, especially beneficial in the grain growing areas hitherto reporting deficient moisture, a further expansion in spring jobbing trade and the appearance of a more cheerful feeling in the market for securities both at home and abroad, more settled conditions in international political affairs. The latter manifestation has revealed that the situation, temporarily at least, has been oversold and that some of the earlier depression has been unreasonably accentuated. Industry has been fully as active as heretofore noted.

In the lower Mississippi valley the small probability of floods has helped sentiment, sugar planters are reported to have generally made arrangements to finance the new crop and the area in cotton will be larger. Even in the southeast, the feeling is more confident.

Among the industries, the lull in demand for iron and steel noted some weeks ago has not been unwelcome. Mill operations are active and there is a fair quantity of new business offering.

Business failures for the week ending February 27 were 272, which compares with 269 in the like week of 1912. There were 30 failures in Canada.

Wheat, including flour, exports from the United States and Canada for the week ending February 27, aggregated 4,800,183 bushels, against 3,268,770 bushels last year.

New York.—Dun's Review of trade says:

Reports from leading trade centers continue satisfactory in most instances. There is a large distribution of the principal products and sustained activity in retail trade, particularly in sections favored with good weather. Outside of these markets, which, by reason of their larger and more sensitive speculative organization, have been affected by the important events happening in various parts of the globe, business sentiment maintains a steady, conservative attitude, even on the eve of the first change in the political control of our government in 16 years.

The railroads, which are about to arbitrate their differences with the firemen, and are still buying heavily of needed supplies, gained 3.2 per cent in gross earnings in the first three weeks of February. The exceptional activity in iron and steel is maintained. The copper market, however, is depressed.

The market for securities has again been more or less unsettled. The interest and dividend payment during March 1 are estimated at $14,000,000 more than last year, the increase being mainly in industrials. Time money continues to be firmly held, but European gold demands are lessening. Foreign commerce continues to establish a large balance in this nation's favor.

CLAIM MONEY TRUST EXISTS.

House Committee Names Leading "Active Agents."

Washington.—Three divergent reports were presented to the House by the members of the committee which conducted the money trust investigation.

The majority report, signed by Chairman Pujo and the six other democratic members of the committee, found that a money trust exists, according to their understanding of the term.

The report names as the most active agents in bringing about the concentration of money and credit, J. P. Morgan & Co., First National and National City banks and Kuhn Loeb & Co., of New York, Lee Higginson and Kidder, Peabody & Co., of Boston.

The minority report, sets forth that the investigation "has not disclosed the existence of any so-called money trust," but added, "it has, however, disclosed a dangerous concentration of credit in New York city and to some extent in Boston and Chicago."

OVERRIDES TAFT'S VETO.

Senate Repasses Webb Liquor Bill by Good Majority.

Washington.—The Webb liquor bill, prohibiting the shipment of liquor into "dry" states was repassed in the Senate over President Taft's veto within two hours from the time the President's message of disapproval had been laid before that body.

A short debate, in which the advocates of the bill voted down a motion to postpone action and in which they reaffirmed their belief that the measure is constitutional, ended with the repassage of the bill by the large majority of 63 to 21.

LONG QUARREL SETTLED.

Parents Fight Over Possession of Child's Grave.

New York.—A quarrel of long standing between Count Giulo di Festetics, an Austrian nobleman, and his American wife over the possession of their son, Dwight, was settled, when at the request of the Countess the court dismissed an indictment charging the Count with kidnapping the boy in 1907. The child died [illegible] ago and the controversy continued as a contest [illegible]

"That fellow who just went out of here after having his photograph taken is a marvel," remarked a photographer to a bystanding friend. "I've a great mind to give him that set of a dozen cabinet size free."

"What's his special point?" asked the friend.

"Why, there've been in this studio, since I started some years ago, about 187,000 and some sitters," went on the photographer. "And out of that number that fellow just now is the only one who hasn't said to me with a grin as I posed him: 'Look out, or I'll break your camera!' I've begun to look upon it as an essential part of taking a photograph and if I didn't hear it at the right time I do believe I'd unconsciously wait for it before I snapped the shutter. But that fellow didn't say a word; just stood up there and get snapped like it was a—"

"Say, partner," interrupted a voice from the door, which just then opened and admitted the head of the lately departed customer. "Say, I hope I didn't break that there camera of yours."

No Place to Indulge in Small Talk.

The small son of a devout Kansas City father was visiting his grandparents. The sun had just come out after a long rainy season and the head of the family, in saying grace at the breakfast table, gave thanks for the bright morning and the beautiful sunshine.

"Why, grandpa!" interrupted the youngster, accustomed to a stereotyped form of worship and shocked at what he considered his grandfather's irreverence: "You must pray—don't talk to God about the weather."

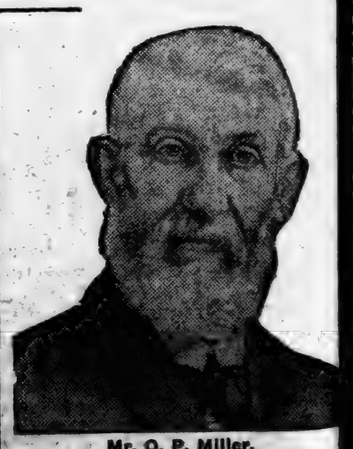
Pettit's Eye Salve TONIC FOR EYES



Bowels Get Weak As Age Advances

The First Necessity is to Keep the Bowels Gently Open With a Mild Laxative Tonic

Healthy old age is so absolutely dependent upon the condition of the bowels that great care should be taken to see that they act regularly. The fact is that as age advances the stomach muscles become weak and inactive and the liver does not store up the juices that are necessary to prompt digestion.

Some help can be obtained by eating easily digested foods and by plenty of exercise, but this latter is irksome to most elderly people. One thing is certain, that a state of constipation should always be avoided as it is dangerous to life and health. The best plan is to take a mild laxative as often as is deemed necessary. But with equal certainty it is suggested that cathartics, purgatives, physics, salts and pills be avoided, as they do but temporary good and are so harsh as to be a shock to a delicate system.

A much better plan, and one that thousands of elderly people are following, is to take a gentle laxative-tonic like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which acts as nearly like nature as is possible. In fact, the tendency of this remedy is to strengthen the stomach and bowel muscles and so train them to act naturally again, when medicines of all kinds can usually be dispensed with. This is the opinion of many people of different ages, among them Mr. O. P. Miller, Baroda, Mich., who writes: "I am 80 years old and have been constipated for many years. Since receiving your sample bottle I have procured two 50c bottles and find that it is the best remedy I ever used and does just what you claim for it to the very letter. I can not recommend it too highly."

A bottle can be bought of any druggist at fifty cents or one dollar. People usually buy the fifty cent size first and then, having convinced themselves of its merits they buy the dollar size which is more economical. Results are always guaranteed or money will be refunded. Any elderly person can follow these suggestions with safety and the assurance of good results.

If no member of your family has ever used Syrup Pepsin and you would like to make a personal trial of it before buying it in the regular way of a druggist, send your address—a postal will do—to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 24 Washington St., Monticello, Ill., and a free sample bottle will be mailed you.

Spring Clipping of Horses.

The modern practice among the best posted and most progressive horse owners and farmers is to clip all horses in the spring. It is done on the theory that in their natural state horses were not obliged to work, so could shed the winter coat in comfort over a period of several weeks. Since we oblige them to do hard work on warm spring days, the winter coat should be removed for the same reason that we lay off our heavy winter garments. Clipped horses dry off rapidly, hence they do not take cold as easily nor are they as prone to be affected with other ailments as unclipped animals whose longer hair holds the perspiration for hours. Because clipped horses dry off rapidly they rest better, get more good from their food and come out in the morning refreshed and fit for work.

Since the advent of the ball bearing enclosed gear clipping machine, the work of taking off the winter coat is easy. With the machine a horse can be clipped all over in half an hour, whereas with the old two-hand clipper it required several hours to do it.

Dairymen also now clip the cows all over two or three times a year. The flanks and udders are clipped every three or four weeks, so it is easy to clean the parts before milking. This means less opportunity for dirt and other impurities to get into the milk.

She Married Him.

In a well-known colored school in the south the lesson in general history one day was on the life of Queen Elizabeth.

"Thomas, did Queen Elizabeth ever marry?" asked the teacher.

"Yes, ma'am, I thing she did," replied Thomas.

"Are you quite sure?"

"Yes, ma'am, the book says she did."

"It does? Will you please find it?"

Whereupon Thomas opened to the lesson and to the great amusement of the teacher read the statement that "Queen Elizabeth was married to her realm."

"There," said he, triumphantly, "doesn't it say she was married? I don't exactly know who the gentleman was, but it certainly says she married him."

Solvent.

A certain man found himself in the possession of $11,000,000. But he did not lose his head. On the contrary.

"I will pay only so much for a car," he firmly declared, "as will leave of the $11,000,000 a sum sufficient, if prudently invested in the funds, to defray the cost of having the thing around."

And though in that resolution he paid so little for a car that his wife would scarcely speak to him, his sense of financial solvency was his ample reward.—Puck.

Its Negative Virtues.

"I wish you'd get rid of that absolutely worthless poodle."

"Absolutely worthless?"

"That's what I said! Absolutely—absolutely worthless! What does it do that makes it good for anything?"

"I was thinking of what it doesn't do."

"Oh-h, what it doesn't do!"

"Yes. It doesn't chew tobacco, smoke a pipe, fight booze or use profane language."

Disagreeable.

"He is the most disagreeable man I know!"

"Yes, he told me he had to ask you three times for five dollars you had borrowed."

CLEAR HEADED
Head Bookkeeper Must Be Reliable.

The chief bookkeeper in a large business house in one of our great Western cities speaks of the harm coffee did for him. (Tea is just as injurious because it contains caffeine, the same drug found in coffee.)

"My wife and I drank our first cup of Postum a little over two years ago and we have used it ever since, to the entire exclusion of tea and coffee. It happened in this way:

"About three and a half years ago I had an attack of pneumonia, which left a memento in the shape of dyspepsia, or rather, to speak more correctly, neuralgia of the stomach. My 'cup of cheer' had always been coffee or tea, but I became convinced, after a time, that they aggravated my stomach trouble. I happened to mention the matter to my grocer one day and he suggested that I give Postum a trial.

"Next day it came, but the cook made the mistake of not boiling it sufficiently, and we did not like it much. This was, however, soon remedied, and now we like it so much that we will never change back. Postum, being a food beverage instead of a drug, has been the means of banishing my stomach trouble, I verily believe, for I am a well man today and have used no medicine.

"My work as chief bookkeeper in our Co.'s branch house here is of a very confining nature. During my coffee-drinking days I was subject to nervousness and 'the blues'. These have left me since I began using Postam, and I can conscientiously recommend it to those whose work confines them to long hours of severe mental exertion." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

"There's a reason," and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest. Adv.

WOODROW WILSON'S CABINET MEMBERS

NEW OFFICIAL FAMILY NAMED. PREVIOUS SELECTIONS CONFIRMED.

BRYAN SECRETARY OF STATE

Authoritative Information As To Its Personnel Comes From Members of Official Family.

Washington.—Authoritative information as to personnel of Wilson's cabinet came from members of his official family when he arrived here. Following is stated as constituting what is believed to be the final selection of the President-elect:

Secretary of State—William Jennings Bryan of Nebraska.

Secretary of Treasury—William G. McAdoo of New York.

Secretary of War—Lindley M. Garrison of New Jersey.

Attorney General—James McReynolds of Tennessee.

Postmaster General—Albert S. Burleson of Texas.

Secretary of Navy—Josephus Daniels of North Carolina.

Secretary of Interior—Franklin K. Lane of California.

Secretary of Agriculture—David F. Houston of Missouri.

Secretary of Commerce—William C. Redfield of New York.

Secretary of Labor—William B. Wilson.

Many of these names have been known for several days and chief interest centered in the revelation of those who would receive the portfolios of war, agriculture and interior.

The selection of Vice Chancellor Garrison of New Jersey to be Secretary of War is in line with the idea the President-elect always has had that the head of the war department should be a man of unusual administrative ability. Supervision of the island possessions of the United States, including the Philippines and the Panama canal zone will be important factors under the new administration and their jurisdiction will fall on the head of the war department. Chancellor Garrison is a close friend of Mr. Wilson and is regarded as one of the best men New Jersey has ever elevated to the bench.

The choosing of David Franklin Houston, chancellor of Washington University, St. Louis, Mo., for the portfolio of agriculture, also contains little surprise as Mr. Wilson's intimate knowledge of agricultural questions has led him to seek a man familiar with the processes of advancing scientific farming and allied questions in this country. Mr. Houston was president of the Texas Agricultural and Mechanical college for a number of years.

For the portfolio of Secretary of the Interior, it is said Mr. Wilson has been influenced to select a westerner of legal training.

Franklin K Lane's experience as interstate commerce commissioner, it is assumed, has fitted him for executive and judicial tasks involved in administering the public land policy of the country.

THAW STILL OF UNSOUND MIND.

Affidavit of Acting Superintendent of Hospital To Be Used in Trial.

Albany, N. Y.—Harry K. Thaw, slayer of Stanford White, is still of unsound mind, and his release from the Matteawan State Hospital would be dangerous to the public peace and safety, according to an affidavit made by Attorney General Carmody by Dr. Roy L. Leak, acting superintendent of the hospital.

The affidavit will be used as the state's return to the writ of habeas corpus directing the state to produce Thaw before Justice Giegerich in New York and show cause why Thaw should not be given his freedom.

SO-CALLED COAL TAR TRUST.

Civil Suit Filed By Government in United States District Court in New York.

New York.—Dissolution of the so-called "coal tar trust" is asked by the government in a civil suit filed in the United States District court here under the Sherman anti-trust law. The defendants named are the $15,000 Barret Manufacturing company of West Virginia, its fourteen subsidiaries, the American Coal Products company, holding concern for the corporation, and a number of their officers and directors.

Garment Workers Parade.

New York.—Ten thousand garment workers dissatisfied with the settlement made with their employers by the leaders of their recent strike, paraded through the streets as a protest against the settlement. A mass meeting in Union Square followed at which term of settlement were denounced and a resolution adopted declaring the determination of the workers present to remain on strike until their union is recognized and all other demands granted.

NEARLY DEAD MOTHER SAVES

Timely Advice of Mother Relieves Terrible Suffering of Daughter, and Possibly Prevents an Untimely End.

Ready, Ky.—In the following advices from this place, Mrs. Laura Bratcher says: "I was not able to do anything for nearly six months, and was down in bed for three months.

I cannot tell you how I suffered with my head, and with nervousness and womanly troubles.

Our family doctor told my husband he could not do me any good, and he had to give it up. We tried another doctor, but he did not help me.

At last, my mother advised me to take Cardui, the woman's tonic. I thought it was no use, for I was nearly dead and nothing seemed to do me any good, but I used eleven bottles, and was then able to do all of my work and my own washing.

I think Cardui is the best medicine in the world. My weight has increased, and I look the picture of health.

I will always praise Cardui for what it has done for me."

Remember that Cardui is a mild, safe remedy, composed of valuable medicinal ingredients, which help to build up vitality, tone up the nerves, and strengthen the entire womanly constitution.

In the past half century Cardui has relieved more than a million women. Why shouldn't it do the same for you? Try it. It may be just what you need.

HAIR CAME OUT BY HANDFUL

58 Lewis St., Nashville, Tenn.—"About three years ago I had the malaria fever, and when I recovered my hair was falling out so that the doctor told me to cut it off. My hair came out by the handful, and I had dandruff so that I had to scratch it out every week, and my scalp itched so that I pulled my hair all down trying to scratch it. I tried —— and—— and —— but they failed to do any good. At last I tried Cuticura Soap and Ointment.

"First I combed my hair out, made a parting on the side and rubbed my scalp with the Cuticura Ointment. The next morning I washed with the Cuticura Soap and water, and continued until the third application gave a complete cure." (Signed) Miss Nellie M. Currin, Dec. 6, 1911.

Bright Work.

"I have here a handy article that sells for 10 cents," began the caller.

"Don't want it," snapped the woman.

"I didn't think you would buy it," said the caller as he turned to go. "The lady across the street told me your husband never gave you any money."

"She did, eh?" exploded the woman, "Give me five of those things you are selling. My husband gives me more money in a day than that old cat gets in a month."—Exchange.

Straighten That Lame Back!

Backache is one of Nature's warnings of kidney weakness. Kidney disease kills thousands every year. Safety is only certain if the early warnings are heeded while help is possible. Doan's Kidney Pills have helped many thousands to get rid of backache, strengthen weak kidneys and regulate bladder and urinary disorders.

Don't neglect a bad back. If your back is lame in the morning, if it hurts to stoop or lift, if the dull aching keeps up all day, making work a burden and rest impossible—suspect the kidneys. If the urine is off color and shows a sediment; if passages are irregular, too frequent, too scanty, or scalding, this is further proof. There may be dizzy spells, headaches, nervousness, dropsy swellings, rheumatic attacks, and a general tired-out, run-down condition.

Use Doan's Kidney Pills, the remedy that is publicly recommended by 100,000 persons in many different lands. Doan's act quickly, contain no harmful nor habit-forming drugs and are wholly harmless, though remarkably effective.

From Serious Dropsy To Perfect Health

D. J. Donovan, Larchmont, N. Y., says: "At one time my right leg was so badly swollen with dropsy that it was twenty-four inches around. Last winter there were three doctors in attendance almost constantly. My back felt as if it were being prodded constantly by a hot iron. My skin was cold and clammy and I had run down from 210 pounds to about 150. I was all discouraged and on the point of giving up hope. Doan's Kidney Pills were brought to my notice, and I began using them. I improved rapidly and was soon up, but so thin that I could not wear my clothes at first. I kept on taking Doan's Kidney Pills and when I had used eight boxes, had regained 40 pounds."

When your back hurts, when your kidneys trouble you, when you feel tired, worn-out or depressed, don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—ask distinctly for Doan's Kidney Pills, the same that cured Mr. Donovan, and make sure the name DOAN'S is on the box.

"Well, speak up. Have you come to ask for the hand of my daughter or a raise in salary?"

MILLION MORE BONDS WANTED FOR HIGHWAYS

At the regular weekly meeting of the Pearl Boulevard Association last night put itself on record in favor of a Duval county bond issue for $1,000,000 to raise funds to provide for the completion of the paving of roads, begun under the last county administration, and the construction of new roads.

The meeting was well attended and the committees reported considerable progress along various lines.

The resolution in favor of the million dollar bond issue was adopted, after a full discussion, by a unanimous vote of all present. It was as follows:—

Resolved, That the Pearl Boulevard Association puts itself on record as favoring an additional issue of bonds of Duval county, to the extent of $1,000,000, for the purpose of completing the system of public roads laid out by the former board of county commissioners, and of building such additional roads as may be found necessary.

MEETING OF LIVE STOCK ASSOCIATION

The annual meeting of the Alabama Live-Stock Association met last week in Montgomery, to which everyone that could should have gone. What stock to raise, how to feed and care for them, how to milk, how to churn and care for butter, how to avoid hog cholera and how to rid our dumb animals of ticks, and many other things incident to such a meeting were treated. To this end I write to put our Chilton county citizens on notice that in connection with my zeal for good roads, I have "got the unction" on tick eradication, and at the next regular communication of our county commissioners I and others who attended the meeting at Montgomery will try to get our court to have a number of dipping vats built at convenient places in our county as an experiment. But, just here I will say that tick eradication is no new thing to me and no more profitable undertaking could be enlisted, as for every dollar invested in vat and bath, the dipper easily gets three dollars in beef. Thus I repeat that if it is profit you need and want, let us get together and if the commissioners will not help us then let us build the vats by private means or let some man fix for us then let us patronize his vat.

The average cost of dipping I am told will not exceed eight cents per head per month. The dipping period should run from March 1st. to September 1st semi monthly.

Say it costs fifty cents a year and your cow or steer has gained in flesh, by reason of having been dipped, fifty pounds at three cents would equal $1.50
Cost of dipping .50
Net gain 1.00

Two thirds of the cattle die as the result of poison ticks; then your dead cow loss is added to the one dollar per head, saved by dipping.

Let me hear from you in regard to above, including our commissioners. I can hear some already renounce it; I do not expect all to agree wtth anything—not even to bond issue—in fact if I thought there ever would or could be had good roads in Chilton county by other method than bond issue, I would not favor bonds but since I know that we will never do anything for our roads under the old system, I favor bonds finally. I favor the expenditure of the U. S. appropriation in each county on the most prominent road in the county, which, if I remember rightly, came under the head of questioh (E) in your issue of last week.

Yours truly,
F. A. Gulledge.

MASS MEETING

To Consider Plans and Discuss the Establishment of a High School by the Chilton County and Unity Baptist Associations, Held with Samaria Baptist Church, March 2nd, 1913.

10 a.m. Meeting called to order by Rev. W. M. Olive. Devotional Exercises by Bro. J. J. Stanley.

10:30 The meeting was permanently organized by electing Judge E. B. Deason chairman and Prof. Howard Roper secretary.

Upon a roll call of churches it was ascertained that a goodly number of the churches of the two associations had sent delegates to this meeting, and during the roll call each delegate arose and expressed a feeling of unity and cooperation, with many good wishes for the ultimate success of the movement.

12 m. Adjournment for dinner.

1:00 p.m. Devotional Exercises by Bro. A. E. Davis.

1:10. At this time began a general discussion of plans and of difficulties to be overcome, as well as the painting of word pictures of the great good that could be accomplished by a school of this kind. Prof. J. J. Pickens, Rev. W. M. Olive, Prof. A. E. Davis, et als made speeches full of enthusiasm and inspiration, every one expressing the same opinion—that the school SHOULD be established and that their churches should heartily endorse the movement and furnish the financial aid necessary for its establishment.

The following resolutions were introduced and unanimously adopted:

1. Resolved, That it is the sense of this meeting that the committees appointed by the associations should meet at once, choose a suitable location and publish to the world that the school will begin not later than Oct. 1st., 1913.

2. That we thank the committees for their services and to commend them for what they have attained.

3 That the secretary be instructed to send a copy of these minutes to the county press and especially the Alabama Baptist for publication.

4 That we extend our hearty thanks to the people of Samaria church and community for their hospitality during the day.

The committee announced that it would meet on Thursday, the 13th day of march, at 7:30 p.m. at the court house in Clanton to hear final discussion as to locating the school and to decide finally where it shall be located.

Upon motion, the meeting adjourned sine die.

E. B. Deason, Chairman.
Howard Roper, Secretary.

Mrs. E. B. Deason and son W. Elijah, spent last Sunday with the parents of the former at Verbena.

To Our Friends and Neighbors

You know us. You know we would not—that we could not afford to—go back on our word. Nor can you afford to ignore this money-back-if-not-satisfied offer on this splendid laxative.

We honestly believe we have the best bowel remedy ever made—the most pleasant-to-take, most permanently beneficial laxative for relief from the miseries and dangers arising from constipation.

We wouldn't say this if we didn't believe it to be true. We wouldn't risk our reputation by making such statements did we not feel sure you would find them true.

Our faith is built both on the knowledge of what Rexall Orderlies are made of and on observation of very many severe cases in which they have proven their merit.

Try them at Our Risk

If they do not abundantly prove their merit with you also—if you are not entirely satisfied with them—we will refund your money—and we will do that on your mere say-so. We don't ask you to risk a penny. Isn't that fair?

Just let the bowels fail in properly doing their work—just let their action be delayed and incomplete and the entire system and every other organ suffers. Wastes that should have been dispelled remain to poison the system.

Headaches, biliousness, nervousness and other tormenting and serious ills are common when the bowels fail to act daily as nature intended. All this may be avoided, if you will accept our advice.

Rexall Orderlies

taste just like candy. They are soothing and easy in action. They do not cause griping, nausea, purging or excessive looseness. They tend to tone and strengthen intestinal nerves and muscles. They promptly relieve constipation, and help to permanently overcome it.

Rexall Orderlies promote better spirits and better health. In all of these things they are vastly superior to old-fashioned, harsh salts and other purgatives, which are not only unpleasant to take but which usually leave the bowels in worse condition than before. We particularly recommend Rexall Orderlies for children, aged and delicate persons.

Rexall Orderlies come in vest-pocket tin boxes. 12 tablets, 10c; 36 tablets, 25c; 80 tablets, 50c.

CAUTION: Please bear in mind that Rexall Orderlies are not sold by all druggists. You can buy Rexall Orderlies only at The Rexall Stores. You can buy Rexall Orderlies in this community only at our store:

Your Soil Is Alive

TO all intents and purposes, soil is alive. It breathes, works, rests; it drinks, and, most important of all, it feeds. It responds to good or bad treatment. It pays its debts with interest many times compounded. Being alive, to work it must be fed. During the non-growing seasons certain chemical changes take place which make the fertility in the soil available for next season's crop. But this process adds no plant food to the soil. Unless plant food is added to soil on which crops are grown, in time it starves. There is one best way to feed your soil. Stable manure, which contains all the essentials of plant life, should be spread evenly and in the proper quantity with an

I H C Manure Spreader

I H C manure spreaders are made in all styles and sizes. There are low machines which are not too low, but can be used in mud and deep snow, or in sloppy barnyards. They are made with either endless or reverse aprons. Frames are made of steel, braced and trussed like a steel bridge. Sizes run from small, narrow machines to machines of large capacity. The rear axle is placed well under the box, where it carries over 70 per cent of the load, insuring plenty of tractive power. Beaters are of large diameter to prevent winding. The teeth are square and chisel-pointed. The apron drive controls the load, insuring even spreading whether the machine is working up or down hill, or on the level. I H C spreaders have a rear axle differential, enabling them to spread evenly when turning corners.

I H C local dealers handling these machines will show you all their good points. Get literature and full information from them, or write

IF YOU ARE CONSTIPATED, EDUCATE YOUR BOWELS WITH BEARLAX

You can form a habit of moving the bowels at a certain time, just as surely as you can form other habits, but you can't do it with calomel. It requires the help of BEARLAX, that splendid liquid laxative, to form this regular "habit" of bowel movement. Unlike other laxatives, BEARLAX itself does NOT become a habit.

BEARLAX contains no calomel, but is better than calomel in every respect. Its action is gentle but SURE. It has a pleasant aromatic taste, and every dose stimulates and tones the liver, stomach and bowels without making you sick or tying your insides into knots.

BEARLAX is as good for the young child as it is for the grandparent—and for either it is without an equal as a pleasant, gentle, beneficial liver, stomach and bowel regulator. BEARLAX is fully guaranteed. Purchase a bottle from your dealer, and, if after trying it, you are not fully satisfied, your dealer will cheerfully refund your money. Price, 50 cents, everywhere.

Veteran Bragg was a nephew of General Bragg, and his record as a soldier is A-1. He was a bright industrious man when the war closed and for 40 years prior to his admission in the Home was engaged as a river pilot first and then a farmer. This death makes six in thirty days of the total inmates of 76.

Another old veteran was buried at the Soldiers Home on Sunday. Veteran H. C. White, after a year's illness, died at the hospital. Mr. White served during the war as a member of the Third Arkansas Volunteers until the close of the war in 1865. The remains were buried here on Monday afternoon.

The matron at the Soldiers Home received a handsome pin with three pearls enclosed, from Mrs Garrett, daughter of Judge J. J. Daniels as a gift of remembrance for the kindness of Miss Lasseter to the late Judge Daniels, who died here recently. W. P. T.

WILSON AND MARSHALL SWORN IN WITH IMPRESSIVE CEREMONY

Inauguration of the New President and Vice-President Is Witnessed by Immense and Enthusiastic Throng—Great Parade Fills Pennsylvania Avenue With Color and Movement.

By GEORGE CLINTON.

Washington, March 4.—With all the impressive ceremony that properly accompanies such a great occasion, Woodrow Wilson was inaugurated president of the United States today. Just before that big event, which took place on a platform in front of the east portico of the capitol, Thomas R. Marshall took the oath as vice-president.

As the new chief executive of the nation stood with bared head, Edward Douglass White, chief justice of the Supreme court, held before him the Bible always used in the ceremony. Mr. Wilson placed his hands upon the book and in a voice strong, though somewhat affected by emotion, swore to support the Constitution and the laws of the country and to perform the duties of his high office to the best of his ability.

Thomas Riley Marshall swore fealty to the Constitution and to the people in the senate chamber, where for four years it will be his duty to preside over the deliberations of the members of the upper house of congress.

Taft and Wilson Ride Together.

President Taft and President-elect Wilson rode together from the White House to the capitol, accompanied by two members of the congressional committee of arrangements. The vice-president-elect also rode from the White House to the capitol and in the carriage with him were the senate's president pro tempore, Senator Bacon of Georgia, and three members of the congressional committee of arrangements.

The vice-president-elect took the oath just before noon in accordance with custom and prior to its taking by the president-elect. Every arrangement for the senate chamber proceedings had been made so that they moved forward easily and with a certain ponderous grace.

New Vice-President Takes Oath.

The admission to the senate chamber to witness the oath-taking of the vice-president was by ticket, and it is needless to say every seat was occupied. On the floor of the chamber were many former members of the senate who, because of the fact that they once held membership in that body, were given the privileges of the floor. After the hall was filled and all the minor officials of government and those privileged to witness the ceremonies were seated, William H. Taft and Woodrow Wilson, preceded by the sergeant-at-arms and the committee of arrangements, entered the senate chamber. They were followed immediately by Vice-President-elect Thomas R. Marshall, leaning upon the arm of the president pro tempore of the senate who, after the seating of the incoming vice-president, took his place as presiding officer of the senate and of the day's proceedings.

The president and the president-elect sat in the first row of seats directly in front and almost under the desk of the presiding officer. In the same row, but to their left, were the vice-president-elect and two former vice-presidents of the United States, Levi P. Morton of New York and Adlai A. Stevenson of Illinois.

When the distinguished company entered the chamber the senate was still under its old organization. The oath of office was immediately administered to Vice-President-elect Marshall, who thereupon became Vice-President Marshall. The prayer of the day was given by the chaplain of the senate, Rev. Ulysses G. B. Pierce, pastor of All Souls' Unitarian church, of which President Taft has been a member. After the prayer the vice-president administered the oath of office to all the newly chosen senators, and therewith the senate of the United States passed for the first time in years into the control of the Democratic party.

Go to Capitol's East Portico.

Immediately after the senate ceremonies a procession was formed to march to the platform of the east portico of the capitol, where Woodrow Wilson was to take the oath. The procession included the president and the president-elect, members of the Supreme court, both houses of congress, all of the foreign ambassadors, all of the heads of the executive departments, many governors of states and territories, Admiral Dewey of the navy and several high officers of the sea service, the chief of staff of the army and many distinguished persons from civil life. They were followed by the members of the press and by those persons who had succeeded in securing seats in the senate galleries

When President Taft and the president-elect emerged from the capitol on to the portico they saw in front of them, reaching far back into the park to the east, an immense concourse of citizens. In the narrow line between the onlookers and the platform on which Mr. Wilson was to take the oath, were drawn up the cadets of the two greatest government schools, West Point and Annapolis, and flanking them were bodies of regulars and of national guardsmen. The whole scene was charged with color and with life.

On reaching the platform the president and president-elect took the seats reserved for them, seats which were flanked by many rows of benches rising tier on tier for the accommodation of the friends and families of the officers of the government and of the press.

Mr. Wilson Inaugurated.

The instant that Mr. Taft and Mr. Wilson came within sight of the crowd there was a great outburst of applause, and the military bands struck quickly into "The Star Spangled Banner." Only a few bars of the music were played and then soldiers and civilians became silent to witness respectfully the oath taking and to listen to the address which followed.

The chief justice of the Supreme court delivered the oath to the president-elect, who, uttering the words, "I will," became president of the United States. As soon as this ceremony was completed Woodrow Wilson delivered his inaugural address, his first speech to his fellow countrymen in the capacity of their chief executive.

At the conclusion of the speech the bands played once more, and William Howard Taft, now ex-president of the United States, entered a carriage with the new president and, reversing the order of an hour before, sat on the left hand side of the carriage, while Mr. Wilson took "the seat of honor" on the right. The crowds cheered as they drove away to the White House, which Woodrow Wilson entered as the occupant and which William H. Taft immediately left as one whose lease had expired.

Parade Is Elaborate.

The "Jeffersonian simplicity" which Woodrow Wilson requested should be observed in every detail of his inauguration as president did not apply to the inaugural parade, for it was as elaborate as such an affair usually is. The people wanted it so, and they showed their appreciation of the spectacle by turning out by the hundred thousand and cheering wildly as the marchers passed with bands playing loudly and flags waving bravely.

The newly inaugurated president reviewed the procession and smiled his approval as he returned the salutes of the commanding officers, for all the glittering show had been arranged in his honor. Pennsylvania avenue, from the capitol to the White House, was full of color, music and movement.

The inhibition of the inaugural ball and of the planned public reception at the capitol had no effect as a bar to the attendance at this ceremony of changing presidents. Masses were here to see, and other masses were here to march. There was a greater demonstration while the procession was passing than there was four years ago. Victory had come to a party which had known nothing like victory for a good many years. The joy of possession found expression in steady and abundantly noisy acclaim.

President Taft and President-elect Wilson were escorted down the avenue by the National Guard troop of cavalry of Essex county, New Jersey. The carriage in which rode Vice-President-elect Marshall and President pro tempore Bacon of the United States senate was surrounded by the members of the Black Horse troop of the Culver Military academy of Indiana. This is the first time in the history of inaugural ceremonies that a guard of honor has escorted a vice-president to the scene of his oath taking.

Parade Is Miles Long.

The military and the civil parade, a huge affair which stretched its length for miles along the Washington streets, formed on the avenues radiating from the capitol. After President-elect Wilson had become President Wilson and Vice-President-elect Marshall had become Vice-President Marshall, they went straightway from the capitol to the White House and thence shortly to the reviewing stand in the park at the mansion's front.

The parade, with Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood, United States army, as its grand marshal, started from the capitol grounds to move along the avenue to the White House, where it was to pass in review. The trumpeter sounded "forward march" at the instant the signal was flashed from the White house that in fifteen minutes the newly elected president and commander-in-chief of the armies and navies of the United States would be ready to review "his troops."

It was thought that the parade might lack some of the picturesque features which particularly appealed to the people on former occasions. There were Indians and rough riders here not only when Roosevelt was inaugurated, but when he went out of office and was succeeded by William H. Taft. The parade, however, in honor of Mr. Wilson seemed to be picturesque enough in its features to appeal to the multitudes. They certainly made noise enough over it.

The procession was in divisions, with General Wood as the grand marshal of the whole affair and having a place at its head. The display, in the words invariably used on like occasions, was "impressive and brilliant."

Regulars Have Right of Way.

The regulars of the country's two armed service naturally had the right of way. Maj. Gen. W. W. Wotherspoon, United States army, was in command of the first division, in which marched the soldiers and sailors and marines from the posts and the navy yards within a day's ride of Washington. The West Point cadets and the midshipmen from the naval academy at Annapolis, competent beyond other corps in manual and in evolution, the future generals and admirals of the army, had place in the first division.

All branches of the army service were represented in the body of regulars—engineers, artillery, cavalry, infantry and signal corps. The sailors and marines from half a dozen battleships rolled along smartly in the wake of their landsmen brethren.

The National Guard division followed the division of regulars. It was commanded by Brig. Gen. Albert L. Mills, United States army, who wore the medal of honor given him for conspicuous personal gallantry at the battle of San Juan hill. General Mills is the chief of the militia division of the United States war department.

The entire National Guard of New Jersey was in line, and Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Maryland, Virginia, Georgia, Maine and North Carolina were represented by bodies of civilian soldiers. Cadets from many of the private and state military schools of the country had a place in the militia division. Among them were boys from the Virginia Military Institute, the Culver Military Academy of Indiana, the Carlisle school, Purdue university, the Citadel cadets and the Georgia Military academy.

The third division of the parade was composed of Grand Army of the Republic veterans, members of the Union Veteran league and of the Spanish war organizations. Gen. James E. Stuart of Chicago, a veteran of both the Civil and the Spanish wars, was in command.

Harper Leads Civilians.

Robert N. Harper, chief marshal of the civic forces, commanded the fourth division. Under his charge were political organizations from all parts of the country, among them being Tammany, represented by 2,000 of its braves, and Democratic clubs from Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore and other cities.

They put the American Indians into the civilian division. The fact that they were in war paint and feathers helped out in picturesqueness and did nothing to disturb the peace. Members of the United Hunt Clubs of America rode in this division. Their pink coats and their high hats apparently were not thought to jar "Jeffersonian simplicity" from its seat. Pink coats were worn on the hunting field in Jefferson's day and in Jefferson's state.

There were 1,000 Princeton students in the civic section of the parade. Many of them wore orange and black sweaters and they were somewhat noisy though perfectly proper. Students from seventeen other colleges and universities were among the marchers.

There was music enough for any democratic occasion. The judicious distribution of the bands prevented the clashing of tunes. There were fifty bands in line, but only one of them, the Marine band, was allowed to play "hail to the Chief," a tune which every band on an occasion like this hitherto has insisted on playing almost incessantly, to the routing of everything else known to the composers of the past.

Great Enthusiasm Shown.

All along Pennsylvania avenue, from the capitol to a point four block beyond the White House, the spectators were massed in lines ten deep. The cheering was constant and Woodrow Wilson cannot complain that the ceremonies attending his induction into office were not accompanied by apparently heartfelt acclaim of the people over whom he is to rule for at least four years.

Every window in every building on Pennsylvania avenue which is not occupied for office purposes was rented weeks ago for a good round sum of money. Every room overlooking the marching parade was taken by as many spectators as could find a vantage point from which to peer through the window panes. The roofs of the buildings were covered with persons willing to stand for hours in a March day to see the wonders of the inaugural parade, and many of them particularly glad of an opportunity to go home and to say that after many years waiting they had seen a Democratic president inaugurated.

ORIGIN OF THE LIFE BOAT

Invention That Has Saved Thousands of Lives Largely the Result of Accidental Discovery.

Writers are always fond of dilating upon the commonplace origin of remarkable inventions. Still another instance of their accidental nature—and a most interesting one—is given by Noel T. Methley in "The Life Boat and Its Story."

In the course of a country stroll, William Wouldhave, the inventor of the self-righting life boat, came across a woman who asked his help in lifting a heavy vessel of water just drawn from the well. On the surface of the water there floated the broken half of a wood bowl. Wouldhave was drawn into conversation, and like many another who cannot keep his hands quiet while he talks, he idly toyed with the floating piece of wood. Naturally he turned it over, and found to his surprise that it immediately righted itself. He inverted it again with the same result, and since he was at the time actually at work on the problem of an unsinkable boat, he immediately realized the importance of his chance discovery.

It is an experiment that any one can readily make for himself. All you require is the fourth part of a hollow "prolate spheroid;" or, to put it in more homely language, the quarter of a cocoanut shell split from end to end. Put the shell in a bowl of water, and you will find that it will not remain capsized, but will return at once to an even keel. In scientific language, it will float only with the convex surface downward.

Any child knows that if you cut up a broken rubber ball you get five or six nice little round-bottomed, high-ended boats. It remained for William Wouldhave to discover that these are all little self-righting life boats.

Many Miles of Sewage Links.

The sewage mains in this country in the course of a year would encircle the earth more than six times.

WILSON'S INAUGURAL ADDRESS

New Chief Executive Declares His Aim Will Be to Correct the Evils of Our National Life Without Impairing the Good.

Washington, March 4.—President Woodrow Wilson's inaugural address delivered today, one of the shortest on record, was as follows:

There has been a change of government. It began two years ago, when the house of representatives became Democratic by a decisive majority. It has now been completed. The senate about to assemble will also be Democratic. The offices of president and vice-president have been put into the hands of Democrats. What does the change mean? That is the question that is uppermost in our minds today. That is the question I am going to try to answer, in order, if I may, to interpret the occasion.

It means much more than the mere success of a party. The success of a party means little except when the nation is using that party for a large and definite porpose. No one can mistake the purpose for which the nation now seeks to use the Democratic party. It seeks to use it to interpret a change in its own plans and point of view. Some old things with which we had grown familiar, and which had begun to creep into the very habit of our thought and of our lives, have altered their aspect as we have latterly looked critically upon them, with fresh, awakened eyes; have dropped their disguises and shown themselves alien and sinister. Some new things, as we look frankly upon them, willing to comprehend their real character, have come to assume the aspect of things long believed in and familiar, stuff of our own convictions. We have been refreshed by a new insight into our own life.

We see that in many things that life is very great. It is incomparably great in its material aspects, in its body of wealth, in the diversity and sweep of its energy, in the industries which have been conceived and built up by the genius of individual men and the limitless enterprise of groups of men. It is great, also, very great, in its moral force. Nowhere else in the world have noble men and women exhibited in more striking form the beauty and energy of sympathy and helpfulness and counsel in their efforts to rectify wrong, alleviate suffering, and set the weak in the way of strength and hope.

But the evil has come with the good, and much fine gold has been corroded. With riches has come inexcusable waste. We have squandered a great part of what we might have used, and have not stopped to conserve the exceeding bounty of nature, without which our genius for enterprise would have been worthless and impotent, scorning to be careful, shamefully prodigal as well as admirably efficient. We have been proud of our industrial achievements, but we have not hitherto stopped thoughtfully enough to count the human cost, the cost of lives snuffed out, of energies overtaxed and broken, the fearful physical and spiritual cost to the men and women and children upon whom the dead weight and burden of it all has fallen pitilessly the years through. The groans and agony of it all had not yet reached our ears, the solemn, moving undertone of our life, coming up out of the mines and factories and out of every home where the struggle had its intimate and familiar seat. With the great government went many deep secret things which we too long delayed to look into and scrutinize with candid, fearless eyes. The great government we loved has too often been made use of for private and selfish purposes, and those who used it had forgotten the people.

At last a vision has been vouchsafed us of our life as a whole. We see the bad with the good, the debased and decadent with the sound and vital. With this vision we approach new affairs. Our duty is to cleanse, to reconsider, to restore, to correct the evil without impairing the good, to purify and humanize every process of our common life without weakening or sentimentalizing it. There has been something crude and heartless and unfeeling in our haste to succeed and be great. Our thought has been 'Let every man look out for himself, let every generation look out for itself,' while we reared giant machinery which made it impossible that any but those who stood at the levers of control should have a chance to look out for themselves. We had not forgotten our morals. We remembered well enough that we had set up a policy which was meant to serve the humblest as well as the most powerful, with an eye single to the standards of justice and fair play, and remembered it with pride. But we were very heedless and in a hurry to be great.

We have come now to the sober second thought. The scales of heedlessness have fallen from our eyes. We have made up our minds to square every process of our national life again with the standards we so proudly set up at the beginning and have always carried at our hearts. Our work is a work of restoration.

We have itemized with some degree of particularity the things that ought to be altered and here are some of the chief items: A tariff which cuts us off from our proper part in the commerce of the world, violates the just principles of taxation, and makes the government a facile instrument in the hands of private interests; a banking and currency system based upon the necessity of the government to sell its bonds fifty years ago and perfectly adapted to concentrating cash and restricting credits; an industrial system which, take it on all its sides, financial as well as administrative, holds capital in leading strings, restricts the liberties and limits the opportunities of labor, and exploits without renewing or conserving the natural resources of the country; a body of agricultural activities never yet given the efficiency of great business undertakings or served as it should be through the instrumentality of science taken directly to the farm, or afforded the facilities of credit best suited to its practical needs; water courses undeveloped, waste places unreclaimed, forests untended, fast disappearing without plan or prospect of renewal, unregarded waste heaps at every mine. We have studied as perhaps no other nation has the most effective means of production, but we have not studied cost or economy as we should either as organizers of industry, as statesmen, or as individuals.

Nor have we studied and perfected the means by which government may be put at the service of humanity, in safeguarding the health of the nation, the health of its men and its women and its children, as well as their rights in the struggle for existence. This is no sentimental duty. The firm basis of government is justice, not pity. These are matters of justice. There can be no equality or opportunity, the first essential of justice in the body politic, if men and women and children be not shielded in their lives, their very vitality, from the consequences of great industrial and social processes which they cannot alter, control or singly cope with. Society must see to it that it does not itself crush or weaken or damage its own constituent parts. The first duty of law is to keep sound the society it serves. Sanitary laws, pure food laws, and laws determining conditions of labor which individuals are powerless to determine for themselves are intimate parts of the very business of justice and legal efficiency.

These are some of the things we ought to do, and not leave the others undone, the old-fashioned, never-to-be-neglected, fundamental safeguarding of property and of individual right. This is the high enterprise of the new day: to lift everything that concerns our life as a nation to the light that shines from the hearthfire of every man's conscience and vision of the right. It is inconceivable that we should do this as partisans; it is inconceivable we should do it in ignorance of the facts as they are or in blind haste. We shall restore, not destroy. We shall deal with our economic system as it is and as it may be modified, not as it might be if we had a clean sheet of paper to write upon; and step by step we shall make it what it should be, in the spirit of those who question their own wisdom and seek counsel and knowledge, not shallow self-satisfaction or the excitement of excursions whither they cannot tell. Justice, and only justice, shall always be our motto.

And yet it will be no cool process of mere science. The nation has been deeply stirred, stirred by a solemn passion, stirred by the knowledge of wrong, of ideals lost, of government too often debauched and made an instrument of evil. The feelings with which we face this new age of right and opportunity sweep across our heart-strings like some air out of God's own presence, where justice and mercy are reconciled and the judge and the brother are one. We know our task to be no mere task of politics, but a task which shall search us through and through, whether we be able to understand our time and the need of our people, whether we be indeed their spokesmen and interpreters, whether we have the pure heart to comprehend and the rectified will to choose our high course of action.

This is not a day of triumph; it is a day of dedication. Here muster, not the forces of party, but the forces of humanity. Men's hearts wait upon us; men's lives hang in the balance; men's hopes call upon us to say what we will do. Who shall live up to the great trust? Who dares fail to try? I summon all honest men, all patriotic, all forward-looking men, to my side. God helping me, I will not fail them, if they will but counsel and sustain me!

What Would You Do?

"What would you do if you were a millionaire?" was the question propounded to the little boys of an East side school the other day.

The little East siders' answers were interesting. Some of them wrote:

"I would have a house with rooms for each kind of use, such as sitting room, bedroom and dining room."

"I would buy banks and be a bank president at a large salary."

"I would live on Fifth avenue in a clean house and buy autos and charlots."

"I would be proud of my situation and also glad, and I would own autos and earn money by hiring them out."

"I would go to the finest 'movies' every night; also matinees, if possible."

"I would buy a yacht and be elected mayor and corner the market."

"I would feast my peasants, also institute an educating school."

"I would buy the subway and get rich by charging 10c each."

BARACAS ENTERTAIN

The elegant banquet given by the Baracas of the Methodist Sunday school to the Philatheas on last Friday evening is a landmark on the social horizon for the year. At eight o'clock the members of the classes repaired to the Palmer Hotel, where vivacious conversation, and delightful music made an hour pass as only a few minutes. They were then ushered into the dining room, which was beautiful in its decorative appointments. Near the entrance stood a tall wicker standard from which clusters of violets and ferns hung in charming abundance; over the windows and from the chandelier were festoons of similax; in other places ferns and Spring blossoms were massed. The dining table was especially lovely; in the center was a pyramid of violets and plumosea ferns, from which lights gleamed, making a brilliant effect. At opposite sides of the table stood candelabra which are splendid types of the old brasses of a forgotten period, their prisms taking the light and reflecting over the compotes and dishes filled with olives and pickels. The plates nestled in hearts of violets A six-course dinner was beautifully served, which would have satisfied the greatest epicure.

After dinner they were invited to the handsome home of Mr. and Mrs. M. L. White, which was decorated for the occasion. In the hall was to be seen the well, with its "moss covered bucket," from which was dipped the delicious punch, which so delightfully supplemented the enjoyable dinner at the hotel.

An interesting contest was entered into. Mr. Frank Thomas using to the best advantage his fine senses, received first prize; Mrs. Chappelle drew the consolation.

The froth of delicate chiffon, the gleam of crystals, the fleet glimpses of satin slippers, and over all the allure of smiles and exotic perfumes, mingled in enchanting confusion. Mrs. White was gracious as she is queenly, and her part of the entertainment could not fail to reflect her personal charm.

Mrs. J. H. Middleton, whose beauty is at its best when she wears pink, was attired in a shell-tinted charmeuse gown, with an overdress of white chiffon, caught with pink rosebuds.

Miss Anne Stallworth wore a superb gown of red silk, with corsage cluster of red carnations

Mrs. Chappelle's dark gown was especially becoming to her fair hair and blue eyes. It was fashioned of dark grey, with black net elaborately embroidered in jet.

Miss Marguerite Chappelle wore a superb old-rose robe and Miss Lucile Gross was beautiful in blue embroidered net over pink.

Miss Lurline Harper wore black net yet with lace trimmings, which is especially becoming to her Grecian type.

Miss Mabel Thomas was very attractive in blue voile.

Miss Blanche Tisdale was handsome in pale blue with pink roses.

Miss Dovie Roper wore pink with garnitures of lace.

Mrs. Fox was elegantly gowned in black; a handsome toitle with lace.

Miss Ellen Stanley was very charming in pink satin.

Miss Alma Jones wore blue lace with pink forget-me-nots.

Miss Glennie Evans was very pretty in white lingerie with lace trimmings.

Mrs. Gamma Anderson wore a handsome green messaline, with overdress of gold dew-drop chiffon, and corsage bouquet of white carnations.

The ladies are indebted to the following gentlemen for this delightful evening:

Rev. L. H. S. Chappelle, Messrs. W. W. Fox, P. D. Wilson, F. M. Wood, J. H. Middleton, M. L. White, C. Fenn Jones, Newton Aldridge, C. J. Davis, Alva Wade, M. C. Broadhead; Eric Hart, Frank Thomas and Scott Chesnutt.

T. U. CRUMPTON WAS WIDELY KNOWN

WAS PRESIDENT OF UNION STATE BANK AND A PROMINENT CHURCH WORKER

T. U. Crumpton, of Maplesville, Ala., who died last Friday, March 7, and was buried at Maplesville, March 8, the Rev. F. M. Woods and the Rev. J. W. Mitchell conducting the funeral services, was widely known throughout the state. Mr. Crumpton was on one of his farms, seemingly very well, when he was stricken very suddenly and died the next day.

Thomas Ulma Crumpton was born at Pleasant Hill, in Dallas county, August 10, 1858. His boyhood days were spent at Pleasant Hill and he farmed there for about two years, after which he entered school at Greenville. He entered mercantile life at Benton for B. Wolff, who is now proprietor of the Imperial Hotel at Montgomery. He remained at Benton for several years, finally going into business for himself. In 1886 he was married to Miss Willie Stoddard, who lived only six months after her marriage. In 1888 he came to Maplesville and engaged in the mercantile business, and one year later, he was married to Miss Ursula DuBose.

Mr. Crumpton's mercantile career was governed by careful and honest business principles, and he was very successful. At the time of his death, and for some years before, he had one of the largest and best rated mercantile businesses in his town, and he was the owner of about 3000 acres of farm land in the vicinity. In January, 1912, he was chosen president of the Union State Bank of Maplesville, Jemison and Thorsby, which position he held till his death. During his term as president, the bank increased its business steadily, especially at Maplesville.

Mr. Crumpton was most widely known probably on account of his church and Sunday school activities. He joined the Baptist church at Pleasant Hill and always remained a Baptist. He contributed liberally to the church and Sunday school, and was one of the main workers for the erection of the Baptist church building and the public school building in his town. After his trip to Palestine, at the time of the International Sunday schoool convention at Jerusalem, he was often called upon to lecture on the Holy land.

He left a wife and three children, Blossom, Thomas and Emmie Lillian, also a brother, J. R. Crumpton, of Pleasant Hill, and Mrs. Graham, of Tampa, Fla. In politics he was a democrat, being nominated once by the party for state representative from Chilton county.

The above was taken from the Age-Herald of Monday. The announcement of the death of Mr. Crumpton will cause county-wide regret. He was one of Chilton's noblemen, one who was always on the right side of every moral question, public spirited and agressive.

The PRESS joins with its numerous friends in extending to his bereaved widow and other relatives heart-felt sympathy.

Col. Sam Will John, one of the leading attorneys of Birmingham, was in Clanton Monday on

PLAYED HOOKEY

You've doubtless heard of the sad consequences that usually befall school children who play "hookey" from school?

Well, listen to this sad tale of woe and see if it doesn't remind you somewhat of the days when, perhaps, you played hookey.

Sunday morning the young men were all at Sunday school, but immediately thereafter an incontrolable desire to visit Montevallo seized them, so hiking it away in double time their trusty autos were brought into requisition; at eleven thirty, with Grady and Scott in one machine and Jos. P. and Barney in the other, they started for the classic little city of Montevallo; so joyous were their anticipations that they telegraphed ahead to have the best feed possible reserved for them at the hotel.

In due course of time they hauled in front of the Montevallo hostelry where a bounteous repast was served them—that is Scott and Barney were bounteously fed, that being their way, while Grady and Joe, being somewhat bashful, hung back on the eats, much to their sorrow, as will be unfolded later in the tragedy—say in the third act.

After enjoying the sights of the little city, preparations for the return trip were inaugurated. Grady and Scott in the vanguard, while Jos. P. and Barney brought up the rear. This was in the gray mists of the afternoon; rain had fallen in torrents and the roads were not as good as some roads are. This, however, was over in Shelby county, permit us to say by way of explanation. Coming to the creek in Dry Valley, which at that time was quite wet, Grady pulled the throttle wide open and "let 'er go" down the incline with a speed that was guaranteed, under ordinary circumstances, to have brought the faithful machine to the top of the next hill; the water sloshed, but the good old engine plowed faithfully along; just as the promised land was in sight a deep hole, wash-out, or something resembling one or the other of these, was encountered; the engine plunged forward, gave one long sad wail and settled down for a rest. It was but ten feet to the nearest bank, but neither Grady or Scott had done much Spring training, and besides the car was setting catawhampus or topsy-turvy as you please. Grady didn't care to have his engine ruined and Scott didn't want to have his pale blue socks dampened—being all he had with him. But something must be done. Jos. P. and Barney were sure their machine would prove equal to any emergency, so with swelling hearts they volunteered to make the plunge, and having crossed, to pull the other boys out of their dilemma. The plunge was made; Jos. P.'s engine, study as a veteran on dress parade, puffed and plunged, but there are things which iron nerves and hooks of steel cannot accomplish; there are other things which even a faithful automobile cannot do, and one of them is to jump a ditch in the middle of a creek when the wheels are already well nigh submerged with water. Jos. P.'s engine, though a good one, had to give one dispairing groan, accompanied by a "puff, pisch" and settle itself beside its companion engine. It was then a case of must, even tho' the boys did have on their Sunday togs, their pale pink socks and white vests. Down into the murky waters of the creek they went, trying to persuade the engines to be good and to help them on board. Nothing doing. Left the engines, we will leave them resting as well as they can and rope and

TWENTY-SIX QUARTS

It seems that people will not learn from the experience of others; this is true not only in the matter of road building but in the purchase of liquors.

Monday night Sheriff Jones was "put wise" and though indisposed remained up town for the arrival of the 10:20 train; when it steamed into the station Wilmer Bledsoe alighted with a heavy "turn."

Sheriff Jones was stationed at the cattle gap, Deputy Smitherman a little south of the tank, while Chief Fallon occupied a position near the post-office. Bledsoe walked right into the arms of the Sheriff with his load of wet goods and was accosted by the Sheriff thus: "Why, Wilmer, I didn't order all that stuff; I told you to bring just a little along for snake bite purposes." "Yes, responded Wilmer, but you see there's lots of snakes around now and some others might need a nip occasionally; anyway, Mr. Sheriff, I didn't bring it for selling purposes."

Wilmer was hiked off to jail and his liquids confiscated. He made bond and is now at his accustomed duties

MORE ABOUT ROADS

KILLGORE AGAIN EXPRESSES OPINION.

Mr. Editor:—I wish to say a few more words on the road question. It seems to me as if we could discuss as important a question as the public highways without trying to slur anyone, as it is a matter that does, or should, concern every citizen of the county. I do not propose to be personal in my remarks whatever, so if you are the guilty one, or if my remarks should strike you, you are the very one at whom I am aiming.

I notice that some of the writers say if the present law was put into operation we would have good roads; those writers are no doubt honest in their opinions, but that will not do in this part of the county.

I heard a man say last Saturday that he had put in his full ten days on the roads, and yet he cannot get a hundred yards from his house either way without the axles of his wagon dragging in the mud. Another said that in his community the men over road age were assisting; he seems to think the plan works well. I'll agree with that writer this far: that if a plenty men turn out and will work long enough this rule will work alright, provided they will mix something with the dirt to make a roadbed that will hold up under a heavy load during these excessively rainy days; but now, Mr. Writer, do you honestly believe that it is right? Think for a moment who would work the roads under your plans; would it not be the poor farming class principally? I think it would.

Now, gentlemen, suppose we all lay down our prejudice and our views for political gain and think for awhile whose duty it is to work the roads. Is it not the duty of the man who uses them? I think so. Well, who is it then? It surely is the wealthy people instead of the poor. Under present methods there are a great many men who have to furnish their own tools and work the roads ten days each year, while the L. & N., the Southern and the M. & O. railroad companies, the bankers, the merchants, the doctors and lawyers, do not hit a lick on the roads. Is this right? Now some claim that if bonds were issued that when the money was spent we would still have no roads, that the roads would give way and we'd be in as bad a fix as ever. Think for a moment. Don't you know that if $150,000 is spent on the roads in Chilton county the people of the county could keep them up alright? Ask the railroad companies, the bankers and all if they would object to a bond issue. I'll venture that four out of every five would favor bond issue; but, but the man that has to buy his tools on credit had rather work ten days under the old rule.

Yours for good roads,
Moses A. Killgore.

socks and all—almost up to their white vests.

About nine that night—Sunday night—they looked it up to Mr. D. W. Killingsworth's, some four miles away, where they were hospitably received, a fire made for them and a bed prepared for their reception.

Monday morning, Sunday clothes, pink socks, white vests and all arrived in Clanton—but they came

SOLDIERS HOME NOTES

The health of the old men has improved lately very much.

Gen. John B. Fuller and C. L. Ruth, members of Alabama Executive Committee, were here yesterday, looking after the best interests of the place generally.

Mrs. Belle George of Clanton sent a large box of delicacies to one of the old men last week.

Dr. J. P. Ellsberry, physician in charge here, took four of the patients to Montgomery last week in order to consult with Dr. Hill as to their condition. W. P. T.

Mr. Guy Higgins is rejoicing in the presence of a sweet little girl, who came to his home last Friday.

ANOTHER VIEW

MR. WESSON ASKS QUESTIONS. WANTS INFORMATION.

Dear Mr. Editor:—I have thought for some time that I would write something for the newspapers on the bond issue.

I see Judge Deason and others are crying out bonds. I wish they would tell us how many miles of roads $150,000, would build? I have heard well posted men say this amount would not build more than seventy-five miles, so if we have one thousand miles of public roads what would become of the nine nundred and twenty-five miles left?

We would have to pay the interest on $150,000.00; the lowest we could expect to get would be 5 per cent, which would cost us $7,500 per year and we can only levy about $10,000.00 all told for road purposes; then we would have only $2,500.00 left for the 925 miles of public roads.

I hope some one will figure this out if I have not got it correct. The bond issue will not do for this county. Is it right to tax all the people to build a few miles of good roads for a few to ride over in automobiles? What has become of the Maplesville road? How many miles will they get for the $8,000 00. Wonder if they would get the $150,000.00 for the bonds some want to issue? I hear some of the county officials wanted to give them the road tax for this year as they did last. I wonder if the officials will build forty miles with the $8,000.00 at Maplesville? We proposed to build a road forty miles north and south with $9,500 from the county and what help we could get from the people. I ask the people not to be fooled by the good roads cry and vote for bonds before they can see out. Some say the corporations will pay most of it, yes they will, but it is harder for a farmer with forty acres to pay his little mite than it is for the rich to pay theirs. I would like to have a meeting of the citizens and hear them discuss the bond issue for this county. I hope the above questions will be answered by someone that wants bonds. I consider that if we were to issue bonds we would get ourselves in the condition that we could not build any roads. It would take all the tax we could levy to pay interest, and to keep up the few miles we had built.

You talk about kicking, we have not heard any yet until you tax the people to build a few miles, and tney themselves working their roads and pulling through the mud.

J. O. Wesson.

5,976 VIOLATED PROHIBITION LAW

FIGURES EXCEED THOSE OF 1909-10 BY OVER TWO THOUSAND

STATE PREPARES REPORT

Biennial Statement Shows 514 Held for Murder, With 30 Death Sentences.

Montgomery.—Violating the liquor law is the predominant crime in Alabama, according to figures compiled by Attorney General Robert C. Brickell for his biennial report, which will be published soon. It is shown by the figures that there were 5,976 persons indicted for this offense during the two years from October 1, 1910, to September 30, 1912. For the two years covered by the preceding report the number indicted for this offense was 3,005. The 1912 report shows that of the 5,976 indicted, 1,866 were convicted, 518 acquitted, 2,892 nol prossed and 704 withdrawn. Of the 3,005 in the 1910 report, 1,018 were convicted, 418 acquitted, 1,049 nol prossed and 520 withdrawn.

It is explained that the large number of cases nol prossed is due to the fact that when one conviction is obtained against the offender the other cases are dropped or nol prossed. Offenders are indicted sometimes on each sale they are caught making and later all the cases, with one exception, are nol prossed in order that the offender may be convicted.

A large number of the cases were not prossed in Birmingham, Montgomery and Mobile when the Smith bill went into effect. This raised the number of nol prossed cases to an unusually large amount.

The percentage of convictions in all criminal cases in Alabama in the 1912 report was 42 1-3, as compared with 48 for the preceding report. The drop in percentage is due to the large number of cases nol prossed for violation of the liquor law.

The total number of cases in the 1912 report is 25,449, as compared to 20,066 in the 1910 report. In 1911-12 there were 10,870 convicted and 2,202 acquitted, compared with 9,460 and 2,891 in 1909-10.

In 1911-12 there were 9,477 cases nol prossed, 1,900 withdrawn, 30 death sentences imposed, 1,421 penitentiary sentences, 2,364 hard labor sentences, 394 jail sentences and 6,981 fines.

The 30 death sentences included 29 for first degree murder and one for arson in the first degree. There were 92 life sentences imposed for murder in the first degree.

The number of persons who met death at the hands of others in 1911-12 amounted to 701, as compared with 623 in 1909-10. There were 280 indicted for murder in the first degree, 234 for murder in the second degree, 122 for manslaughter in the first degree and 65 for manslaughter in the second degree.

There is a marked increase in the number of concealed weapon charges, the 1912 total being 1,502 indictments, with 1,226 cases and 593 convictions in 1910.

Increases also were shown in the indictments for gaming, the 1912 report showing 2,125 cases for this offense compared with 1,339 in the previous report. Public drunkenness increased, too, the 1912 figures being 1,012 compared with the 1910 figures of 635.

There was one person arrested during the two years for the crime of "changing hog marks." This offender, however, was acquitted.

One doughty individual displayed his temper and sent a challenge for a duel to another, and his case is recorded under the head of "sending a challenge." He, too, was acquitted.

Another man was arrested on the charge of "bartering an office," but was acquitted. A "fugitive from justice" was a charge brought against one man, but he was discharged.

Montgomery.—Alabama is the third state in the union to appoint a supervisor of negro rural schools, and has sent Prof. J. L. Sibley to Virginia, where he can get information from Jackson Davis, the supervisor of negro rural schools of that state. Kentucky is the other state which has a similar official. Monied Settlers Come to Alabama.

Montgomery.—Mr. W. L. Henderson, state land agent for the Mobile and Ohio Railroad company, which, like the other railroads in Alabama, have been engaged in an advertising and development campaign in Alabama, said that the present winter had been the best selling season that any Alabama railroad or land company had ever known. More settlers, more investors, he said, had come into Alabama during the winter than in any previous years.

The department of game and fish contributed $10,262.19 to the general fund.

The sale of sixteen sections school lands during the year netted the state $73,696. In the list of receipts there is one item of $200,000 in temporary loans.

Taxes from the general fund amounted to $1,302,566; for the educational fund, $1,562,494, and poll taxes, $179,790. Taxes for pensions amounted to $520,835. General license netted $395,821 and taxes on mortgages aggregated $107,326.

The disbursements totaled $6,341,784. Among the larger amounts paid out were those to the public schools running to $2,031,033, and the pension fund totaled $948,381. The Alabama insane hospital received $341,934, and the county high schools of the state were paid $129,750. The State Normal schools received $112,790. The University of Alabama was paid $93,500, While the Alabama Polytechnic institute received $87,280.

The Alabama Girls' Technical institute, at Montevallo, obtained $62,555, while the nine agricultural schools were paid $40,500.

The report contains a complete list of all the receipts of the state from every source and detailed statement of all the expenditures.

The Reign of Woman.

Women will serve as public porters and dining car waiters on the special train which is to carry the Illinois suffragists to the Washington parade, and except for the train crew and solitary man to shine shoes it will be an example of feminized railway transportation. The male shoeblack prompts masculine reflections on the division of menial labor under the new dispensation. But mere man may take heart. The time is still remote when there will be women at locomotive throttles or in the more responsible posts in railroad operation. —New York World.

STRENGTH
Without Overloading The Stomach.

The business man, especially, needs food in the morning that will not overload the stomach, but give mental vigor for the day.

Much depends on the start a man gets each day, as to how he may expect to accomplish the work on hand.

He can't be alert, with a heavy, fried-meat-and-potatoes breakfast requiring a lot of vital energy in digesting it.

A Calif. business man tried to find some food combination that would not overload the stomach in the morning, but that would produce energy.

He writes:

"For years I was unable to find a breakfast food that had nutrition enough to sustain a business man without overloading his stomach, causing indigestion and kindred ailments.

"Being a very busy and also a very nervous man, I decided to give up breakfast altogether. But luckily I was induced to try Grape-Nuts.

"Since that morning I have been a new man; can work without tiring, my head is clear and my nerves strong and quiet.

"I find four teaspoonfuls of Grape-Nuts with one of sugar and a small quantity of cold milk, is delicious as the cereal part of the morning meal, and invigorates me for the day's business." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

MAY NOT RESTRICT SESSION TO TARIFF

DEMOCRATIC LEADERS URGE OTHER REFORMS UPON WILSON.

WANTS CURRENCY REFORM

Chairman Glass Calls on President in Interest of the Measure—Little Trouble Anticipated.

Washington.—President Wilson may find a harder task before him than democratic leaders expected to carry out their plan to restrict congress to the consideration of the tariff alone at the special session announced for April 1. Although the special session still is three weeks away, the President heard urgent pleas in behalf of the subjects which democrats of influence believe should be taken up and disposed of as soon as possible. Representative Glass, prospective chairman of the House committee on banking and currency, urged the necessity for immediate consideration of the currency reform and former State Chairman Heifner of Washington asked the President to consider a recommendation for the immediate enactment of legislation looking to the development of Alaska. Mr. Glass left the White House convinced a currency measure might be partly perfected at the special session, though hardly likely to be passed.

Mr. Heifner was assurred of a further hearing at which senators and members of the House interested in Alaska will have an extended hearing. Their efforts will be directed toward having the president support a plan proposed by the Alaskan railways commission for the construction of several railways designed to open the coal fields of that territory.

Assurance came from Senate leaders, however, that the tariff program could be carried through successfully in that branch of Congress. Any bitterness which may have developed as a result of the recent Senate caucuses the President was told will not interfere with a strict adherence to a policy of tariff revision and that alone. Progressive republicans, not approached as yet by democratic leaders, are expected to fall in line with the dominant party. The President will not face the condition which confronted Mr. Taft when he called the special Canadian reciprocity session and saw it grind out bills on all sorts of subjects which had nothing to do with the tariff.

MEETS FOREIGN DIPLOMATS.

With Impressive Ceremony President Greets Foreign Representatives.

Washington.—While President Wilson already has dispensed with some of the formalities which hitherto have been observed by occupants of the White House, he demonstrated that he would observe to the letter the international amenities of his office.

Probably the most formal ceremony in which Mr. Wilson ever has participated was his presentation to the diplomatic corps accredited to Washington by the civilized nations of the globe. In a semi-circle of brilliant color, their uniforms gilded profusely with the insignia of their rank, 146 foreign representatives stood in impressive silence while the new President and Secretary of State Bryan entered through the big doors of the east room. The President and Secretary Bryan wore the conventional frock suits of formal occasion in America. The President was accompanied by his chief aide, Col. Spencer Cosby, and his personal aide, Maj. Thomas L. Rhoades, both of them in the full dress uniform of the American army. On each side of the entrance six White House aides, three from the army and three from the navy, stood at attention.

CROP PRICES LOWER.

Average 21.7 Per Cent Under Prices Received a Year Ago.

Washington.—Prices received by producers in the United States for staple crops averaged about 21.7 per cent lower on March 1 than on that date a year ago, 3.9 per cent lower than in 1911, 19 per cent lower than 1910, and 10.3 per cent lower than 1909 on the same date. The average of prices increased 6-10th of 1 per cent from February 1 to March 1.

HISTORIC HOTEL CLOSES.

New Haven, Conn.—The Tontine hotel, for years the headquarters of the Yale class reunion, was closed after an existence of nearly a century. The hotel contained a bait room made famous by Governor Buckingham, Connecticut's Civil war governor, who led a grand march there at his inaugural.

MONEY IS FIRMER; DEMANDS ACTIVE

Security Markets on the Whole Settled—Stock Market Heavy.

New York.—Bradstreet's Review of Trade says:

Spring trade conditions are healthy. Staple goods receive most call, but there is quite a little booking of far future business, though buying in this respect is tempered to some extent by prospective tariff changes. Wool is quiet and prices are rather weak. Industrial operations proceed at an active pace. Outdoor work has been conducted with few pauses throughout the winter season.

The market for flour appears to be overstocked and flour milling in the northwest is quieter. Specifications for finished steel are unusually heavy and the industry as a whole is working at high pressure. Copper has improved a little owing to foreign demand.

Winter wheat conditions are favorable and in the south preparations are going forward for the new planting season with prospects favoring an increased cotton acreage. The railways are busy with miscellaneous shipments.

Money is firmer, demand is active, and banks are closely loaned up. Stock market operations are characterized by dullness and considerable heaviness is apparent. The chief factor is the unsettled condition of European markets.

Business failures for the week ending March 6 were 259 which compares with 287 in the like week of 1912. Wheat, including flour, exports from the United States and Canada for the week ending March 6, aggregate 3,689,078. This compares with 4,800,183 bushels last week and 1,899,227 this week last year.

New York.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Review of Trade says:

While there is little speculation in any market, yet such activity has prevailed for the past few months in the important industries to show evidence of trade continuing unabated. Railroad earnings of four weeks of February increased 4 per cent as compared with the same period last year. Other February statistics were generally favorable, including the producers of coppers' statement.

The daily production of iron in February exceeded that of January, a conclusive evidence of the continued activity in the iron and steel trade, the heavy purchases of steel products by railroads and agricultural implement makers being the main feature.

The textile trades are experiencing a continued large demand which keeps both mills and distributing houses busy. The clothing strike is in the process of settlement and arbitration of the important dispute between the eastern railroads and their firemen is to begin next week. The shoe trade reports a steady broadening of activity.

Winter wheat conditions are very encouraging and the new cotton crop outlook is unusually favorable. Trade reports from the leading distributing centers are generally good. The security markets have been on the whole more settled.

LIVING WAGE FOR WORKING GIRL

Investigation of Wage Conditions in Chicago—Prominent Witnesses Examined.

Chicago.—"The employers think that low wages have nothing to do with immorality among women; the women of the city say it has everything to do with it."

That was the way State Senator Nels Juul summed up testimony before the state senate vice investigation committee at which some of the greatest employers of female labor in the city and half a dozen women from the underworld were witnesses.

It developed that practically all the women employed in the retail stores live at home and much time was consumed in endeavoring to learn the proper living wage for employes so situated. Witnesses took the position that employing erand girls and other unskilled help, classed as "juvenile," the employer is under no obligation to pay a living" wage. They assume that the girl so employed is entitled to her living at the expense of her parents and that what she earns merely helps the family fund.

The committee and particularly Senator Juul, insisted that the other members of a working girl's home earn no more than enough to support themselves, even if they do co-operate, and that if each one of such a family earned less than a living wage the whole family suffered and the employer paying wages too low was shirking his responsibility.

Mandel and Rosenwald expressed the opinion that a girl's character and her environment, and they laid stress on the latter, shaped her life. Wages had little to do with it.

TWO WOMEN SAVED FROM OPERATIONS

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—Their Own Stories Here Told.

Beatrice, Neb.—"Just after my marriage my left side began to pain me and the pain got so severe at times that I suffered terribly with it. I visited three doctors and each one wanted to operate on me but I would not consent to an operation. I heard of the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was doing for others and I used several bottles of it with the result that I haven't been bothered with my side since then. I am in good health and I have two little girls."—Mrs. R. B. CHILD, Beatrice, Neb.

The Other Case.

Cary, Maine.—"I feel it a duty I owe to all suffering women to tell what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. One year ago I found myself a terrible sufferer. I had pains in both sides and such a soreness I could scarcely straighten up at times. My back ached, I had no appetite and was so nervous I could not sleep, then I would be so tired mornings that I could scarcely get around. It seemed almost impossible to move or do a bit of work and I thought I never would be any better until I submitted to an operation, but my husband thought I had better write to you and I did so, stating my symptoms. I commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and soon felt like a new woman. I had no pains, slept well, had good appetite and could do almost all my own work for a family of four. I shall always feel that I owe my good health to your Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. HAYWARD SOWERS, Cary, Maine.

RECALLS LITERARY MYSTERY

Rev. Mr. Wolfe, Author of "Burial of Sir John Moore," Buried at Queenstown.

A literary mystery of a hundred years ago is recalled by the special centenary number, recently issued, of the Newry Telegraph, an an Ulster tri-weekly. In its pages April 19, 1817, under the simple head of "Poetry," appeared what Byron called "the most perfect ode in the language"—"The Burial of Sir John Moore." Byron or Campbell or any of the others to whom this poem was variously ascribed would doubtless have been proud to claim it. But the author was the obscure curate of Ballyclog, in Tyronne, Rev. Charles Wolfe, and the fame of the piece was but a posthumous fame for him. Not until his death, of consumption, in 1823, at the early age of thirty-two, did the authorship become known to the world. And Wolfe, who wrote much other verse of merit, is remembered only by that one poem which sprang from the columns of a provincial newspaper to universal recognition in the big world of letters.—London Chronicle.

HER PUNISHMENT VERY SEVERE

Mrs. Chappell Says That Her Punishment for Five Years Was More than Anyone Could Ever Tell.

Mt. Airy, N. C.—In a letter from this place, Mrs. Sarah M. Chappell says: "I suffered for about 5 years with womanly trouble, also stomach trouble, and my punishment was more than any one could ever tell.

Several doctors had treated me, and I had tried most every kind of medicine I could think of, but none did me any good.

I read one day about Cardui, the woman's tonic, and I decided to try it. I had not taken but about six bottles until I was almost cured. It did me more good than all the other medicines I had tried, put together.

My friends began asking me why I looked so well, and I told them about Cardui. Several are now taking it."

Are you a woman? Do you suffer from any of the ailments due to womanly trouble, such as sleeplessness, nervousness, weakness, and that everlastingly tired feeling?

If so, let us urge you to give Cardui a trial. You have everything to gain, if it helps you, and we feel confident it will help you, just as it has more than a million other women, in the past half century.

Begin taking Cardui today.

Those Perilous 'Buses.

The experts from the National Physical laboratory who have been asked to ascertain how far, if at all, the motor 'buses are endangering the stability of St. Paul's Cathedral, will have no simple task in apportioning to the 'buses their share in the tremors to which the cathedral is said to be subjected. But modern methods and measuring instruments are capable of some wonderful things.—Pall Mall Gazette.

WITH POTASH

TOBACCO

WITHOUT POTASH

No crop gives better returns for using the right kind of fertilizer than does tobacco.

POTASH

Both quantity and quality are improved by properly balanced fertilizers containing Potash in the form of Sulfate—Muriate and Kainit will not do. The amount of Sulfate of Potash should be from 200 to 250 pounds per acre. This would mean 1000 to 1250 pounds per acre of 4-5-10 goods.

Many so-called "tobacco fertilizers" are merely ordinary, general-purpose mixed goods, containing chlorides which injure the quality of the leaf. Insist on goods free from chlorides and containing 10 to 12 per cent. Potash, or supplement the manure with 300 to 400 pounds acid phosphate and 200 to 250 pounds Sulfate of Potash.

Write to us for prices of Potash Salts and for free book containing fertilizer formulas and directions.

The farmers are ploughing, the buds are bursting and the birds are singing in God-favored old Dixie land!

Mr. Wilson and the democratic administration have now been in harness with full control for ten days: their election was known four months previously and yet cotton hovers around the thirteen cent mark! Isn't that remarkable? Can anyone hereabouts explain it?

Mr. Wilson was inaugurated on March fourth; on March 10th, as soon as he could get his seat adjusted to his anatomy, he called for the resignation of the negro First Assistant Attorney General Lewis of Boston! That's going some! He (Lewis) was appointed by a republican administration; he (Lewis) was turned out by a democratic administration, and that without hesitation. Just think!

We are printing this week two opposite views on the road question. This is because in the beginning of the campaign we invited an open discussion and we propose to be fair in presenting both sides; however, we do not think it exactly fair to this paper for one person to write a communication setting forth his views, which he knows are diametically opposed to the views of the editor, and then having some one else sign that communication. Come out in the open, you are just as welcome under your own name as you would be under any other. What we are after is a full, free, fair and open discussion

PROF. PICKENS FOR COUNTY HIGH SCHOOL

Dear Mr. Wood:

I have found the people of Clanton and Chilton county to be a responsive people so far as I am concerned in my work, and I want to say a few words to them in regard to a County High School and ask their careful consideration.

As every one probably knows the legislature of Mr. Comer's administration appropriated $2,000 for a county high school in each county not having a State supported high school, college or university, and the present legislature increased the amount to $3,000 and gave every county the privilege of using said amount provided they would meet certain conditions.

The conditions are these: Each county in which the school is to be located must deed to the State five acres of land, construct a building to cost at least $10,000, and subject the school to state control. The local county board of education makes all nominations for teachers subject to the approval of the State board—and here I want to say that the State has never disapproved the county nomination when the man in charge had anything like given satisfaction.

Now, let us look at it as a business proposition. Suppose you say the town and county are not able to meet the financial requirements of the State. Let us see, $12,000 of bonds at 5 per cent would be $600, interest each year to pay; but in return we would receive over and above our present state appropriation $3,000, or a net gain of $24,00 each year. Again I have in school 40 pupils in the 8th, 9th and 10th grades. Those pupils paid $2.50 per month for five months which amounted to $500; and in addition to this the running expenses of the school we now have doing work only through the 7th grade, could be reduced another $500, which would make a total net gain of $3400 a year.

Some one else can add to the foregoing amount by counting up what it has cost him to keep his children off from home in school where they have been doing high school work.

Now, patrons, think over these facts and talk them among yourselves, and if you find anything wrong with them, come to me and I think we can fix them up.

Yours very truly,
J. J. Pickens.

WOMAN A CHRONICALLY CONSTIPATED ANIMAL"

French Scientist Makes Rude But True Statement.

It is a well-known fact that women are very much more subject to constipation than men. This is especially unfortunate for them, because women's internal organs are so much more delicate than men's. For this reason they should exercise the greatest care in selecting the laxatives they take.

In woman, neglected constipation frequently leads to many other more serious troubles which often wreck their entire health and happiness. No woman should ever allow herself to go for a single day without a good, healthy bowel movement. Sooner or later a terrible price must be paid for such neglect.

BEARLAX, liquid laxative, is especially adapted to the chronic, stubborn constipation with which the majority of women are afflicted. The taste of BEARLAX is pleasant to even delicate palates. It does not make you sick, its action is mild and gentle without griping or straining, and its after effects are pleasant, healthful and strengthening. A few doses of BEARLAX will put your liver and bowels in such a natural, active condition as to make you feel better than you have in months.

Price 60 cents—money refunded if BEARLAX does not please you. On sale everywhere.

Microbes in Your Scalp

Authorities say that a microbe causes baldness. If you are losing hair try our remedy at our risk.

Professor Unna, of Germany, and Dr. Sabouraud, the great French Dermatologist, claim that a microbe causes baldness, and their theory has been verified by eminent scientists. This microbe destroys the hair follicles, in time causing the scalp pores to close and the scalp to become shiny. Then, it is believed nothing will revive the growth. If treated before this occurs, baldness may be overcome.

We know of nothing that has given such universal satisfaction in treating the scalp and hair as Rexall "93" Hair Tonic. It has been designed after long study to overcome the cause of falling hair as discovered by Prof. Unna, Dr. Sabouraud and other scalp and hair specialists, and we believe it will do more than anything else can to remove dandruff and stop falling hair, and if any human agency can promote a new growth of hair it will do that, too.

We want you to make us prove it. We will pay for a month's treatment of Rexall "93" Hair Tonic used during a trial, if you will use it according to directions, and are not thoroughly satisfied. When we will do this, you surely should not hesitate to at least try it.

Start the treatment today. Your mere request will get your money back if you want it. Two sizes: 50c and $1.00.

You can buy Rexall "93" Hair Tonic in this community only at our store.

Unfair Criticism of L. & N.

The assertion has been made that the L. & N. is seeking to dictate the politics of the State of Alabama; that certain statements contained in some of the L. & N. advertisements are "subtle, misleading and misrepresent the facts."

The L. & N. is not a political organization. It does not seek to dictate the politics of the State of Alabama. On the contrary, it is going direct to the people through the columns of the best advertising mediums in the State in an effort to prevent the L. & N. being made a fictitious issue in the politics of the State.

It as an easy matter, although morally wrong, to assert that L. & N. advertisements are misleading and misrepresent the facts, but it is another matter to present evidence to bear out the assertion. The L. & N. has never permitted an advertisement to appear over its name unless the statements contained in the advertisement were abundantly borne out by the facts as of official record in the State Capitol in Montgomery.

Those who assert that L. & N. advertisements misrepresent the facts owe it to the L. & N. and to their readers, who are the people of Alabama, to show wherein the facts are misrepresented. Until the statements contained in our advertisements are shown to misrepresent the facts, a spirit of fairness should influence the people to accept those statements as facts.

The L. & N. would not misstate the facts, and could not afford, as a matter of sound business policy, to give the widest possible publicity to "subtle, misleading statements which misrepresent the facts."

We hardly think there is anything subtle or misleading in this advertisement.

Mr. John Stanfield and son, Wilmer, returned Monday morning from their trip to Washington and other points. Mr. Stanfield reports that besides seeing the big elephant he also took in many places of interest, not the least of which was the Naval Academy at Annapolis.

Mr. J. E. Robinson, Jr., is treading on thin air just at this writing; the beam of gladness that sparkles in his eye makes one enjoy his company more than ever. Know the reason? Another future president wandered into his home last Sunday.

Miss Lucile Gross left for her home in Childersburg Saturday morning. Sunday she joined a party of friends on a visit to Sylacauga, where they met the Clanton party and enjoyed the day with relatives.

If one of Higgins, the Jeweler's "Big Ben" Alarm Clocks don't wake you, "just lie on."

When your head begins to hurt around the eyes or near the back of your neck, give Dr. J. V. Higgins, the eye man a thought, please. I stop other people's head from aching, why not yours?

Mr. Scott Chesnutt went up to Jemison Monday night (on the train, and not in an automobile) to attend a party given by one of his friends. He reports having had a most delightful time.

Dr. J. J. DuBose of Stanton was in Clanton Monday on business.

The openings yesterday were well attended; the streets were thronged with beautiful women taking in the beauties on display at the millinery stores.

If you don't want to buy anything Dr. Higgins has just at present, and know of some one that does, you send them to Dr. Higgins to buy and Dr. Higgins will save the coupons for you. See?

Prof. Pickens, Mr. Frank Thomas and Miss Anne Stallworth spent Sunday in Sylacauga as the guests of Dr. and Mrs. M. H. Jackson. They returned in the afternoon.

The street fair people left Sunday morning for Columbiana; while here, when open, they did a fairly good business.

The mysterious firing Monday night which created so much excitement, it has since been ascertained, was done by Mr. J. Q. Wade, shooting at a burglar. Several times he has heard footsteps upon his rear verandah and on the next morning would miss things from his place. Monday night the noises were repeated and Mr. Wade took a stray shot or two at the prowler.

A new entry has been made in the contest this week—Mrs. Julia Kendrick of Verbena, who starts off with a most flattering vote. She has many friends throughout the county who are assisting her and she will doubtless win a handsome prize or make some young lady hustle to outstrip her.

MISS SARTOR'S RECITAL

Friday evening at the academy Miss Elna Sartor and her music class entertained a large number of her patrons and friends by the rendition of a most beautiful musical program. Each number, as it was rendered, seemed the piece de resistence, yet as it was followed by another the preceding number had to retire in favor of its successor.

The entire program reflected great credit upon Miss Sartor for the careful and excellent training of her pupils; each pupil having acquitted herself in a most pleasing manner.

The entertainment was closed with a tableaux in which little Miss Alice Stanfield took the leading role in singing "The Sweetest Song of All."

The pleasure derived by the large audience on this occasion will not be soon forgotten by those who were fortunate enough to be present.

BACON DEFEATED BY SENATOR CLARK

ARKANSAS SENATOR SELECTED BY DEMOCRATS AS PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE OF SENATE.

OHTHER OFFICERS ELECTED

Georgian's Friends Felt He Had Not Been Fairly Treated—Tillman Utters a Warning.

Washingon. — Democratic senators succeeded in agreeing upon candidates to fill only three of the offices of that body. These were:

Senator James P. Clarke of Arkansas to succeed Senator Gallinger of New Hampshire, Republican, as president pro tempore of the senate.

The Rev. E. J. Pettyman of the District of Columbia to succeed the Rev. U. G. B. Pierce as chaplain.

Charles P. Higgins, a real estate dealer of St. Louis, to succeed E. Livingstone Cornelius as sergeant-at-arms.

Senator Clarke was elected by a vote of 27 to 14 over Senator Augustus O. Bacon of Georgia, who alternated with Senator Gallinger in the office of president pro tempore throughout the last session and whose election had been considered practically a certainty since the Democrats gained control.

Senator Clarke was placed in nomination by Senator O'Gorman of New York and Senator Bacon by his colleague, Senator Hoke Smith of Georgia. Both were eulogized by their champions. Other senators seconded the nominations, mentioning the fact that Mr. Clarke's term would expire in the next two years, his supporters made an appeal for his election on the ground that it would be of assistance to him in his race for re-election! They also urged the fact that Senator Bacon was in line for the chairmanship of the committee on foreign relations as a reason why he should not be elected to preside over the senate.

The result of the election caused considerable stir, the friends of Senator Bacon feeling that he had not been fairly treated.

Senator Smith tendered his resignation as a member of the steering committee, to which he had been appointed. Mr. Smith, who had been especially zealous in his support of Senator Bacon, said he felt his colleague had been made to suffer on his account. He was induced to withdraw the resignation later, but not until there had been a general discussion of the affair.

Senator Bacon himself said he had been unprepared for the defeat, because he had not known there was any other applicant for the office. He added that if he had been informed that any other person desired the honor he would have withdrawn from the race.

Senator Tillman spoke at some length, charging Mr. Bacon's defeat to the intemperate desire on the part of some senators to do away with the established customs of the senate by retiring the older men in the interest of the new. He found in Senator Bacon the first victim of the modern crusade and uttered a warning against proceeding too far along this line.

U. S. TESTS FRIEDMANN CURE

Seven Patients Treated in the Presence of Government Surgeons.

New York.—In a thirty-minute clinic, Dr. Friederich F. Friedmann's vaccine was given a test in the presence of United States government officials. The seven cases treated are to remain under government inspection, and upon the development will depend the official report. It was announced that Doctor Friedmann had furnished the Federal representatives with specimens of his bacilli culture, and that clinical observations would continue to be made by them.

Gathered at Mount Sinai hospital, where the test took place, was a party of thirty or more surgeons of the city and the Federal officials

To Light Laboring Man's Load.

Washington.—Legislation affecting labor in order to lighten the load of those "men and women upon whom the dead weight and burden of it all has fallen pitilessly the years through" is expected to be one of the principal aims of the new administration, and focusses eyes on the new department of labor, headed by William B. Wilson. The new head of this department is an extreme labor unionist, and is supposed to have been the personal choice of Samuel Gompers.

Over 100 Passengers Saved.

Key West, Fla.—One hundred and sixteen passengers, all of which were immigrants, bound from Spain to Cuba, with the exception of two first class passengers, were rescued from the British steamer Lugano, ashore on the Ajax reef off the Florida coast, by the tug Rescue. The passengers, muttering thanks in their language for their delivery from the peril that confronted them, were landed here by the tug. All of the passengers have been housed in buildings alongs the docks.

SUBSTITUTE FOR SLEEP?

32,000 TURKS CAPTURED

TURKISH FORTRESS, KEY TO THE POSSESSION OF EPIRUS PROVINCE, HAS BEEN CAPTURED.

For Hours Preceding Surrender the Greek Batteries Poured Deluge of Shells on the Fortress.

Athens, Greece.—The Turkish fortress of Janina, key to the possession of Epirus province, with its garrison of 32,000 men, surrendered to the Greek army, after a defense which stands out as one of the most brilliant episodes of the Balkan war.

The surrender was preceded by a fierce bombardment continuing two days and nights. Every available gun, including heavy howitzers by the Servian artillery, was brought to bear on the forts defending the beleaguered city.

Thirty thousand shells were fired by the Greek guns during the first days' cannonade. Gradually the Turks' batteries at Bizani, Manoliara, Sakni and elsewhere were silenced.

The Greek commanders, by a feint, led the Turks to believe that their attack would be made from the right. As soon as the attention of the defenders had been distracted, the Greeks hurled large bodies of infantry on to the Turkish left. The Ottoman troops, utterly surprised, fell back in disorder.

Batteries on the heights of Bizani, the mainstay of the defense, had been unable to stand the pelting of the shells and were reduced to complete silence.

The Greeks pushed their forward movement and occupied the Turkish batteries on the Sakni and Elas hills, capturing all the guns and 110 artillerymen. Then the Greek battalions gradually deployed on to the plain in front of the city itself.

The Turkish flight immediately became general. Whole detachments succumbed to panic and joined in a mad rush for the city.

Wild enthusiasm reigned in the streets of Athens on announcement of the news. All houses were decorated with flags.

The Greek advance on Janina began late in October. The Turks retired rapidly before their opponents and operations round the fortress opened about the beginning of December. The attack continued with varying success, even during the period of the armistice, to which the Greeks never formally agreed.

Clark Continues as Speaker.

Washington.—Speaker Clark was renominated; Representative Underwood of Alabama again chosen chairman of the ways and means committee, the entire Democratic personnel of that tariff-making body named and all the house officers renominated at a harmonious six-hour caucus of the Democrats of the house of the Sixty-third congress. The caucus took place in the house chamber, and 270 of the 290 house Democrats were present.

Insults to Women to Be Investigated.

Washington.—Aroused over the failure of the Washington police department to maintain order during the progress of the suffrage pageant of March 3, the senate began an investigation to place the responsibility for lack of protection for the women marchers. The investigation is a result of a joint resolution of congress directing the police department to furnish protection to the suffragists. Senators Jones, Dillingham and Pomerene are named as an investigation committee.

Night Work Forbidden Children.

Raleigh, N. C.—The North Carolina senate passed a bill prohibiting the employment of children under sixteen years of age in night factory work. Inspection by county superintendents of education is provided for, and severe penalties are attached for false representation by parents or mill operators. The house recently passed a bill that set fourteen years as the minimum age for day work, 16 years for males at night and excluding women altogether. Mill men fought it desperately.

TAFT RESTING IN GEORGIA

FORMER CHIEF EXECUTIVE NOW SPENDING THREE WEEKS IN AUGUSTA, GA.

Inauguration Crowd Did Not Forget Retiring President and He Was Smiling to the Last.

Washington. — William Howard Taft, public servant, since he was 21, said farewell to public life and became a citizen of the republic that he has served over the seas and throughout the world for so many years that he has almost forgotten when he enlisted.

His goodbye was a smile. A handshake for the members of his cabinet; a courtly bow to the women friends who braved the inauguration discomforts to bid him and Mrs. Taft God-speed in the Union station; a wave of the hand and another smile for the people who stood in the train shed and watched his train pull slowly out for the South.

The last that Washington saw of the twenty-seventh president was the dim outline of a big smiling figure in a frock coat, with hair a little awry, standing on the rear platform of a private car as it was swallowed in the curling smoke of the tunnel that leads under the city to Dixie. His last glimpse of the city where four years ago he became chief executive and now a private citizen by the people's will was when he looked from the platform of his car across the broad Potomac to where the Washington monument lifted its gray, pointed peek to the gray sky.

He is now in Georgia to rest and play as the guest of the city of Augusta for three weeks. On March 27 he plans to go north again to New Haven to settle down under the elms of Yale to the peace and quiet of life as professor of law. He left with no bitterness in his heart, he told friends, but only with thankfulness that he had been given the opportunity to serve.

Absorbed at if was in the inauguration pageant, Washington did not forget the man, the retiring president. Although he was hurried in one of the white house cars from the back of the white house down through the mall and over back streets, hundreds of those on the sidewalks who recognized him cheered him lustily. He was forced to break through the line of march in front of the capitol to get to the Union station

Prohibition Wearies Vermont Towns.

Montpelier, Vt.—A marked increase in the license vote was one of the features of the elections in the cities and towns of Vermont. Seven towns changed from no-license to license, while only two places, including the small city of Vergennes went from "wet" to "dry." Early returns indicated that the constitutional amendments to change the date of state elections from September to November had carried.

Confederate Flag Designer Dead.

Raleigh, N. C.—Capt. Orren Randolph Smith, designer of the Confederate flag, died at the home of his daughter, Miss Jessica Smith, in Henderson, N. C. Captain Smith, 82 years old, had been blessed with good health. He had been forced at times to defend his claim as the designer of the stars and bars, the ensign of the Confederate republic, but he appears to have won a historical consensus that he deserved that honor.

Stolen Diamonds Are Found.

Huntsville, Ala.—The diamonds belonging to Mrs. R. E. Smith that were stolen from the home of Mayor Smith several nights ago have been recovered from a crack in the cell of Bob Barrett, one of the suspected thieves in the city prison. Barrett had refused to tell where he had the jewels. He was removed from the cell and a close search was made. All the diamonds, valued at about $2,000, were found.

WHO IS WHO IN WILSON'S CABINET

Brief Sketches of Advisers of the New President.

BRYAN'S CAREER EPITOMIZED

McAdoo a Famous Tunnel Builder, McReynolds Skilled in "Trust Busting," Garrison Man of Unusual Executive Ability, Others Able.

The following names compose the cabinet of the first democratic President in 16 years:

Secretary of State—William Jennings Bryan of Nebraska.

WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN,
Secretary of State.

Secretary of the Treasury—William G. McAdoo of New York.

Secretary of War—Lindley M. Garrison of New Jersey.

Attorney General—James C. McReynolds of Tennessee.

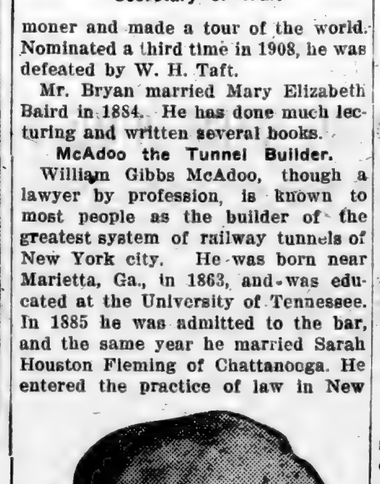
Postmaster General—Albert Burleson of Texas.

Secretary of the Navy—Josephus Daniels of North Carolina.

Secretary of the Interior—Franklin K. Lane of California.

Secretary of Agriculture—David A. Houston of Missouri.

Secretary of Commerce—William C. Redfield of New York.



Secretary of Labor—William B. Wilson of Pennsylvania.

With one or two exceptions, these men have attained considerable national fame, and all of them are admittedly able.

Mr. Bryan's Career.

William J. Bryan has been so much in the public eye for a good many years that a sketch of his career seems almost superfluous. Born in Salem, Ill., in 1860, he was graduated with highest honors from Illinois college at Jacksonville in 1881 and received his master's degree in 1884. In 1883 he was given the degree of LL. B. by Union College of Law, Chicago. After practicing law in Jacksonville and Lincoln, Neb., he served as a member of the 52nd and 53rd congresses. Having written the "silver plank" for the democratic national convention of 1896, and made a sensational speech, he was nominated for President, but was defeated by William McKinley. Nominated again in 1900, he was again beaten by McKinley, and then established the Commoner and made a tour of the world. Nominated a third time in 1908, he was defeated by W. H. Taft.

Mr. Bryan married Mary Elizabeth Baird in 1884. He has done much lecturing and written several books.

LINDLEY M. GARRISON,
Secretary of War.

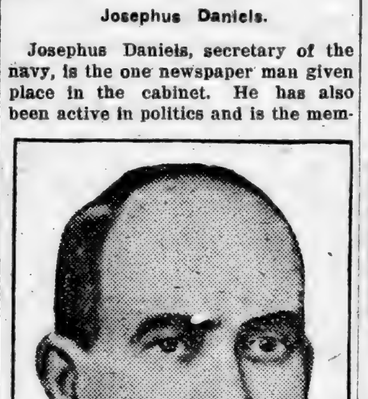
McAdoo the Tunnel Builder.

William Gibbs McAdoo, though a lawyer by profession, is known to most people as the builder of the greatest system of railway tunnels of New York city. He was born near Marietta, Ga., in 1863, and was educated at the University of Tennessee. In 1885 he was admitted to the bar, and the same year he married Sarah Houston Fleming of Chattanooga. He entered the practice of law in New York in 1892, and since 1901 has been interested chiefly in tunnel construction there. He is president of the Hudson and Manhattan Railroad company.

JAMES C. M'REYNOLDS,
Attorney General.

Lindley M. Garrison.

The selection of Lindley M. Garrison, vice-chancellor of New Jersey, to be secretary of war is in line with President Wilson's idea that the holder of that position should be a man of unusual executive ability. He is a close friend of Mr. Wilson. Mr. Garrison was born in Camden, N. J., November 28, 1864. He is a son of Rev. Joseph F. Garrison, an Episcopal clergyman. He is a brother of Justice Charles G. Garrison of the New Jersey supreme court.



WILLIAM G. M'ADOO,
Secretary of the Treasury.

James C. McReynolds.

In picking James Clark McReynolds for the position of attorney general, Mr. Wilson selected a man who has had a lot of experience as a "trust buster." He is a native of Elkton, Ky., where he was born in 1862, and a graduate of Vanderbilt university and the law school of the University of Virginia. From 1903 to 1907 he was assistant attorney general of the United States. He then returned to private practice, but has been retained as special assistant to the attorney general in matters relating to the enforcement of the anti-trust laws. Mr. McReynolds is unmarried.

Albert S. Burleson.

Albert Sidney Burleson already has served seven consecutive terms as congressman from the Tenth district of Texas and was re-elected to the Sixty-third congress. He was born in San Marcos, Hex., in 1863, was educated at the Agricultural and Mechanical College of Texas, Baylor university and the University of Texas, and was admitted to the bar in 1884. He was assistant city attorney of Austin for several years before going to congress. Mrs. Burleson was Miss Adele Stein of Austin.

JOSEPHUS DANIELS,
Secretary of the Navy.

Josephus Daniels.

Josephus Daniels, secretary of the navy, is the one newspaper man given place in the cabinet. He has also been active in politics and is the member of the democratic national committee from North Carolina. Mr. Daniels was born in 1862 at Washington, N. C., and began his newspaper career at the age of eighteen as editor of the Wilson (N. C.) Advance. In 1885 he became editor of the Raleigh State Chronicle, which nine years later he consolidated with the North Carolinian and the News and Observer.

DAVID A. HOUSTON,
Secretary of Agriculture.

Franklin K. Lane.

Franklin Knight Lane has been a member of the interstate commerce commission since 1905, and this experience is believed to have fitted him for the executive and judicial tasks in administering the public land laws of the country. Born in Prince Edward Island in 1864, he received his education in the University of California and became a lawyer in San Francisco. Prior to his designation to the commission he was a democratic political leader in California. He was democratic candidate for governor, being defeated by a narrow margin.

David F. Houston.

In David Franklin Houston, chancellor of Washington university, St. Louis, Wilson has a secretary of agriculture who is familiar with the processes of advancing scientific farming and allied questions in this country. Mr. Houston was president of the Texas Agricultural and Mechanical college for a number of years, and has taught in several other educational institutions. He was born in Monroe, N. C., in 1866, was educated at South Carolina college and Harvard, and received the degree of LL. D. from Tulane and the University of Wisconsin. He married Miss Helen Beall of Austin, Tex., in 1895.

WILLIAM C. REDFIELD,
Secretary of Commerce.

William C. Redfield.

William Cox Redfield has just completed his first term as congressman, but he has been prominent in the politics of New York for a good many years. In 1902 and 1903 he was commissioner of public works for the Borough of Brooklyn. In private life he is a manufacturer of ventilating and heating apparatus and engines. Mr. Redfield was born in 1858 in Albany, N. Y.

WILLIAM B. WILSON,
Secretary of Labor.

William B. Wilson.

Pennsylvania's representative in the cabinet is William Bauchop Wilson of Blossburg, named for secretary of labor. He was born in Blantyre, Scotland, in 1862, and came to this country in 1870. The next year he began working in the Pennsylvania coal mines, and from early manhood he has been actively interested in trade union affairs. For eight years he was international secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers of America. He is now engaged in farming.

FRANKLIN K. LANE,
Secretary of the Interior.

Best She Could Do.

"Why don't you want to let me hold your hand?"

"What good would it do you to hold my hand?"

"It would make me glad and give me courage, perhaps, to—to say something that I—that I—er—"

"There, please hold both of my hands."

Sometimes We Forget.

Aristotle said that a city is a place where men live a gourmet life for a noble end.

Explained.

"What is this civil service business that they are always talking about?" asked the Boob. "What good does it do?"

"It's like this," replied the Cheerful Idiot. "If you have a job and you are not under civil service, they can fire you any time they want to. But if they have a job under civil service they can't fire you unless they want to."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

The only way to keep a man in is to let him go.

Left the Dean Chuckling.

The dean of the law department was very busy and rather cross. The telephone rang.

"Well, what is it?" he snapped.

"Is that the city gas works?" said a woman's soft voice.

"No, madam," roared the dean; "this is the University Law Department."

"Ah," she answered, in the sweetest of tones, "I didn't mind it so far, after all, did I?"

And the weary dean chuckled all afternoon.

Included Them All.

A pair of mules, driven by a lout, exasperated a crossing copper. The driver did not understand the traffic signals and soon was causing a congestion. The copper walked up, grabbed a bridle and exclaimed: "Come on here, the three of yez!"

Changed Course of Study.

"What has become of Miss Snooke? She was going in for theosophy when I saw her last."

"She married a restaurant man, and is studying dishpantheism."—Judge.

CONSTIPATION

MUNYON'S PAW-PAW PILLS

Munyon's Paw-Paw Pills are unlike all other laxatives or cathartics. They coax the liver into activity by gentle methods, they do not scour; they do not gripe; they do not weaken; but they do start all the secretions of the liver and stomach in a way that soon puts these organs in a healthy condition and corrects constipation. Munyon's Paw-Paw Pills are a tonic to the stomach, liver and nerves. They invigorate instead of weaken; they enrich the blood instead of impoverishing it; they enable the stomach to get all the nourishment from food that is put into it. Price 25 cents. All Druggists.

Cheap Way to Mount Pictures.

To mount pictures inexpensively for the nursery or children's bedrooms, cut all the white margin off the picture, then get some thin, smooth boards 1½ inch larger all round than the picture; stain the boards with dark oak stain about two inches round the edge; varnish them, then paste the picture on the board, leaving an even edge of the stained wood all round; hang on the walls in the usual way.

Neglected Opportunity.

Mrs. Crabshaw—I notice that a pound of Swiss cheese seems to go further than a pound of any other kind.

Mr. Crabshaw—That's probably because the storekeepers haven't yet hit on a plan to weigh in the holes.—Puck.

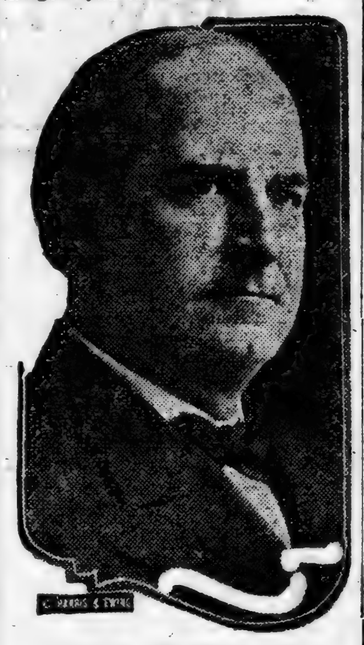
for breakfast and again at the evening meal opens and closes the day with a dash of sunshine.

Toasties are bits of hard, white Indian Corn, first carefully cooked, then rolled thin and crinkly, and toasted to a delicate, appetizing brown.

Not a hand touches the food in manufacture, and it is ready to serve direct from the package—to be eaten with cream or milk—and sugar, if desired.

Post Toasties taste deliciously good and are richly nourishing

WHO IS WHO IN WILSON'S CABINET



Brief Sketches of Advisers of the New President.

BRYAN'S CAREER EPITOMIZED

McAdoo a Famous Tunnel Builder, McReynolds Skilled in "Trust Busting," Garrison Man of Unusual Executive Ability, Others Able.

The following names compose the cabinet of the first democratic President in 16 years:

Secretary of State—William Jennings Bryan of Nebraska.

WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN,
Secretary of State.

Secretary of the Treasury—William G. McAdoo of New York.

Secretary of War—Lindley M. Garrison of New Jersey.

Attorney General—James C. McReynolds of Tennessee.

Postmaster General—Albert Burleson of Texas.

Secretary of the Navy—Josephus Daniels of North Carolina.

Secretary of the Interior—Franklin K. Lane of California.

Secretary of Agriculture—David A. Houston of Missouri.

Secretary of Commerce—William C. Redfield of New York.

Secretary of Labor—William E. Wilson of Pennsylvania.

With one or two exceptions, these men have attained considerable national fame, and all of them are admittedly able.

Mr. Bryan's Career.

William J. Bryan has been so much in the public eye for a good many years that a sketch of his career seems almost superfluous. Born in Salem, Ill., in 1860, he was graduated with highest honors from Illinois college at Jacksonville in 1881 and received his master's degree in 1884. In 1883 he was given the degree of LL. B. by Union College of Law, Chicago. After practicing law in Jacksonville and Lincoln, Neb., he served as a member of the 52nd and 53rd congresses. Having written the "silver plank" for the democratic national convention of 1896, and made a sensational speech, he was nominated for President, but was defeated by William McKinley. Nominated again in 1900, he was again beaten by McKinley, and then established the Commoner and made a tour of the world. Nominated a third time in 1908, he was defeated by W. H. Taft.

LINDLEY M. GARRISON,
Secretary of War.

Mr. Bryan married Mary Elizabeth Baird in 1884. He has done much lecturing and written several books.

McAdoo the Tunnel Builder.

William Gibbs McAdoo, though a lawyer by profession, is known to most people as the builder of the greatest system of railway tunnels of New York city. He was born near Marietta, Ga., in 1863, and was educated at the University of Tennessee. In 1885 he was admitted to the bar, and the same year he married Sarah Houston Fleming of Chattanooga. He entered the practice of law in New York in 1892, and since 1901 has been interested chiefly in tunnel construction there. He is president of the Hudson and Manhattan Railroad company.

JAMES C. M'REYNOLDS,
Attorney General.

Lindley M. Garrison.

The selection of Lindley M. Garrison, vice-chancellor of New Jersey, to be secretary of war is in line with President Wilson's idea that the holder of that position should be a man of unusual executive ability. He is a close friend of Mr. Wilson. Mr. Garrison was born in Camden, N. J., November 28, 1864. He is a son of Rev. Joseph F. Garrison, an Episcopal clergyman. He is a brother of Justice Charles G. Garrison of the New Jersey supreme court.

James C. McReynolds.

In picking James Clark McReynolds for the position of attorney general, Mr. Wilson selected a man who has had a lot of experience as a "trust buster." He is a native of Elkton, Ky., where he was born in 1862, and a graduate of Vanderbilt university and the law school of the University of Virginia. From 1903 to 1907 he was assistant attorney general of the United States. He then returned to private practice, but has been retained as special assistant to the attorney general in matters relating to the enforcement of the anti-trust laws. Mr. McReynolds is unmarried.

Albert S. Burleson.

Albert Sidney Burleson already has served seven consecutive terms as congressman from the Tenth district of Texas and was re-elected to the Sixty-third congress. He was born in San Marcos, Hex., in 1863, was educated at the Agricultural and Mechanical College of Texas, Baylor university and the University of Texas, and was admitted to the bar in 1884. He was assistant city attorney of Austin for several years before going to congress. Mrs. Burleson was Miss Adele Stein of Austin.

JOSEPHUS DANIELS,
Secretary of the Navy.

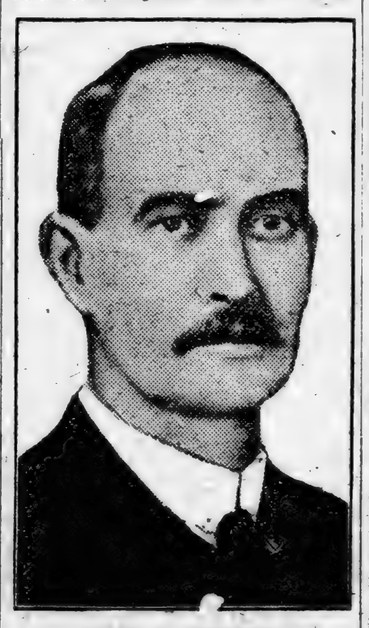
Josephus Daniels.

Josephus Daniels, secretary of the navy, is the one newspaper man given place in the cabinet. He has also been active in politics and is the member of the democratic national committee from North Carolina. Mr. Daniels was born in 1862 at Washington, N. C., and began his newspaper career at the age of eighteen as editor of the Wilson (N. C.) Advance. In 1885 he became editor of the Raleigh State Chronicle, which nine years later he consolidated with the North Carolinian and the News and Observer.

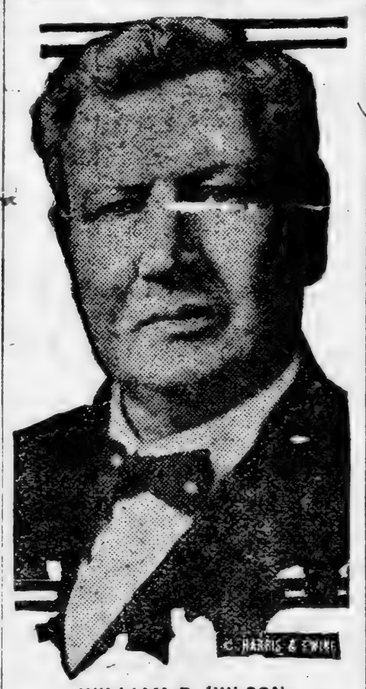
Franklin K. Lane.

Franklin Knight Lane has been a member of the interstate commerce commission since 1905, and this experience is believed to have fitted him for the executive and judicial tasks in administering the public land laws of the country. Born in Prince Edward Island in 1864, he received his education in the University of California and became a lawyer in San Francisco. Prior to his designation to the commission he was a democratic political leader in California. He was democratic candidate for governor, being defeated by a narrow margin.

David F. Houston.



In David Franklin Houston, chancellor of Washington university, St. Louis, Wilson has a secretary of agriculture who is familiar with the processes of advancing scientific farming and allied questions in this country. Mr. Houston was president of the Texas Agricultural and Mechanical college for a number of years, and has taught in several other educational institutions. He was born in Monroe, N. C., in 1866, was educated at South Carolina college and Harvard, and received the degree of LL. D. from Tulane and the University of Wisconsin. He married Miss Helen Beall of Austin, Tex., in 1895.



WILLIAM C. REDFIELD,
Secretary of Commerce.

William C. Redfield.

William Cox Redfield has just completed his first term as congressman, but he has been prominent in the politics of New York for a good many years. In 1902 and 1903 he was commissioner of public works for the Borough of Brooklyn. In private life he is a manufacturer of ventilating and heating apparatus and engines. Mr. Redfield was born in 1858 in Albany, N. Y.

DAVID A. HOUSTON,
Secretary of Agriculture.

WILLIAM B. WILSON,
Secretary of Labor.

William B. Wilson.

Pennsylvania's representative in the cabinet is William Bauchop Wilson of Blossburg, named for secretary of labor. He was born in Blantyre, Scotland, in 1862, and came to this country in 1870. The next year he began working in the Pennsylvania coal mines, and from early manhood he has been actively interested in trade union affairs. For eight years he was international secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers of America. He is now engaged in farming.

FRANKLIN K. LANE,
Secretary of the Interior.

WILLIAM G. M'ADOO,
Secretary of the Treasury.

ALBERT BURLESON,
Postmaster General.

HER BITTER EXPERIENCE.

Scott Chesnutt, as is per- well known, is an ardent f automobile rides; he loves o much that he is willing to reeks and do similar stunts for the sake of riding a few in an auto. That's neither there, however, for it's raining for Scott; in a few ore he appears upon the d as arbiter for the mighty ayers and it is necessary have his Spring training do the ball players them- it rounds him out nicely ts muscle upon his other- an bones. Not forgetful of ntevallo trip, he essayed with Dr. Johnson last Sat-

The good doctor had a in the country some five miles and requested, or invited, Scott to accompany hich invitation the aforesaid esnutt gracefully and grate- ccepted.

as the sun was casting fur- nces at the western hills, oozied into town, his shoes off color, his coat dabbed e mud of the road and his usually immaculate and ely arranged, turned some- trimbo; there was no beam oy contentment upon his ntenance, no chirp of joy musical voice—no! Scott in the collar, worn to a and disgusted with things y.

questioned as to the cause of his discontentment, he replied: "It's like this: You see I was invited last week to go to Montèvallo with a few friends and went: they dumped me in the creek, got my socks wet and required me to remain away from home all night—a thing I never do except under the most extraordinary circumstances; feeling that it was not altogether the fault of my host on that occasion, I was disposed to overlook the misfortune—seeing I lost nothing but a pair of socks while my host lost his car, ruined a suit of clothes, but this thing has gone too far—entirely too far; I'm not here to be made the butt of ridicule or to furnish amusement for autoists; why, do you know, I was asked to take a ride with a good professional friend of mine; out of courtesy I accepted his invitation and after taking me five miles out into the country over roads that a rabbit couldn't travel he announced that he would have to remain until after midnight, perhaps! Now what do you think of that? Scott out five miles in the mud section? Scott remaining away till midnight listening to the owls hoot? Not on your life! No Siree; its paved streets and incandescent lights for me; I'm a dinizen of the city. The whirr and burr of the city enchants me; the stilly stillness of the rural regions cause me to have nightmares in the day time. It was only a matter of a few miles over mud roads. What of that, Scott must be in the city e'er the lights of night came out; I inquired the way; "west, sou-west," and west, sou-west went Scott. I'm here you see, together with an accummulation of mud, and the first cuss that says automobile to me again is going to need the skillful care of a competent surgeon; I'll biff him over the coco with this shillelah. Yes, I will. I'm not going for any more ride walks; you take it from me; I'll either ride or I'll walk, but I'm no combination machine any longer."

MR. COX FOR BONDS

Clanton, Ala., March 13, 1913

Editor Press:—I don't want our people to do anything wrong, but I must say that I think we must do something for our roads.

If we can build them without bonds I think we should do so, but by all means let's have the good roads. I have served my time as a hand on the road but still help the boys and am willing to help more. I am not blaming the boys for not keeping up the roads, and I know that they can't make good roads without more help than they have had.

I have lost more than $100.00 since Christmas on account of the condition of the roads; had to refuse an offer of $5.00 and $6.00 per day simply because I could not afford to pull my mules over the road.

We have tried everything else and have no good roads, so as far as I am concerned I favor bonds to build the main and most important roads.

Let's work the roads and build them good or have bonds to do it with.

Respectfully,
J. W. Cox.

HOBSON COMING!

MERRIMAC HERO TO ADDRESS ACADEMY STUDENTS.

SHOULD BE MADE A GALA-DAY

Superintendent Pickens of Clanton Academy, does not believe in fishing with a pin hook or even a small minnow line; he goes out into deep water, and requires a large hook and a line large enough to hold tarpoon, sea-turtle and other large game.

Some days since he "went out after" a scholarship in the millitary academy at West Point, and landed it. Then he came along and espoused the cause of a "High School" for Clanton, and has been doing yoeman work in that line with fair prospects of success, if he can get any kind of encouragement or co-operation.

But this is not the least of his accomplishments; he has "bagged" even larger game. He believes in aiming at the stars, even tho' he hit a stump. He's high-minded, high-browed and high in achievement. His last feat is in landing the hero of the Merrimac, Congressman Hobson, as principal speaker for the commencement exercises of Clanton Academy. Now stop, think; that's some achievement! Congressman Hobson has a world-wide reputation as an orator, a thinker and a doer; he is in a class almost to himself. He has accomplished wonders in the few years he has lived on this planet. Beginning as a mere boy, he won distinction by getting a scholarship at Annapolis, the National Naval Academy, over a score of competitors, by an almost perfect examination; he won distinction as a student by his almost perfect recitations for four long years, or more. He won distinction among his fellow students by daring to do right, in the face of ostracism; he won distinction as a naval constructor, and as a mark of honor this government sent him to other nations to study naval construction: he was sent around the world by this government to view the armament of other nations and to gain knowledge that would be valuable to us.

He conceived the idea of "bottling up" Cervera, and opposed the "powers that be" when he asked that he be permitted to retire, temporarily, that his eyesight might be benefitted—having worn his eyes almost out in the service of his country; failing in this, because of the opposition of one of the Alabama congressmen, he dared oppose him for his seat in congress, and won; this was some more distinction. Then he again, won distinction by coming out among the first to fight the great liquor traffic, and to make speeches throughout the entire lengths and breadths of the country in opposition to that traffic.

He has recently stepped into the lime-light by announcing his candidacy for the Senate, against the red-headed rooster from Jefferson (Senator Johnston) and announcing that he proposes to wage a vigorous warfare, from early Spring till election day, in an effort to capture Senator Johnston's seat. This sketch does not include his fame won on the sweet lips of many a fair daughter—and some mothers—just after his famous escapade with Cervera; that need not be mentioned here, nor need our sweet faced young ladies tremble at his coming; he's married now and has quit such foolishness—neither does it have anything to do with his close alliance with the suffragette movement—that isn't germane either.

The fact is, HOBSON is coming to Clanton to address the pupils of Clanton Academy; Prof. Pickens [illegible]

CLANTON'S OPERA HOUSE

Since the days when the memory of man runneth not Clanton has been without an amusement house; just how the citizens survived the catastrophe no one seems to know, and yet we have done so. No more, however, will we be required to hide our faces in shame when the stranger within our gates asks where he can spend a pleasant evening of amusement. Oh, no, we are strictly in the swim now. It's true we haven't a great "white way" or a paradise alley or anything of that kind, but we have a sure enough opera house—an amusement hall where our own citizens and our visitors may pass an afternoon or evening in pleasure.

A few choice spirits among the younger set determiced that if the old staid citizens were content to remain at home after the cow had been milked and the pigs fed they would have none of it in theirs, so they formed an aggregation, association, combination, or whatever you choose to call it, and staged an opera house; they went further:—they engaged a vaudeville troupe to spend the Summer here and furnish clean amusements at nominal figures.

The company is now within our midst; they have given two creditable performances and our people are well satisfied. The company will be augmented by the addition of several other artists and the entertainments promise to assist our weary citizens to while away many an idle hour during the Summer months.

All honor to the young men who had the courage in the face of so much opposition, criticism and indifference to undertake such a movement; may they, each of them, grow exceedingly rich in their venture and may the day soon come when the old fogies will be required to take a back seat and turn the driving lines over to those who dare to do things.

They Got Left.

John and Betty, aged five and four years, had started on a railway journey with their parents on Monday, but reached the station just in time to hear the engineer ring his bell and see the train pull out of the station, leaving the family behind.

Next Sunday John and Betty were started out on the way to Sunday school. When they were half way there the bell rang, and presently they came regretfully back.

"We got left," they announced.

Men who worked under a former city editor on the Washington Post vouch for the truth of this story about him.

The telegraph editor, so the story goes, got a "flash" one night that John La Farge, the painter, was dead. He called the news out to the city editor, who, catching only the name and profession, yelled to a reporter:

"Willoughby! A painter by the name of La Farge is dead. Rush down to the Central Labor Union and see what you can dig up about him!"

IN A SHADOW.

Inveterate Tea Drinker Feared Paralysis.

Steady use of either tea or coffee often produces alarming symptoms as the poison (caffeine) contained in these beverages acts with more potency in some persons than in others.

"I was never a coffee drinker," writes an Ill. woman, "but a tea drinker. I was very nervous, had frequent spells of sick headache and heart trouble, and was subject at times to severe attacks of bilious colic.

"No end of sleepless nights—would have spells at night when my right side would get numb and tingle like a thousand needles were pricking my flesh. At times I could hardly put my tongue out of my mouth and my right eye and ear were affected.

"The doctors told me I was liable to become paralyzed at any time, so I was in constant dread. I took no end of medicine—all to no good.

"The doctors told me to quit using tea, but I thought I could not live without it—that it was my only stay. I had been a tea drinker for twenty-five years; was under the doctor's care for fifteen.

"About six months ago, I finally quit tea and commenced to drink Postum.

"I have never had one spell of sick headache since and only one light attack of bilious colic. Have quit having those numb spells at night, sleep well and my heart is getting stronger all the time." Name given upon request.

Postum now comes in concentrated, powder form, called Instant Postum. It is prepared by stirring a level teaspoonful in a cup of hot water, adding sugar to taste, and enough cream to bring the color to golden brown.

Instant Postum is convenient; there's no waste; and the flavor is always uniform. Sold by grocers everywhere.

FERTILIZER TESTS ARE REPORTED ON

ALABAMA EXPERT DETAILS RESULTS OBTAINED ON TENNESSEE VALLEY SOIL.

ONLY OFFICIALS UNBONDED

Legislature Neglected To Provide for Convict Bureau Making Their Security.

Auburn, Ala.—In a letter on experiments with different fertilizers for cotton on Tennessee Valley soil, J. F. Duggar, director of the Alabama Experiment Station of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, says:

The fertilizer requirements of cotton growing on the typical red soil of the Tennessee valley have been investigated several times by the Alabama Experiment Station through field experiments conducted on farms in various localities in the Tennessee valley. One of these local fertilizer experiments with cotton was made by Mr. G. H. Harris, two miles east of Tuscumbia, in 1912, under the direction of this station.

The field was divided into 12 equal areas or plots, three of which were left without fertilizer. Each of the other nine plots received a different fertilizer or combination of fertilizer. For example, cotton seed meal at the rate of 200 pounds per acre, acid phosphate at the rate of 240 pounds per acre and kainit at the rate of 200 pounds per acre were applied alone, two by two and all three together, the latter making a complete fertilizer.

The largest profit, $6.96 per acre, after paying the cost of the fertilizer, or a net profit of 143 per cent on the investment in fertilizers was obtained on a plot receiving 240 pounds of acid phosphate, 100 pounds of kainit and 100 pounds of nitrate of soda per acre.

In a complete fertilizer it was more profitable to employ 100 than 200 pounds of kainit per acre.

Cotton seed meal, when applied alone or in combination with one or two other fertilizers, uniformly increased the yield. The average increase due to cotton seed meal was 175 pounds of seed cotton per acre.

Acid phosphate was second in effectiveness. Kainit at the rate of 200 pounds per acre was practically useless, though a smaller amount was slightly effective.

Likewise, in an experiment made on the farm of the Eighth District Agricultural School at Athens, in cooperation with the Auburn station, the results also showed nitrogen to be the most important constituent of a fertilizer for cotton in the wet season of 1912. In some combinations acid phosphate, but of distinctly secondary importance as compared with nitrogen.

In the experiment at Athens, nitrate of soda afforded a larger profit than cotton seed meal, the difference in yield being 34 pounds of seed cotton per acre in favor of nitrate. In the experiment near Tuscumbia, 100 pounds of nitrate of soda proved practically equal to 200 pounds of cotton seed meal. Whenever nitrate of seed was used it was applied as a side application, while all other fertilizers were applied before planting.

ONLY OFFICIALS UNBONDED.

Legislature Neglected To Provide For Making Security.

Montgomery—Although more money passed through the state convict department than any other branch of the state government with the possible exception of the treasurer's office, none of the officials connected with the bureau was required to make bond.

The fact led to much speculation as to the bonds given by other state officials and from a compilation it is shown that all other officials who handle money are required to furnish adequate surety.

State Treasurer John Purifoy's bond is $150,000.

H. J. Willingham, superintendent of education, $15,000; W. E. Feagin, chief clerk of the department of education, and as treasurer of the agricultural schools, $37,000; B. F. Kolb, commissioner of agriculture, $5,000. Captain Kolb settles with the treasurer daily.

State Auditor C. Brooks Smith does not handle a cent of cash yet he makes a bond of $20,000. Cyrus B. Brown, secretary of state, and Hervey W. Laird, deputy insurance commissioner, furnish bonds of $10,000 each.

Alex Walker, superintendent of the state banking department, makes a $15,000 bond and his assistants furnish a bond of $10,000 each. John H. Wallace, Jr., state game and fish commissioner, and Lee Cowart, commissioner of immigration, make $5,000 bonds.

The attorney general makes a bond but the bond book at the capitol does not show where the supreme court judges or judges of the appellate court make bond. They all take an oath at the time they begin their duties.

TEACHERS OF STATE MEET

Many Prominent Educators Deliver Addresses At Annual Gathering.

Montgomery.—The thirty-second annual convention of the Alabama Educational Association convened here March 20.

It is estimated that no less than 2,500 teachers are in attendance, and from present indications the meeting promises to be the most successful in the history of the Association.

The opening session of the convention was held in the Grand Theatre and the invocation was offered by Rev. Dr. Henry M. Edmonds, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Montgomery.

Governor O'Neal delivered the address of welcome on behalf of the state, and Commissioner William A. Gunter, Jr., made the welcome address on behalf of the city. The response was delivered by Prof. Edgar Wright of Troy, after which President J. B. Hobdy of Auburn, read his annual address.

The speakers on the program include Superintendent of Education Henry J. Willingham, Dr. George H. Denny, president of the University of Alabama, Dr. John W. Abercrombie of Tuscaloosa, Dr. Oscar Dowling of Shreveport, La.; Dr. P. P. Claxton, United States commissioner of education of Washington, Frank P. Glass of Birmingham, William F. Feagin, chief clerk in the department of education, Superintendent of Education I. W. McAdory of Birmingham, Dr. B. B. Ross of Auburn and a large number of other prominent educators throughout the state.

MAY RUN FOR GOVERNOR.

Wallace Gives Out Views on Public Questions and Tentative Platform.

Birmingham.—John H. Wallace, Jr., state game and fish commissioner, while here, practically announced his candidacy for governor. Mr. Wallace stated that he had been urged from all sections to offer for the governorship, but that he would not make any formal announcement until he had held a conference with friends in Huntsville, his home town, and other sections of the state.

Mr. Wallace has given out a statement embracing the issues that he would advocate should he run for governor.

He favors local option in the regulation of the liquor traffic, the regulation of the railroads within the constitutional limitations, equalization of taxes, taking the children from the cotton mills, the control of the water power projects by the state by leasing the water power rights and the establishment of a public utilities commission. Mr. Wallace heartily favors holding of a centennial exposition.

RATE ORDER EXTENSION.

May First Latest Date Set By Commission.

Montgomery.—A further extension of the operation of the railroad commission's order for a 2½ cent passenger rate on the Louisville and Nashville railroad until May 1, has been decreed pending a decision from Federal Judge W. I. Grubb, of Birmingham, on the railroad's petition asking the enjoinment of the order. The commission was advised that Judge Grubb, owing to pressing court business, could not reach a decision before May 1, and in a peaceful spirit, extended the time.

The commission's order was originally made effective March 6, but recently was extended to March 23.

Has Analyses Made.

Montgomery.—C. Homer Billingley, state pure food and drug clerk, has received analyses of two kinds of flour and one brand of grape juice from B. B. Ross, state chemist. The department has also received the analysis of two cola drinks which are manufactured in Birmingham. The report of the chemist states that the flour and grape juice are normal and do not conflict with the state pure food laws. The two cola drinks were examined at the request of the state tax commission. Caffiene was discovered in both, and for this reason the tax commission will require the companies manufacturing the drinks to pay the same license as do other companies manufacturing caffiene drinks.

DECREASE IN COKE PRODUCTION.

Reduction of 374,217 Tons is Shown as Compared With the Make in 1911.

Birmingham.—Official report of coke production in Alabama during 1912 shows 2,382,480 tons manufactured, three counties only making returns.

A reduction of 374,217 tons is shown as compared with the make in 1911, when 1,756,697 tons were manufactured.

The difference is accounted for at the office of Chief State Mine Inspector Nesbitt in the fact that ovens at Vanderbilt, Trussville, Sayre, Weller, Blocton and elsewhere failed to manufacture any coke at all, and that at other places there was a reduction in the output for the first part of the year. The official report follows:

County—	1912	1911	Dec.

CONVICT FUND SHORT $150,000

So Far No Evidence Has Been Brought Out Incriminating Anyone But Lacy.

Montgomery.—No evidence has been found to point to the fact that any person is implicated in the shortage in the convict department other than Theo Lacy, according to a statement of Governor O'Neal. The governor was asked the pointed question if others were implicated, and he replied in the negative. He refused to say whether or not he suspected other persons, but declared that his investigation would spare no man.

"From the information we now possess I could not say that any one else is connected with Lacy's shortage," said the governor, "and in the absence of definite proof I could not say that I believe that any other person connived with the defaulting chief clerk in his peculations."

The governor said that every person who was seen with Lacy on the day of his disappearance had been examined, but that thus far no definite information concerning his present location had been obtained.

"We have a number of clues that we are working on and some of them may prove to be valuable, but as far as definite information goes it can be said that the mystery of Lacy's disappearance is as near unsolved as ever."

Theodore Lacy, chief clerk of the state convict department and custodian of all its funds is reported to have disappeared with his accounts about $150,000 out of balance and with moneys estimated at $80,000 in his possession. Discrepancies in accounts are said to date back to June, 1911, and cash carried with him was obtained from local banks on checks signed by James G. Oakley, president of the convict board.

Warrant for Lacy's arrest was issued and a reward of $1,500 offered by Governor O'Neal and the sheriff of Montgomery county. The chief clerk was last seen in Montgomery soon after he had turned over two checks alleged to be worthless and amounting to $117,000 to Dan Trawick, first assistant clerk to the convict department.

Trusted for years by state officials, Lacy was not required to give a bond to the state. Unless banks by whom checks for $130,000 signed by James G. Oakley, president of the convict board, are drawn are forced to return the money the state will lose it—that is, if the money is not returned by Lacy.

James G. Oakley, president of the convict board, has offered to give up everything he possesses to repay the amount of the defalcation. He trusted Lacy to the extent that he gave him signed checks with instructions to fill in the amounts when the department was ready to pay out money. These checks are the ones Lacy used in securing the money for his own use.

How far the shortage goes back, no one can tell until a thorough investigation is made of the books kept by Lacy.

It is believed Lacy left town with about $90,000. The warrant for Lacy's arrest was signed by Examiner Brooke by order of Governor O'Neal, and was sworn to before the judge of the Montgomery inferior court. It charges Lacy specifically with the embezzlement of $20,000, the allegation being that "within the past 12 months he (Brooke) has probable cause to believe and does believe that the offense of embezzlement has been committd by Theo. Lacy, for that the said Theo. Lacy, being a public officer of the State of Alabama, to-wit: Chief clerk of the convict department of the State of Alabama, did knowingly embezzle or fraudulently convert to his own use money coming into his hands as an officer of the convict department of the State of Alabama, to-wit: The sum of $20,000. Said sum of money was received by said Theo. Lacy in his official capacity as aforesaid, chief clerk of the convict department of the State of Alabama."

Theo Lacy was appointed to office by James G. Oakley, president of the board, in 1911. He came from Selma.

It was stated that the absconding chief clerk of the state convict department was short in his accounts to the extent of more than $1,700 while he was clerk of the Dallas circuit court, acording to the records in the office of Governor O'Neal. The missing man also owed the county a small amount but he settled both discrepancies promptly when he was notified that his accounts were out of balance.

HISTORIES MUST TEACH HISTORY

O'Neal Declares Neither Prejudice, Nor Sectionalism Will Be Tolerated.

Montgomery.—Histories must teach history if they are used in Alabama public schools during the next five years. Governor O'Neal announced that he would demand that the histories adopted by the text commission "shall teach history exclusively, not prejudice nor sectionalism."

He is examining the books presented by publishing companies and will probably make recommendations to the commission when it meets May 20.

During the first session of the commission two weeks ago a resolution adopted by Camp Raphael Semmes, U. C. V., of Mobile urged the adoption of books that did not teach that southerners became rebels when they began the Civil war and that they were traitors to their country.

The books will probably be agreed upon at the meeting May 20 and they will be used in all public schools.

HIGHWAY IMROVEMNT

TAXPAYERS URGE GOOD ROADS

Representatives of Both Town and Country Vote in Favor of Tax to Create a State Fund.

There never has been in the past so much discontent over the discomfort of traveling over mud roads as there is at the present time. While it it well known that the making of hard roads in communities where there is no hard material must involve an enormous expense, yet more and more taxpayers are expressing a willingness to be taxed for permanent roads. This was plainly indicated at a road conference held in Des Moines, Ia., where 200 delegates composed of typical representatives of both town and country voted unanimously in favor of a one-mill tax to create a state aid fund, says the Iowa Homesteader. In the past the best that Iowa has been able to do along this line has been to support a non-salaried highway commission with but little power and with practically no money to work with.

This same conference endorsed almost unanimously the establishment of a permanent highway commission with ample power. In addition a recommendation was made to the legislature to submit the question of bonding the state for good roads purposes to the people at the next general election.

We appreciate the fact that this program is not endorsed by all the people and it is just possible that at the present time it may not meet with the endorsement of even a majority, but the rapidly changing feeling indicates that the time will soon come when all states of the corn belt will undertake the construction of permanent roads. This being the case the question of administration in the important one to deside. In this matter there are established precedents which may be safely followed and these precedents in every case tend in a greater or less degree to centralization. In other words, wherever good roads have been economically built in this country they have been built under the general supervision of the state under a plan of co-ordination with the county and with the township. No plan will every work out practically in the corn belt that does not in a large way leave with the locality the authority to say when they are willing to bear the expense of good roads. When it is decided to incur the expense of building permanent roads the township, county and state will as units find themselves compelled through the operation of a sound business principle to adopt plans and specifications prepared by the best available talent, whether this be furnished by the nation or by the state.

The most urgent need at the present time in all states of the corn belt is the classification of highways in order that the question for all time may be settled as to what constitutes main roads and which are the secondary highways. This recommendation was made to the legislature at the Iowa road conference referred to. When this plan is once carried out we will then know definitely the order in which our roads should be permanently improved. It is a well-known fact that 90 per cent. of the rural traffice is carried on over 10 per cent. of the highways and certainly the first move should be to improve this ten per cent. In the meantime we are strongly in favor of keeping the secondary roads in the best possible condition by the construction of suitable culverts wherever they are needed and by the sensible and compulsory use of the drag. There will always be large and important township and county duties so that no man need have fear that the adoption of permenent road administration will in any way interfere with the principle of local government.

BIG DISAPPOINTMENT IN OHIO

Buckeye State Failed to Pass Appropriation of $60,000,000 to Improve Its Roads.

The greatest disappointment of last year was the vote of Ohio on the constitutional amendment to authorize the general assembly to issue bonds of the state in an amount not to exceed $50,000,000 for the purpose of constructing and maintaining an intercounty system of wagon roads. The vote was: for, 272,527; against, 274,618; majority against, 2,091. This close vote was all the more unfortunate, because the issue was not decided on its merits. Forty-two amendments were voted on, and in the zeal to defeat some of them, thousands of voters slaughtered all. So, under the circumstances, it was probably surprising that the vote in favor was as large as it was. But it is a shock to find that such a state as Ohio out of 1,760,000 qualified voters less than 600,000 took the trouble to go to the polls to vote on constitutional amendments, and not all of these paid any attention to good roads.

"Whosoever Liveth and Believeth in Me Shall Never Die."

—John 11:26—

THE Resurrection, the greatest object lesson of the ages, is the pivot on which the whole world is turning from darkness to light. No matter what belief anyone may have, his life has been affected in some way by the accounts given by Matthew, Mark, Luke and John of the Crucifixion; the placing in the tomb of the body of Jesus and his appearance after a period of seeming death. The clear belief of the disciples, their teachings and reported healings; even the contentions, strife and darkness, which lasted for a time, and then the steady advance of the light of Christianity down the centuries, has led to study and thought and achievements which have advanced the civilization of the world. Jesus' resurrection is also our resurrection as it was the resurrection of the disciples, who, after his appearing, knew the things which before they had taken on faith. The world's resurrection is going on. Christianity, with the resurrection as its most vital point, has been the motive power that has swayed empires.

Its study has been the means of advancing the education of the world. Thoughts inspired by it are expressed in art, music, literature; and thoughts inspired by it have opened men's minds to inventions that have revolutionized mortal life. The world's resurrection is going on! It has opened the darkest continents to commerce; has been the cause of the discovery of new countries; and is lifting the whole world to a higher understanding and appreciation of life—from a material sense to the highest spiritual sense.

Each year with the recurrence of Easter men are outgrowing the grave more and more and are understanding more fully the great truth embodied in Christ's promise that "Whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die." Jesus had challenged the mortal claim of death three times before he proved conclusively the spiritual supremacy of life by his resurrection from what seemed to be death. First, at the gates of the city of Nain, when the son of a widow was being carried out on a bier, he said to him: "Young man, I say unto thee, arise;" and he whom they thought was dead "sat up, and began to speak."

Then when "all were weeping and bewailing" over the death of the twelve-year-old daughter of Jairus, a ruler of the synagogue, Jesus said unto them, "'Weep not; for she is not dead, but sleepeth.' and they laughed him to scorn." But he took her by the hand; told her to arise; and "she rose up immediately."

Finally, he called Lazarus from the tomb four days after he had been laid away there as dead. Lazarus and his sisters, Martha and Mary, were very dear friends of Jesus. He often visited at their little home to rest after his teachings in the temple and other places. Mary especially was dearly beloved by him. She had "sat at Jesus' feet, and heard his words;" and it seems that even Jesus himself thought that she understood the full meaning of his teachings. So when Lazarus was sick his sisters sent word to Jesus, saying, "Lord, behold, he whom thou lovest is sick." But when Jesus heard this "he abode two days still in the same place where he was." Then he said to his disciples, "Our friend Lazarus sleepeth; but I go that I may wake him out of sleep." Then said his disciples, "Lord, if he sleepeth he shall do well." Howbeit Jesus spake of his death; but they thought that he had spoken of taking of rest in sleep. Then said Jesus unto them plainly, Lazarus is dead. And I am glad for your sakes that I was not there, to the intent ye may believe; nevertheless, let us go unto him."

When Jesus and his disciples arrived at Lazarus' home and Mary met him, "she fell down at his feet, saying unto him, 'Lord, if thou hadst been here, my brother had not died.'" When Jesus therefore saw her weeping, and the Jews also weeping which came with her, he groaned in spirit and was troubled, and said, 'Where have ye laid him?' They said unto him, 'Lord, come and s-e.'

"Jesus wept."

He had thought that Mary surely would understand what he meant when he said that "Lazarus sleepeth." That she would understand that Lazarus was not dead; that death had no power over him. He wept because he saw that even Mary did not yet understand the full meaning of his teachings.

Jesus then showed by his own resurrection that death and the grave had no power over him and made clear his statement that "whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die."

As the stone was rolled away from the sepulcher, so, by Jesus' resurrection, the stone which had kept out hope, faith and knowledge of the Eternal Life is rolled away from the hearts of men. The veil of the temple was torn when Jesus was crucified as a symbol that nothing more was to be hidden, and that the light was to be let in to clear up the mysticisms of old beliefs.

Brighter and brighter the light of love is shining as man becomes more and more at one with God.

As the "resurrection" of man goes on the truth of Paul's statement that "in him we live and move, and have our being" becomes clearer. Men soar in aeroplanes to reach the sky and build skyscrapers hundreds of feet above the street, but they do not now attempt to thus reach heaven or to see the mysteries of God. The old materiality of Babylon is fast disappearing and we are knowing more and more that we must reach God, the Supreme Being, spiritually and not with towers that pierce the sky. Paul, who saw the great light and knew the meaning of his love, said that "Unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation."

"HE IS NOT HERE."

God—Love—is ever present—in the street, in the office, in the homes of rich and poor, in the churches, in the markets. We have but to turn our heads and hearts and look and we shall see and feel his presence and know the full meaning of Jesus' resurrection as the disciples did at that happy breakfast on the shores of the lake in the clear, bright light of the morning after he had risen from seeming death; as they did on the road to Emmaus; and when in their midst he dispelled the doubts of even Thomas, who needed material assurance that Jesus' body was not dead.

Thus the highest spiritual understanding brings the real resurrection, undying, forever having dominion over death and the grave into eternal freedom.

As Jesus said to the thief who was crucified with him, when he showed by his words that he believed in him "Today shalt thou be with me in Paradise," so every one can be with the risen Lord in Paradise by receiving him into their hearts; by believing in him; and by knowing in the fullest sense that "we are the sons of God," and are therefore his image and likeness. When we know that we are the perfect reflection of God, we shall follow perfectly his commandment to love our neighbors as ourselves and shall then have heaven in our hearts and shall know that we are living in his ever protecting care. We have but to turn to Christ, who is always with us, to receive his fullest blessings. "For in him we live, and move and have our being."

Religion No Longer Terrible.

It is a glorious thing to remember that men are turning more and more to god and to religion because a more humane theology has stripped both God and religion of their former terrors. From a myriad of Christian pulpits the nobler message will go forth that Jesus died and rose again, not to reconcile an angry God to his wandering children, but to reconcile and draw these wayward ones to the Father's love and care. From the thunders of Sinai and the avenging wrath the theology of today is turning to the gospel of the prodigal son, the woman taken in adultery, the lost sheep, the Sermon on the Mount. How passing strange that the Redeemer who was all gentleness and forgiveness should have been made into a monster of tyranny, bigotry from which men and women and children have shrunk in terror for 2,000 years!

WOMAN'S STORY MADE PUBLIC

Mrs. Moncrief Didn't Consider It Secret. Thought Friends Should Know. Read Her Statement.

Belton, Tex.—Mrs. Ethel Moncrief, of this place, says: "I suffered with a complaint peculiar to women, and, although I called in the doctors, they failed to do me any good.

Then, I began to take Cardui, the woman's tonic.

From the first dose, I could feel results, and, in a short time, I was relieved of all my dreadful suffering.

My friends were surprised to see the results I obtained from the use of Cardui. I just couldn't help telling them. It built up my system wonderfully.

I do not want to be without Cardui in my house, as long as I can obtain it. It is a true relief for womanly troubles. I can't praise it too highly."

In the past half century, thousands of ladies have written, like Mrs. Moncrief, to tell of the benefit received from the use of Cardui.

Such testimony, from earnest women, surely indicates the merit of this woman's remedy.

Cardui contains pure, harmless, vegetable ingredients, which act in a gentle way on all the weakened womanly organs.

It cannot do you harm, and is almost sure to be the very medicine you need. It's good for young or old.

Please give Cardui a trial.

SWALLOW HAD LONG JOURNEY

Positive Proof That Bird Traveled the Distance From England to South Africa.

The capture of a swallow bearing an aluminum ring in Natal, South Africa, the other day, has resulted in an astonishing insight into the migratory habits of birds. From a number and address stamped on the ring it was discovered that the swallow was one of 11,483 British birds marked in a similar way last summer by enthusiasts, desiring to learn more as to the routes taken by bird migrants, and whether birds return again to their previous nesting sites. This systematic marking of birds began in 1909, since when nearly 32,000 have been "ringed." About three per cent. are afterward noted, but the swallow reported from Natal appears to have made the longest flight so far. A black-headed gull ringed as a nestling in Yorkshire in July, 1911, was found in February, 1912, in Flores, Azores. A starling ringed in Berkshire in January, 1912, reached Helsingfor, Finland, in April. A teal ringed in Staffordshire in the autumn of 1910, was found at Dalarne, Sweden, July, 1911.

Plea for Liberty.

Mrs. B. was entertaining a few friends and Elsie was allowed to remain in the room, provided she made no disturbance. But she was interested and talkative and asked so many questions that at last her mother became exasperated.

"Elsie, if you open your mouth another time, you'll have to go back upstairs. Now, remember!"

Elsie was accustomed to obey, so, for a long time, Elsie's lips were kept tightly closed. At last, however, she touched her mother and said softly:

"Mamma, can I open my mouth if I don't say anything?"—Chicago Tribune.

CRUST COVERED BABY'S HEAD

532 Brunswick St., Baltimore, Md.—"My baby's face broke out in pimples, which after bathing would weep and form scabs until his head and face were completely covered with a crust and his hair all fell out. It was cross and would not sleep. Each day it spread until his entire face and head were covered with weeping sores. I tried several prescriptions, but did not find any relief. Then I decided to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment.

"After using them two or three times the sores dried up and after a half dozen applications all disfigurement disappeared. In less than three weeks the sores and scales were completely gone, and baby's skin as smooth and clear as when he was first born. Cuticura Soap and Ointment cured him." (Signed) Mrs. Lottie V. "I know," said Mary, "but papa has just got tickets for Los Angeles."

No woman wants to look old. Many in their effort to look youthful resort to the "beauty doctor's" prescriptions. Their mistake is that they visit the wrong department in the drug store.

Universal Hero.

For America, at least, there is the one universal hero. No one questions his greatness. None names him but to praise.

Who is this universal hero?

Is it Napoleon? Many condemn him, as Ingersoll did, as the "imperial personification of force and murder." No, it is not Napoleon.

Washington, then? Wendell Phillips said: "But the great Virginian held slaves." So, even Washington had his detractors.

Lincoln? Perhaps later on; but not yet.

Well, who is this universal hero of America?

John Hampden, of course. He objected to paying taxes.—Kansas City Times.

Children's Humor.

The poetry of life is frequently seen in childhood. We have this illustrated in the description of butterflies as "pansies flying."

"A star is a cinder from God's great star," has a wealth of unconscious meaning. But perhaps the finest approach to poetry was made by a tiny tot who defined dew as "the grass crying." "O auntie!" said a little girl, "I've just seen a pencil walking." The nurse who had grown out of fairyland explained it was only an ordinary worm.

A WONDERFUL DISCOVERY.

In this age of research and experiment, all nature is ransacked by the scientific for the comfort and happiness of man. Science has indeed made giant strides in the past century, and among the—by no means least important—discoveries in medicine is that of Therapion, which has been used with great success in French Hospitals and that it is worthy the attention of those who suffer from kidney, bladder, nervous diseases, chronic weaknesses, ulcers, skin eruptions, piles, &c., there is no doubt. In fact it seems evident from the big stir created amongst specialists, that THERAPION is destined to cast into oblivion all those questionable remedies that were formerly the sole reliance of medical men. It is of course impossible to tell sufferers all we should like to tell them in this short article, but those who would like to know more about this remedy that has effected so many—we might almost say, miraculous cures, should send addressed envelope for FREE book to Dr. Le Clero Med. Alabama has been put to shame!

"Safe and Sane!!" How safe? How sane?

Was there a woman involved? We hope not.

Why is "Cousin Chawles" in Montgomery at this time? Pray WHY?

There are some Sons of Alabama" deep in their graves, who, if such things are possible. we know, turned in their graves within the past several davs.

If coming events cast their shadows before them, we may well predict the coming of a sure enough "safe and sane" administration of state affairs just as soon as the present regime has vacated.

We notice quite a number of state papers indulging in adverse criticism of Congressmen Blackmon and Dent because of their vote on the "Webb" bill recently introduced in Congress and afterward passed over the veto of President Taft.

No one, of course, disputes the right of a newspaper, or an individual to criticise the words or deeds of any public servant—and Congressmen are nothing more than the servants of their constituency—but when did the law confer upon newspapers or individuals the right to take from a man, even though he be a congressman, his individuality or his right to think for himself?

Neither Blackmon or Dent need any defense at our hands; they are able men, good lawyers and exceptionally good representatives, and can care for themselves when occasion requires it, but the Press does not like to see the acts of public servants criticised too severely without just cause. It may be that the vote of these two gentlemen did not meet with the approval of a number of papers and individuals, but does that confer the right upon the disapproving ones to "read them out of office" or to prophesy, predict and pray for their immediate removal or their defeat should they again ask for office?

We cannot all go to Congress; if we could, if we did, some of us would vote contrary to the desires of others—as seemingly has been the case with Dent and Blackmon, but that would in no wise indicate that we were dishonest, "opinionated" or unmindful of the welfare of our constituency. Since we cannot all go, since we can send but one man should we not send him unfettered and untrammelled so that he can vote as he sees best for the interests of his constituency? Who knows but that these two gentlemen reflected the desires of a large majority of the voters in their respective districts? Why tie them hand and foot and if they exercise the least particle of manhood in voting against the preconceived ideas of some, proceed to "mop up" with them and read them out of office and the party?

Both acted manly in taking the stand they did. They realized, perhaps, that it was the unpopular side, yet they dared to take that side because they thought they were right; President Taft (an excellent constitutional lawyer) agreed with them in every particular. Why should we then, afar off, and with but a casual study of the bill, undertake to wallop them?

If we look at it from another angle we might have just cause to congratulate them. A review of the vote of the two districts (the second or Dent's district and of the fourth, or Blackmon's district) shows that both voted largely against the amendment and cast a tremendous vote for Emmet O'Neal for Governor when he was running on the "local option" or "wide open" ticket. It would appear then, that both these men were directly in line with the majority of their constituency—that they voted just as a majority of their electors would have voted had they been permitted to cast a vote on the Webb bill.

These men were sent to Congress to represent their districts, not the individual opinions of a few—be they great or small, high or low; they are not expected—or should not be—to seek out each individual in the district and ask an expression of opinion as to how a vote should be cast or gain permission to vote as their consciences and their wisdom dictate: if this were true we'd as well send a poll parrot to Congress with his instructions written and tied around his neck.

Given our Congressmen the right to think for themselves occasionally; let them feel that we consider them honest at least.

Personally, the editor of this paper would empty every ounce of liquor in the universe into the ocean and make it a felony for any one to ever distill, manufacture or concoct another ounce, but whether that be true or not, whether we would destroy all the liquor and forbid more to be made—does not enter into this discussion; it is purely and simply a question of whether our congressmen should be grilled merely because they dare to vote upon a question in a way that does not meet the enthusiastic approval of some of the voters of the State.

This paper is prohibition, tooth and toenail, but it is also for personal liberty, the right to think and act as individuals and against that fast approaching era in Alabama politics which turns a man out of office if he dares to exercise any thought in the casting of his vote.

Would either Blackmon or Dent have been commended had they voted for the Webb bill? WE opine NOT; the general verdict would have been—in so far as their critics are concerned—"they did nothing but right." Yes, right from their viewpoint, but wrong from the viewpoint of many others and radically wrong from the viewpoint of their own individual consciences and opinions.

We have heard of no one opposing Fred Blackmon or Hugh Dent thus far and we doubt there being any opposition; surely none will come from the fact that they had the manhood to do as they thought proper and right.

Individually we would have voted the other way, but that does not mean that Blackmon or Dent must consult us as to their personal vote or that either of them is dishonest, wrong or illogical simply because they voted contrary to what we would have done It's an earnest—a mark of personal manhood—when men stand up for the unpopular side because the unpopular side, in their judgment, is the right side.

While disagreeing with them, we honor them for their stand.

What Three Bushels More to the Acre Means

EIGHT years ago the farmers in a central state averaged crops that ran three bushels less to the acre than they now get. Suppose each acre of farm land in the country were so tended that it produced an increase equal to that of this state. How much more money would you have with which to buy the luxuries of life that you earn and deserve? Your share in this prosperity depends entirely upon yourself. The first step is to fertilize your land properly with manure spread by an

The spreader that does its work as it should must have many excellent mechanical features. The apron should move without jerking; the beater should meet the load at exactly the right point to pulverize the manure without too greatly increasing the draft of the machine; the speed changes of the apron should be positive. All these features are provided for in the construction of I H C spreaders.

I H C spreaders are made in low styles which are not too low for use in deep mud or snow, narrow and wide, with both reverse and endless aprons, for use under all conditions. The rear axle is located well under the box, instead of at the rear. Placed in that position (under the box) it carries over 70 per cent of the load and insures ample tractive power.

CHANGE OF DATE

We wish to call the attention of our contestants to the fact that the date for the first count of the votes has been changed from March 26 to April 10, next. This change was not made by us or at our suggestion; in fact, we have nothing to do with the counting or the date on which the count is made. It was changed at the request of the Company who has the contest in charge—they being unable to have a representative here before that time. It will enable those who have just entered the contest to compete for the Ten Dollar gold piece to be given away at the first count to the party having the highest vote. It will help in every way and work a hardship on no one. A number of young ladies are working hard to win the coveted prizes, but, none of them should forget that at the April count, in addition to the announced prizes to be warded at the end of the contest, a $10.00 gold piece is hung up for the one who has the most votes.

IS LACY AN ANGORA?

The announcements made in Montgomery last Thursday have sent a quiver of blood curdling horror throughout the state; developments since then have been even more thrilling. Just where the next bolt will strike no one is able to say; just who will next be involved in the gigantic steal perpetrated upon the state, even the wise ones cannot tell. Every one seems to be under suspicion; it is not a case of proving guilty, but a case of establishing innocency. It is sure that Lacy has absconded with at least ninety thousand dollars of the state's cash—how much more cannot be told till a complete examination has been made. Whether Oakley is guilty of theft or not, he is assuredly guilty of gross negligence. His friends, and they are numerous, hope for the best; they pray that the worst that can be said is that he was too trustful and too negligent.

The Press does not feel like condemning either the one or the other at this time, but there is something decidedly rotten up the branch, it cries out, in its foulness, to high heaven. That the present administration is without blame those "higher up" we mean,—the most ardent admirers of the Governor cannot deny. It's altogether too late to lock the stable after the horse had freed himself from the stall; no matter if he is again caught and stabled, the damage has been done and no amount of locking and bolting will repair the first injury. If, however, it teaches the lesson which such things should teach, it may, after all, be a lesson well worth the money, costly as it will be to the state.

Looking at it from miles away it would appear that Theodore Lacy is a goat—a big Billy-goat; we hope, however, that our viewpoint may be erroneous and that he is the only one involved.

It would most assuredly appear that a "safe and sane" administration would not permit pilfering to go on for two or more years without some knowledge; if it does, then it cannot be called either "safe" or "sane" and yet, that is what the facts so far developed have established.

The arduous task to which Gov. O'Neal has set himself in regaining the funds of the state, and in punishment of the guilty ones, will not regain for him confidence in his administration.

But we await further developments; we admit, the thing as it now stands is altogether too large for us to handle; we hope it may shrivel as the investigation goes forward, goodness knows if it grows as it progresses we will be overwhelmed.

Another young lady brought in quite a number of new subscribers Monday; the contest is growing in interest each day. Those who are seeking prizes would do well to get on their tiptoes in the very beginning.

Alabama has been put to shame!

"Safe and Sane!!" How safe? How sane?

Was there a woman involved? We hope not.

Why is "Cousin Chawles" in Montgomery at this time? Pray WHY?

There are some Sons of Alabama" deep in their graves, who, if such things are possible. we know, turned in their graves within the past several davs.

If coming events cast their shadows before them, we may well predict the coming of a sure enough "safe and sane" administration of state affairs just as soon as the present regime has vacated.

We notice quite a number of state papers indulging in adverse criticism of Congressmen Blackmon and Dent because of their vote on the "Webb" bill recently introduced in Congress and afterward passed over the veto of President Taft.

No one, of course, disputes the right of a newspaper, or an individual to criticise the words or deeds of any public servant—and Congressmen are nothing more than the servants of their constituency—but when did the law confer upon newspapers or individuals the right to take from a man, even though he be a congressman, his individuality or his right to think for himself?

Neither Blackmon or Dent need any defense at our hands; they are able men, good lawyers and exceptionally good representatives, and can care for themselves when occasion requires it, but the Press does not like to see the acts of public servants criticised too severely without just cause. It may be that the vote of these two gentlemen did not meet with the approval of a number of papers and individuals, but does that confer the right upon the disapproving ones to "read them out of office" or to prophesy, predict and pray for their immediate removal or their defeat should they again ask for office?

We cannot all go to Congress; if we could, if we did, some of us would vote contrary to the desires of others—as seemingly has been the case with Dent and Blackmon, but that would in no wise indicate that we were dishonest, "opinionated" or unmindful of the welfare of our constituency. Since we cannot all go, since we can send but one man should we not send him unfettered and untrammelled so that he can vote as he sees best for the interests of his constituency? Who knows but that these two gentlemen reflected the desires of a large majority of the voters in their respective districts? Why tie them hand and foot and if they exercise the least particle of manhood in voting against the preconceived ideas of some, proceed to "mop up" with them and read them out of office and the party?

Both acted manly in taking the stand they did. They realized, perhaps, that it was the unpopular side, yet they dared to take that side because they thought they were right; President Taft (an excellent constitutional lawyer) agreed with them in every particular. Why should we then, afar off, and with but a casual study of the bill, undertake to wallop them?

If we look at it from another angle we might have just cause to congratulate them. A review of the vote of the two districts (the second or Dent's district, and of the fourth, or Blackmon's district) shows that both voted largely against the amendment and cast a tremendous vote for Emmet O'Neal for Governor when he was running on the "local option" or "wide open" ticket. It would appear then, that both these men were directly in line with the majority of their constituency—that they voted just as a majority of their electors would have voted had they been permitted to cast a vote on the Webb bill.

These men were sent to Congress to represent their districts, not the individual opinions of a few—be they great or small, high or low; they are not expected—or should not be—to seek out each individual in the district and ask an expression of opinion as to how a vote should be cast or gain permission to vote as their consciences and their wisdom dictate: if this were true we'd as well send a poll parrot to Congress with his instruction is written and tied around his neck.

Given our Congressmen the right to think for themselves occasionally; let them feel that we consider them honest at least.

Personally, the editor of this paper would empty every ounce of liquor in the universe into the ocean and make it a felony for any one to ever distill, manufacture or concoct another ounce, but whether that be true or not, whether we would destroy all the liquor and forbid more to be made—does not enter into this discussion; it is purely and simply a question of whether our congressmen should be grilled merely because they dare to vote upon a question in a way that does not meet the enthusiastic approval of some of the voters of the State.

This paper is prohibition, tooth and toenail, but it is also for personal liberty, the right to think and act as individuals and against that fast approaching era in Alabama politics which turns a man out of office if he dares to exercise any thought in the casting of his vote.

Would either Blackmon or Dent have been commended had they voted for the Webb bill? WE opine NOT; the general verdict would have been—in so far as their critics are concerned—"they did nothing but right." Yes, right from their viewpoint, but wrong from the viewpoint of many others and radically wrong from the viewpoint of their own individual consciences and opinions.

We have heard of no one opposing Fred Blackmon or Hugh Dent thus far and we doubt there being any opposition; surely none will come from the fact that they had the manhood to do as they thought proper and right.

Individually we would have voted the other way, but that does not mean that Blackmon or Dent must consult us as to their personal vote or that either of them is dishonest, wrong or illogical simply because they voted contrary to what we would have done It's an earnest—a mark of personal manhood—when men stand up for the unpopular side because the unpopular side, in their judgment, is the right side.

While disagreeing with them, we honor them for their stand.

CHANGE OF DATE

We wish to call the attention of our contestants to the fact that the date for the first count of the votes has been changed from March 26 to April 10, next. This change was not made by us or at our suggestion; in fact, we have nothing to do with the counting or the date on which the count is made. It was changed at the request of the Company who has the contest in charge—they being unable to have a representative here before that time. It will enable those who have just entered the contest to compete for the Ten Dollar gold piece to be given away at the first count to the party having the highest vote. It will help in every way and work a hardship on no one. A number of young ladies are working hard to win the coveted prizes, but, none of them should forget that at the April count, in addition to the announced prizes to be warded at the end of the contest, a $10.00 gold piece is hung up for the one who has the most votes.

IS LACY AN ANGORA?

The announcements made in Montgomery last Thursday have sent a quiver of blood curdling horror throughout the state; developments since then have been even more thrilling. Just where the next bolt will strike no one is able to say; just who will next be involved in the gigantic steal perpetrated upon the state, even the wise ones cannot tell. Every one seems to be under suspicion; it is not a case of proving guilty, but a case of establishing innocency. It is sure that Lacy has absconded with at least ninety thousand dollars of the state's cash—how much more cannot be told till a complete examination has been made. Whether Oakley is guilty of theft or not, he is assuredly guilty of gross negligence. His friends, and they are numerous, hope for the best; they pray that the worst that can be said is that he was too trustful and too negligent.

The Press does not feel like condemning either the one or the other at this time, but there is something decidedly rotten up the branch, it cries out, in its foulness, to high heaven. That the present administration is without blame those "higher up" we mean,—the most ardent admirers of the Governor cannot deny. It's altogether too late to lock the stable after the horse had freed himself from the stall; no matter if he is again caught and stabled, the damage has been done and no amount of locking and bolting will repair the first injury. If, however, it teaches the lesson which such things should teach, it may, after all, be a lesson well worth the money, costly as it will be to the state.

Looking at it from miles away it would appear that Theodore Lacy is a goat—a big Billy-goat; we hope, however, that our viewpoint may be erroneous and that he is the only one involved.

It would most assuredly appear that a "safe and sane" administration would not permit pilfering to go on for two or more years without some knowledge; if it does, then it cannot be called either "safe" or "sane" and yet, that is what the facts so far developed have established.

The arduous task to which Gov. O'Neal has set himself in regaining the funds of the state, and in punishment of the guilty ones, will not regain for him confidence in his administration.

But we await further developments; we admit, the thing as it now stands is altogether too large for us to handle; we hope it may shrivel as the investigation goes forward, goodness knows if it grows as it progresses we will be overwhelmed.

Another young lady brought in quite a number of new subscribers Monday; the contest is growing in interest each day. Those who are seeking prizes would do well to get on their tiptoes in the very beginning.

Make Us Prove It

We dare not exaggerate to you. We are dependent upon your patronage. To get it we must have your trust and confidence. We make the following statements with a full understanding of what they mean to us. You are safe when you believe in these statements.

For the Bowels

If you only knew as much as we and those who have used them know about Rexall Orderlies, you would be as enthusiastic about recommending them as we are. They taste just like candy. They act so easily and so pleasantly that the taking of them is a pleasure.

Even children like Rexall Orderlies; and you know that if a medicine appeals to a child, it will appeal to grown-ups.

Rexall Orderlies

help chase gloom, dispel blues and make you feel happy by their splendid tonic, cleansing and strengthening effect upon the bowels.—They act to free the system—and keep it free—from the distress and ill feeling that naturally results from irregular and inactive bowels.

Rexall Orderlies do this quietly, without griping or causing nausea, purging or excessive looseness. They act to overcome and remove the cause of bowel ills and in a short time usually make unnecessary the continued use of physics and purgatives, thus tending to stop such unhealthy habits as may have been formed.

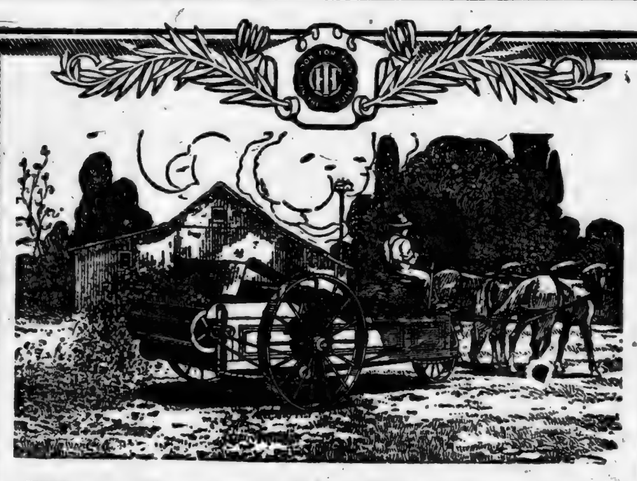
Make Us Prove This

We do not ask you to take our word for this. We want you to make us prove it, and at no cost to you.

Buy a box of Rexall Orderlies at our store. Use them once, or use up the whole box. Then, if you are not thoroughly satisfied, just come back empty handed and tell us. Without obligating you or questioning you we will return the money you paid us for them.

Doesn't that indicate that Rexall Orderlies are at least worthy of trial? Doesn't it prove our faith in them? Doesn't it merit your confidence? Could any offer be more fair to you?

We particularly recommend Rexall Orderlies for children, delicate and aged persons. Rexall Orderlies come in convenient vest-pocket size tin boxes. 12 tablets, 10c; 36 tablets, 25c; 80 tablets, 50c.



CAUTION: Please bear in mind that Rexall Orderlies are not sold by all druggists. You can buy Rexall Orderlies only at The Rexall Stores. You can buy Rexall Orderlies in this community only at our store:

What Three Bushels More to the Acre Means

EIGHT years ago the farmers in a central state averaged crops that ran three bushels less to the acre than they now get. Suppose each acre of farm land in the country were so tended that it produced an increase equal to that of this state. How much more money would you have with which to buy the luxuries of life that you earn and deserve? Your share in this prosperity depends entirely upon yourself. The first step is to fertilize your land properly with manure spread by an

The spreader that does its work as it should must have many excellent mechanical features. The apron should move without jerking; the beater should meet the load at exactly the right point to pulverize the manure without too greatly increasing the draft of the machine; the speed changes of the apron should be positive. All these features are provided for in the construction of I H C spreaders.

I H C spreaders are made in low styles which are not too low for use in deep mud or snow, narrow and wide, with both reverse and endless aprons, for use under all conditions. The rear axle is located well under the box, instead of at the rear. Placed in that position (under the box) it carries over 70 per cent of the load and insures ample tractive power.

STORM SWEEPS THE SOUTHERN STATES

TOLL OF DEATH GROWS IN SECTIONS STRICKEN BY DISASTROUS STORM.

GREAT PROPERTY DAMAGE

Greatest Damage Is Reported From Gordon County, Near Calhoun, Georgia.

Atlanta.—Reports are that more than ninety people were killed, scores severely injured and great property loss sustained in the disastrous electrical tornado which swept parts of Georgia, Tennessee, Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi and Texas. Eighty-odd deaths have been reported and the total loss of life probably will be increased when wire communication is restored in remote sections devastated by the cyclone. The damage to property cannot be estimated, but probably will have to be computed in millions.

Twenty-nine persons are reported to have perished in Georgia and damage to property is roughly estimated at $1,000,000. Calhoun, Gordon county, Georgia, and vicinity bore the brunt of the storm in this state, where eleven persons are reported to have been killed. The other fatalities in eGorgia were nine at Tucker, four at Eaglesville, three at Clarkston and two at Columbus.

Reports from Tennessee have increased the death toll in that state to twenty-three persons. Six perished in Middleton, four at South Berlin, three at Huron, two each at Culleoka and Lexington and one each at Leesburg, Rally Hill and Bryant Station.

The loss of life in Alabama is estimated at thirteen, although several persons are reported missing. Five negroes were killed near New Decatur, three persons perished at Caller, and two each at Hokes Bluff and Gayesville and Duke. One death has been reported in Texas.

Reports from northern Mississippi raised the death list from seven, as first reported, to thirteen. These fatalities occurred in seven counties.

The greatest damage to property was the destruction of buildings and houses in the sections of the states where deaths were reported. Telephone and telegraphic communication has been restored to most of the larger towns and all of the cities in the storm-swept territory.

Dalton, Ga.—Earth tremors were felt here, the shocks being more severe than four others experienced in Dalton during the past six years. The quake came at eleven o'clock, following a severe rain and wind storm. Houses were rocked from the severity of the disturbance and apprehension created.

Three Killed in Louisiana Town.

New Orleans.—According to the reports reaching here three persons were killed in a cyclone which struck Many, La. Several were reported injured. Thomas Goodman and his baby were killed when their home was blown away. One child of Bud Manasco was killed and several members of the family injured when their home was demolished. A high wind which struck New Orleans about noon caused much small property damage and a boy was struck by falling glass. The boy injured was Paul Taranek. He was crossing a street when a pane of glass from the window of a ten-story building fell on him. He was badly cut.

Carpenter Killed When Tower Falls

Louisville, Ky.—Two carpenters J. J. Walton and Everett Thomas, were killed when a high wind blew down a construction tower at the Louisville railway company's shops here. The men were at work on the structure, when the crash came, and were buried under the debris. The wind reached a velocity of sixty miles an hour, the highest on record at the weather bureau. A number of buildings were damaged.

Suffering in Wrecked Section.

Rome, Ga.—Terrible injuries and frightful hardships have been sustained by the people of the district swept by the cyclone, where thirty are reported seriously injured, in addition to the eleven killed outright by the force of the storm. Medical aid has been sent and the people of Rome have called a mass meeting to raise relief funds. Miss Fannie Holt, one of those hurt, had a stick driven through her side and is in a serious condition, following an operation.

Oldham Declared Arkansas Governor.

Little Rock, Ark.—State Senator W. K. Oldham, who, as president of the senate at the time of Governor Robinson resigned, was installed as acting governor, was declared legally entitled to the office by Circuit Judge Fulk, before whom mandamus and ouster proceedings were brought by Senator J. M. Futrell. An appeal to the Arkansas supreme court will be taken. Final settlement of the controversy is expected within two weeks. Futrell, who was elected president of the senate, claimed the office.

WILSON OUTLINES POLICY

ONE OBJECT WILL BE TO CULTIVATE FRIENDSHIP OF THE REPUBLICS TO THE SOUTH.

No Sympathy With Those Who Seek to Seize Power to Advance Their Own Personal Interests.

Washington.—President Wilson issued a formal statement of his policy toward the Central and South American republics. He said in part:

"One of the chief objects of my administration will be to cultivate the friendship and deserve the confidence of our sister republics of Central and South America and to promote in every proper and honorable way the interests which are common to the peoples of the two continents. I earnestly desire the most cordial understanding and co-operation between the people and leaders of America and therefore deem it my duty to make this brief statement.

"We shall lend our influence of every kind to the realization of these principles in fact and practice, knowing that disorder, personal intrigue and defiance of constitutional rights weaken and discredit government and injure none so much as the people.

"We are the friends of peace, but we know that there can be no lasting or stable peace in such circumstances. As friends, therefore, we shall prefer those who act in the interest of peace and honor, who protect private rights and respect the restraints of constitutional provision. Mutual respect seems to us the indispensable foundation of friendship between states.

TO ENFORCE PUBLICITY LAW

Only Order by U. S. Supreme Court Will Restrain Postmaster General.

Washington.—Unless the Supreme court restrains Postmaster General Burleson from enforcing the newspaper publicity law, as it was asked to do, he will immediately do so regardless of an agreement by former Postmaster General Hitchcock to withhold action pending a determination of its constitutionality.

Final notices have been sent to a number of publishers that if they do not furnish the information required by law within ten days their publications will be denied to the mails.

Approximately 91 per cent. of the publications affected have filed their reports with the postmaster general and otherwise have complied with the law. The delinquents constitute about 9 per cent. and generally include the larger daily newspapers in Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, St. Louis and other cities. The number of publications which have not filed reports due last October is about one hundred and eighty.

Pardons Man Whom He Defended.

Raleigh, N. C.—Governor Craig pardoned F. C. Watkins, the Black Mountain constable, whom he defended for killing John Hill Bunting, a prominent traveling man, in a hotel. Craig relates the testimony, declaring Bunting and a banker, Paul Collins, had terrorized the hotel guests and Watkins was called after midnight to restore order. The governor says they attacked Watkins, and he shot them in self-defense. "I defended Watkins, do not believe he is guilty, he ought not to have been convicted."

Lewis No Longer in Office.

Washington.—William H. Lewis, the negro assistant attorney general, is no longer in office. His resignation was accepted by James Clark McReynolds, the new attorney general, who hails from Tennessee. Lewis was the negro attorney for whom Mr. Wickersham, the former attorney general of the United States put up such a strong fight when the American Bar association sought to cancel his membership on the ground that it was secured under a misapprehension.

RAIL VALUATION A GIGANTIC TASK

NO GOVERNMENT HAS EVER ESSAYED A TASK OF GREATER MAGNITUDE.

TREMENDOUS UNDERTAKING

Bill Requires Commerce Commission to Ascertain Physical Value of Every Railroad.

Washington.—The interstate commerce commission is shortly to enter upon the biggest piece of work it has ever undertaken.

No governmental agency in this or any other country has ever essayed a task of greater magnitude. The work of a tariff commission is a schoolboy's problem in comparison.

This stupendous task is nothing more nor less than to make a complete valuation of all the public utility property of the United States, which comes under the jurisdiction of the interstate commerce commission, as provided for in the bill of Representative Adamson of Georgia.

The Adamson bill passed the house early in the last session. It was sent over to the senate, where a number of experts of wide experience were consulted as to the practical difficulties to be overcome in the work which this measure outlined. After making verbal changes suggested by their experience in similar lines of work, Senator LaFollette reported the favorable action of the senate committee to the senate and the bill was passed.

The measure does more than require a physical valuation. It provides for a complete financial history of every piece of property owned by a public utility corporation and used by it in its business. After this mass of material, which is expected to take a large force of trained men three or four years to dig up, is collected, it must then be kept constantly up-to-date by the interstate commerce commission.

HUNDREDS ARE HOMELESS

Conditions Pitiable in Alabama Towns. Martial Law at Brewton.

Mobile, Ala.—Two hundred persons are homeless in Brewton, unsheltered from the cold wave which has Alabama in its grasp. The flood there, which reached its crest has not abated. One life is known to have been lost, that of a negro woman. Many are injured.

The town is in darkness, for the rise of water put the electric lighting plant out, as well as others. Business is paralyzed, and the struggle at present is for life.

Martial law has been declared by the chief of police. Boats and rafts are being used to rescue the stricken. Houses are swept clean and household goods float in the waters.

According to a traveling salesman who made his way by boat from Castlebury to Brewton, the former town is in a condition as pitiable as that of Brewton.

MAKE HAUL OF $350,000

Thieves Tunnel Into Gotham Pawnshop and Secure Fortune.

New York.—An east side burglary, perpetrated by clever cracksmen, netted the thieves the largest haul obtained in New York in many years. Martin Simmons & Sons, pawnbrokers in Hester street, were the victims, and the property stolen includes $250,000 worth of jewelry, diamonds and other precious stones, and $100,000 worth of negotiable securities.

The thieves gained access to the pawnbroker's richly stored vaults by means of a tunnel from an abutting building on a neighboring street. They made a clean getaway with their valuable loot.

The police are of the opinion that six cracksmen were employed on the job and that the tunneling required all of one night and the greater part of a day. It is their belief that the actual robbery took place while hundreds of persons were passing along the street in front of the pawnshop.

War Urged Against Child Labor.

Jacksonville, Fla.—A resolution holding among other things that the employment of child labor had certainly brought reproach upon American industry, while only a small percentage of factories recruit their working forces from juvenile toilers, was enthusiastically adopted here at a mass meeting held under the auspices of the National Child Labor conference, which is in session here, and therefore urgently requests the National Manufacturers' association to aid in its abolition.

Turkey Rejects Terms of Allies.

London, England.—There is no prospect of the acceptance by Turkey of the peace terms as proposed by the allies. Dispatches from Constantinople say that the leading members of the committee of Union and Progress have decided that the conditions could not be accepted, and it is understood that the council of ministers has adopted the same view. At other capitals and among the ambassadors in London the allies' demands are considered extravagant.

MISS MARY L. DUKE

Miss Mary L. Duke, heiress to the $60,000,000 of her father, Benjamin N. Duke, is a petite and charming brunette whose hand is sought in marriage by various members of the nobility of Europe. Prince Pignatelli shot himself because of unrequited love of her.

REVOLT SPREADS IN MEXICO

AT LEAST A DOZEN MEXICAN STATES ARE NOW UP IN ARMS.

Rebels Are Taking Towns on the Border and Setting Up a Government.

Eagle Pass, Texas.—State officials in Piedras Negras, the Mexican town opposite Eagle Pass and known during the iDaz regime as Ciudad Porfiro Diaz, claimed to have authoritative information of the plight of government forces at three widely separated points in Mexico. They declared that Durango, capital of the state of the name, has been captured by 2,000 Constitutionalists under Juan Garcia, former candidate for governor, that General Trucy Aubert and his force is isolated in the vicinity of Reata, eastern Coahuila, and that Torreon, in western Coahuila, is menaced by 2,000 Constitutionalists under Colonel Triana.

The Constitutionalists in Coahuila claim the support of ten states in opposition to the Huerta government, according to dispatches received here and it is declared that Coahuila, Sonora, Zacatecas, San Luis Potosi, Tamaulipas, Campeche, Yucatan, Aguas Calientes, Chihuahua and Durango, have flocked to the Carranza standard and that organized opposition to the government is progressing in other states.

Nogales, Arizona.—Colonel Kasterlitzky, commanding the rurales defending Nogales, Sonora, deployed his men in small bands in the hills surrounding the town while one thousand Constitutionalists were encamped within easy advancing distance of the town under General Obregon.

Official of the town have been promised by the rebel general they will receive warning immediately before the beginning of his attack on the town across the street.

Douglas, Ariz.—Agua Prieta fell to the Constitutionalist sympathizers who crossed the border from Douglas. Not a shot was fired. General Ojeda, commanding the Federal garrison with about five hundred men, evacuated the town, leaving thirty rural police to guard Federal interests.

After the surrender of the border town, 650 state troops under Colonel Galles arrived, and a provisional municipal government was set up.

Preacher Must Hang.

Fort Smith.—Marion Capps, miner and minister, was found guilty of burning three of his five children to death, and was sentenced to be hanged. Capps, it was charged, bound his children to an oil-soaked bed in their home in the village of Bonanza, near Fort Smith, and set the building afire. Bertha Capps, 15 years old, and her brother, Ellis, a year younger, testified at the trial that when they were awakened by their father locking the door to their room they were tied to the bed.

Decrease in Middies Opposed.

Washington. — Secretary of the Navy Daniels announced that he would seek to have the incoming congress extend the provisions of the law of 1903 authorizing the appointment of two midshipmen to the naval academy every four years by each senator, representative and delegate in congress. This law expires this year, and unless it is extended the number of appointments to the academy will be reduced from 1,039 to 523. "The capacity of the naval academy," said Secretary Daniels, "is sufficient."

SIX MUST HANG; NEW TRIAL REFUSED

SUPREME COURT OF ALABAMA REFUSES APPLICATIONS IN CAPITAL CASES.

SMITH GRANTED NEW TRIAL

Condemned Men Will Suffer Death Sentence Unless Governor O'Neal Interferes.

Montgomery, Ala.—The supreme court of Alabama has refused applications for rehearings in six capital cases which were presented to that tribunal and unless Governor O'Neal interferes each of the defendants will be compelled to suffer the death sentence. The condemned men are Walter Jones, Arthur Jones and William Watson of Birmingham, and Walter Jones, Arnold Gilmer and John Adams of Montgomery.

One application, that of Joy Smith of Alabama City, sentenced to death for the murder of Policeman Patterson early in January, 1912, was granted, the certificate having been withdrawn and the case continued until the next regular session of the court.

Two of the six men whose applications were overruled will go to the gallows March 21, while the remainder are sentenced to suffer the death penalty two weeks late, on Friday, April 4.

The Birmingham men are white, and were sentenced to death for murder in connection with the Lewisburg crimes, in 1911. Two of the men, Arthur Jones and William Watson, were sentenced to death for the murder of a negro, John Holland, while walter Jones, the brother of Arthur, was sentenced for the murder of Lawrence B. Evans. The date for the execution of Arthur Jones and William Watson has been set for March 21.

The most prominent of the Montgomery men sentenced to death, Walter Jones, white, who murdered Sloan Rowan, a Lowndes county merchant, on July 18, last. Arnold Gilmer, another white man of Montgomery, under death sentence, was convicted of the murder of Mrs. Lucile Tippets.

The other condemned murderers of Montgomery are John Adams and Coleman, negroes. Adams was sentenced for the murder of Policeman Berry two years ago. And Coleman will pay the death penalty for the murder of a negro woman, his paramour. The date set for the execution of Walter Jones of Birmingham, and the Montgomery defendants is Friday, April 4.

Whether Governor O'Neal will interfere with the sentence of the court in reference to six capital cases is a question that was asked in official circles with practically a unanimous opinion inclining to the belief that he will refuse to do so. It is understood that the governor has been looking into the cases since they were decided by the supreme court, and that the general impression is that he will let the law take its course. So far as can be learned, it is believed that the governor is of the opinion that each of the condemned murderers received a fair and impartial trial, and unless convinced that he should interfere with the sentence of the court, there is hardly any hope that he will take any action whatever in regard to the six cases.

CALLS CONGRESS TO MEET.

Tariff First on Program, Says Underwood.

Washington.—President Wilson issued his formal proclimation calling Congress together in extra session at noon on April 7, "to receive such cummunication as may be made by the executive."

The extra session will begin with nothing but the tariff revision bills before it. This fact was made clear in a statement by Representative Underwood, chairman of the House committee on ways and means. Until tariff legislation is well under way in the House no general committees will be named and no other legislative subjects will be taken up.

The President specified no subject for the extra session in his proclamation, but it is fully understood that his message to Congress at its opening will dwell upon the need of tariff revision. If currency, Philippine independence, Alaskan affairs, woman suffrage or other pressing questions are finally forced upon the attention of Congress, it will be only after the democratic leaders of the two houses and the President are convinced that the success of the tariff revision is assured.

TOWN REPORTED SWEPT AWAY.

Property Loss of More Than $50,000 Reported At Garland—Lives Endangered.

Montgomery, Ala.—A report was received by Governor O'Neal this afternoon to the effect that the town of Garland in Butler county had been entirely swept away by the raging floods of the Sepulga river, entailing a property loss of between $50,000 and $100,000 and endangering the lives of the 200 or more inhabitants of that place.

MONEY MARKET SLIGHTLY EASIER

German Position Bettered By Gold From United States—Rates Much Firmer.

New York.—Dun's Trade Review says:

Business activity is steadily maintained and in some lines shows improvements, although there is some backward movements noted. Money markets are slightly easier, as the outlook for peace in the Balkans becomes better and the German position has been strengthened by accumulations of gold drawn in part from the United States.

Weather conditions are responsible for some decrease in activity in the shoe trade, but on the whole retail distribution is large and the spring outlook is favorable.

New building operations are increasing as the spring approaches and dependent trades feel the benefit.

While there has been no expansion in actual sales of pig iron, yet specifications in finished lines are of record breaking volume. The textile industries and drug goods distributing trades are in a wholesome condition, although merchants are not overstocking. While there has been some shading of the price of wool the woolen and worsted mills are exceedingly well employed. Prices of cotton and the leading grains tend downward, but there is little speculation. Reports from the principal trade centers are for the most part satisfactory. The labor situation has improved.

New York.—Bradstreet's Review of Trade says:

Trade, crop and industrial reports continue to present favorable aspects, and although some branches of textiles manifest more or less concern about the effects on future trade of tariff changes, the general situation throughout most sections of the country is characterized by good consumptive demand.

"Reports about winter wheat are in the main favorable, and preparations from new crops are going forward. The grain movement in the northwest and corn belt is heavy, but elsewhere it tends to recede. However, an early and heavy movement down the lakes is indicated.

"Open weather enables outdoor construction work to display activity, farmers are beginning to call for spring help, the railways continue to do well and operations in the steel and iron industry are active.

"Demand for money is active, rates are firmer, and tension over sea, together with domestic wants incident to spring farm work and forthcoming heavy settlements will make for continued high rates. Stock market operations, characterized by a weakness of new industrial stocks and a number of bonds, followed by a little strength later, reflect buying, with the general tendency to back and fill.

"Business failures for the week ending March 13 were 284, which compares with 241 in the like week of 1912. There were 34 failures in Canada.

"Wheat, including flour, exports from the United States and Canada for the week ending March 13 aggregated 2,731,547 bushels, against 3,689,078 bushels last week, and 3,332,056 bushels this week last year."

INSTALL OLDHAM AS GOVERNOR

The Supreme Court May Settle Arkansas State Contest.

Little Rock.—State Senator W. K. Oldham, who, as president of the senate at the time Governor Robinson resigned, was installed as acting governor, was declared legally entitled to the office by Circuit Judge Fulk before whom mandamus and ouster proceedings were brought by Senator J. M. Futrell. An appeal to the Arkansas supreme court will be taken. Final settlement of the controversy is expected within two weeks.

One Hundredth Anniversary of Treaty of Ghent to Be Observed.

Helena, Mont.—Governor Stewart approved the Kiley boxing bill and named a state boxing commission. Under the law 12 round contests are to be permitted under the supervision of the commission.

Suffragette Wins Legal Fight.

New York.—Miss Inez Milholland, prominent as a leader in the cause of woman suffrage, found herself on the winning side in the first trial, in which she appeared in the role of assistant counsel. The trial was that of Gee D. Yung, a member of the Gu Leong tongs, and after five minutes' deliberation the jury acquitted him of being responsible for the death of Wung Fong of the Hip Sing tong in a battle last October in the ancient war between the two tongs.

SAW MILL BLOWS UP

EN GULLAHORN BADLY INJURED OTHERS KILLED.

Last Saturday morning news was flashed over the wires to Clanton that the boiler in the saw mill of Mr. Len Gullahorn, near Verbena, had exploded with fatal results. Many were the expressions of sorrow and horror expressed upon the streets; it was afternoon before the true facts could be ascertained as those who survived the wreck were busily engaged caring for the dead and injured. Physicians from Clanton were summoned and rendered all the relief possible under the circumstances. The explosion was caused, so stated, by the water in the boiler being rather low while the fire was intense. The plant was a complete wreck; the boiler having been blown into small bits and scattered for miles in different directions, while the piles of lumber and logs near the mill were hurled through the air for some distance.

Mr. Len Gullahorn, proprietor of the mill, was standing with another gentleman some distance from the mill, but the impact was so great that it tossed him fifty or more yards over lumber piles into a marsh, where he landed on his head. Mr. Gullahorn, while seriously injured, is resting well and will be able to go about his accustomed business within a short time.

Elder Speigner, the negro fireman, was blown literally to bits; parts of his body were found a hundred yards from the scene of the explosion, and it was some time after the catastrophe before his head was found; his teeth were found in one direction, while his arms seem to have been blown in an opposite direction.

Ben Glass, a negro log turner, was instantly killed, though his body was not badly mutilated.

Roy Turner, a white employee of the mill, sustained several severe scalp wounds and was otherwise injured though he is now considered entirely out of danger.

Curtis Gordon, a a negro sawyer, was the most seriously injured of all, his head and body receiving deep gashes from flying debris; he will recover, however.

Levy Abercrombie, another negro employee, was badly injured but is going about his usual duties and seems not to have suffered greatly.

Mr. Gullahorn's injuries were at first thought to be fatal; it was said at first that he would assuredly lose the sight of one eye, but this report seems to have been erroneous, as he is now rapidly recovering.

The force of the explosion was felt several miles away; people working in the nearby fields say that they could see parts of the boiler and other machinery flying high in the air and that it resembled, they imagined, what a volcanic eruption would be like.

The machinery of the mill—including the boiler—while not new, was in perfect condition; this is shown by the fact that it did not give way at any particular point but was blown to bits from end to to end.

The mill was completely wrecked, but will be rebuilt as soon as Mr. Gullahorn has recovered sufficiently to give it his attention.

There was no insurance of any kind upon the mill and the Press learns that no one connected with the mill carried accident insurance.

While the loss will fall heavily upon Mr. Gullahorn, he congratulates himself that he escaped with his life.

BOND ISSUE CARRIES IN CULLMAN COUNTY

Cullman, Ala., (Special)—The bond election held here recently was the quietest election ever held in Cullman. The city precincts and Cullman beat gave 700 to 48 in favor of bonds. Hanceville, the next largest beat, gave 190 to 25 in favor of bonds. Most of the country precincts are in favor of bonds and the general majority reached to nearly 1000. Cullman is jubilant and the celebration took place within a few hours.

LET'S TOTE FAIR

COMPLAINTS BEING REGISTERED

When the Press announced that it would put on another contest, and asked several of the merchants to join in with us to make it a success, we stated at the same time that it would, in all respects, be conducted upon a high plane of equity and fairness. We meant every word we said; and we are going to see, as best we can, that the contestants get a "square deal" from all sources. However, it has come to us that certain merchants associated with us in the contest are not assisting, in all respects, as they should; for instance, two young ladies have reported that when they requested contest tickets they were requested, in return, to sell them back to the merchant at a nominal cost; another stated that purchases were made and the purchaser informed that the goods were sold at so close a figure that tickets could not be given; another stated that a neat little sum in cash was spent in a certain store and, forgetting to ask for tickets, none were given; upon returning, however, and asking for tickets for the purchases recently made, they were refused, because the transaction had been closed. This latter complaint was, perhaps, not an equitable one for, if purchasers desire tickets, either for themselves or for friends, they should ASK for the tickets or else have it understood. with the merchant that tickets will be called for at a later date. If a person makes purchases and leave a store without having ASKED for tickets, or having made some arrangement for their future delivery, it would, manifestly, work a hardship upon the merchant, for it would necessitate his keeping an actual record of all cash purchases, a record of those to whom he gave out tickets and a record of those to whom he had failed to give tickets. The sure way to secure tickets is to ASK for them when the purchases are made and then deliver them to the young lady you desire to have them.

As for the purchasing of tickets by the merchants from their cash customers that is, without doubt unfair to to the PRESS as well as to the contestants: assuredly no merchant would offer a customer less for their tickets than the price paid to the PRESS for them, for we are selling them so cheap that it scarcely pays for the stock and printing.

We are hanging up a $400 piano to be given absolutely FREE to the successful contestant; do you suppose for a moment that we are doing this for our health altogether? Have you any sort of idea that we are doing this merely to attract cash trade to certain merchants? Of course we want the merchants who are co-operating with us to get all the cash trade possible but we are free to admit that unless we were to get something out of it we would not offer a $400 piano, simply to benefit others.

Out of the proceeds derived from the sale of the tickets we hope to pay for the piano to be given away; but, if merchants continued to purchase tickets from their customers rather than from us we would assuredly be at a great loss and they would profit nothing.

The idea is co-operation—not opposition; manifestly, it is unfair to expect the PRESS to offer a prize of any kind if the merchants who are supposed to be with us are in reality against us—and, nothing short of actual opposition could possibly be made out of such transactions as have been reported. We feel confident that those working with us will not require more than a simple reminder and we earnestly hope that the young ladies who have enlisted in the contest will continue their enthusiastic work; we wish again to assure them that any irregularities reported to us will be rectified at the earliest possible moment.

If offers are made by those interested in the contest to purchase tickets from their customers (and we hope none have really been made) we are sure such offers will not be repeated, after attention has been called to the fact that we are giving a large prize to assist in securing cash trade for them and that they should, in fairness to us, "tote" their part of the contract. In the meantime don't

TREATISE ON GOOD ROADS

Editor Clanton Press:

Please a few remarks in regard to good roads and bond issue, as you have been so liberal as to open your columns to the public to discuss plans for good roads, here I come.

In the first place I am opposed to bond issue to begin with.

First, because it means for the county to go in debt to stay in debt, and then too, I see so much money paid out unprofitably, and why, because in our neighboring counties we see people trying to build a road on a fifteen foot bed and that is very much like trying to put a bushel of corn in a half bushel measure; you can't do it and there is no use trying.

Now, while I am opposed to bond issue, but I am not so prejudiced that when I can't see a good thing I will not see the next best thing to it.

So lets have the bond issue to meet the Federal aid. I don't believe Chilton county is able to float a sufficient amount of bonds to build her roads, and maintain them, but, with the aid we can get from the Federal government, we can build her roads and maintain them.

Now let's get together before we vote on a bond issue and agree that we will open up our roads. All post roads forty feet wide and all other roads thirty feet wide, or I tell you again it is impossible to build a road upon a fifteen foot road bed; it is a waste of time and money to try, hence my opposition to bond issue. You can build up a fairly good road on a fifteen foot road bed for a short time. Just as soon as you and I meet in the road your wheels are in one ditch and mine in the other, hence the ditch is stopped up, the water turned into the road and then a mud hole to pull into and break your wagon and "cuss" the bond issue. Not more than a week ago I was traveling at night and met a man in a buggy and he had to lift his buggy up in the corner of the fence before I could pass him, and this was a post road.

Now Mr. Atkinson says he believes that Chilton county can build her roads and stay out of debt. He says why not, because we are forced to judge the future by the past. They have never built her roads nor never, never will on a 15-foot road bed; they are further from it today than they have ever been, and they never did since time begun, and why, because it is impossible to put a bushel of corn in half bushel measure, and we are living in a fast age, everybody is in a hurry to get there. When there was no traffic there was no need of a road, and there was none. Now as Judge Deason says with the present traffic you can't nor never will build or maintain a road under the old system; but let's have the bond issue and get all the Federal aid we can pay our tax as usual and build the roads—post roads forty feet, all other roads 30 feet; then I will tell you how to maintain them if I don't make my letter too long. As Mr. Atkinson and the Union-Banner said, let Judge Deason call a mass meeting, but let's devise means to open our roads 40 and 30 feet wide and you will have to make it a law or there will be some that will never give back for the road. Brother, don't kick out of the harness before you give a consideration and say what bond issue aid from the Federal government and pay tax too. Yes, do that and save money by so doing.

Respectfully,

J. E. McCULLOUGH.

Tales of GOTHAM and other CITIES

Wins by Pen; Voice Loses; Refused a License

NEW YORK.—Harry Segal of 107 East 115th street is living proof of the accepted theory that most men who wield a facile pen do not express their views so well orally and that the extemporaneous speaker is not always a literary success.

Segal is a plumber, and he did well in the written examination before the examining board of plumbers for his certificate of competency. But there were seven other candidates who did exactly as well as Segal; in fact, in the same language, which caused the board to investigate. The result was that they and the commissioners of accounts, who took part in the investigation, believed fraud had been perpetrated by the eight whose answers to the questions were the same.

It was decided that either some one had impersonated Segal or else he had a list of the questions asked him before the examination. The certificate granted to Segal was revoked.

Segal was called on when the board first became suspicious to repeat orally some of the things he wrote in his first examination. First he was asked about certain words that appeared on his examination paper. Diameter appeared as "diametar" in the original examination, and on the oral try Segal spelled it "deamete." Friction, which he got right the first time, appeared the second time as "fricksen." Circulation he spelled "cerkoelsen."

Segal explained that his answers to questions were based on his reading books on the subject. An examiner of the examining board of plumbers looked over the books, but could find nothing that related to the subject on which Segal was examined.

Here are some of the questions put to Segal by the commissioners of accounts and his answers.

"What is the action of a suction pump?"

"It is known as a pump that takes water from the cellar to the top floor."

"What is a receptacle?"

"It is like a receptic."

"What does impede mean?"

"Impedes is a thing like—I can't remember."

"What is a pump?"

"I don't remember."

Mare Tries Suicide; Fire Tug Has Narrow Escape

CLEVELAND, O.—A small, black, untamed mare, fresh from the wilds of Arkansas, jumped in the river across from the life-saving station after being unloaded from a box car at the foot of W. 9th street early the other morning.

In effecting the horse's rescue the firetug Clevelander struck a log which stove in a hole about a foot square on the starboard side below the water line, and the boat nearly sank before it could be tied up in a shallow spot in the Sycamore slip.

Hugh O'Neil, to whom the consignment of wild horses was made, received a kick in the stomach when he, together with Captain James Nimmo, of the Clevelander, three of his crew and Captain Hansen of the life-saving crew, attempted to lead the animal over the concrete piers to shore.

When released from the car the animal broke away from the others and ran through the railroad yards, out past the freight houses on the river front to a point near the customs office and opposite the life saving station.

Hesitating only a moment, she jumped to the ice and skated about ten or fifteen minutes, apparently enjoying the experience. The mare's unfamiliarity with so large an expanse of ice proved her undoing. She got near the edge and it broke, throwing her into the water.

The men on shore called for the firetug, which steamed down the river and broke a channel through the ice from the horse to a concrete runway leading up to the life saving station.

For an hour and fifteen minutes she swam about in the cold water, resting her nose on cakes of ice when tired. Considering that it was probably her first swimming lesson, and that under untoward conditions, she proved herself an Annette Kellerman among horses.

She displayed an unreasonable desire to swim in the general direction of Canada. Having opened up a channel the crew of the tug lassoed her and towed her across. She walked up the runway and shook herself, seemingly grateful for being saved.

Brave Bulldog Captures a Supposed Safe Blower

CHICAGO.—A dog the other night captured a youth supposed to be a member of a band of safeblowers and held him until the police arrived to take him into custody.

While only a volunteer aid to the overworked police department, the bulldog took hold of things when they got beyond the grasp of Detective Sergeants Mullin and Burns.

So careful was he that his prisoner should not escape that it required all the persuasive power of the two policemen, two other members of the band to which the youth is supposed to belong and the prisoner himself to effect his transfer to the arms of the law. Then a weak spot in the things the dog took hold of when they got beyond the grasp of the detectives was largely responsible for the transfer. The dog kept the weak spot.

The detectives arrested three young men, Michael Meffi, 18 years old; Joseph Missina, 22 years old and William Pisano, 18 years old, at 18th and State streets. They started toward the loop with them on a State street car. At 16th street Pisano leaped from the car and ran toward the lake. Forcing their other two captives ahead of them, the detectives followed, but Pisano, unhampered, easily outdistanced them and disappeared in a yard at 16th street and the Illinois Central tracks.

It was here that the dog became interested. He resented Pisano's intrusion upon his undivided occupancy of the yard, but once he grasped things beyond the officers, he held on.

Pisano's cries attracted the panting minions of the law and the struggle for his transfer began.

Mullin and Burns failed to learn the address of the owner of the dog. They did not have time. He transferred his dislike when he was forced to transfer his prisoner, and took no trouble to conceal that fact.

Bees Brimming With Energy Give Grocer Worry

PITTSBURG, Pa.—There is a grocer in the East End who knows the answer to the question, "How doth the little busy bee?"

What he doesn't know is just what to do when the bees get busy.

The industrious little critters own one complete window section of his store. They are feeding on his sugar, sampling his candy, profiting by his figs and mixing up his dates; and now they are about ready to start a hive.

It all began when an eastern firm made arrangements with the grocer to give a demonstration of the making of honey. With a pretty girl and a bunch of industrious bees the demonstration was bound to be a success.

The girl arrived, and she was according to specifications. The bees arrived, by parcel post, and everything was ready for the big advertising stunt. Then Fate butted in and broke the onto little glass house the bees inhabited.

Instantly the honeymakers started out on a foraging expedition. There was nothing in the store they didn't sample.

"Shut the door! Shut the door!" cried the demonstrator, "or they'll get out."

"All right, honey," replied a grocery clerk, forgetting himself in his excitement.

But the stout woman customer waxed hot when she was urged to "shoo" them. "I'd rather slipper 'em," she declared.

But everybody else "shooed," and by and by the bees were corralled in the window section and the section door shut.

The perplexed demonstrator wired east for instructions. In the meantime the bees held the fort.

"Stung!" says the grocer.

BUSINESS CONDITIONS CONTINUE EXCELLENT

Money Outlook Abroad Is Still Grave Roads Heavy Buyers.

New York.—Dun's Weekly Review of Trade says:

General business conditions continue in the main excellent.

The volume of trade, both domestic and foreign, is, however, for purchases of mostly immediate requirements. While there is less strain in the European markets and the Balkan situation has improved, the monetary outlook abroad is still a matter of some concern.

This country has been called upon again to export gold and since the beginning of the year has sent abroad about $46,000,000.

The balance of merchandise exports over imports, however, is heavily in our favor, amounting to over $44,000,000. Our foreign commerce in February exceeded all previous records for that month. Advices that principal trade centers, while showing a recession in merchantile activity at a few points owing to adverse weather conditions and local labor troubles generally, indicate a material improvement. The distinguishing feature of the iron and steel trade are the heavy purchases by the railroads and implement makers.

New York.—Bradstreet's Review of Trade says:

Though wholesale trade reports are inclined to manifest more or less irregularity, due principally to financial factors, retail trade has expanded in a rather noteworthy way, and jobbing lines which are somewhat quiet in the eastern and southern parts of the country maintain a satisfactory pace in most other sections.

Consumption appears to be of large proportions and while numerous srtikes are being waged throughout the country, industrial operations are such as to afford widespread employment.

Soil conditions as a whole are favorable, winter wheat prospects being good. Farmers are going forward with preparations for the ensuing season.

At the moment the money situation with its effect upon credit granting seems the main cause of complaint as regards general business for the future.

Business failures for the week ending March 20 were 218, which compared with 252 in the like week of 1912. There were 29 failures in Canada. Wheat, including flour exports from the United States and Canada for the week ending March 20, aggregate 598,104 bushels, against 3,069,075 bushels last year.

FORMER GOVERNOR BLACK DEAD

Well Known Republican Statesman Dies of Heart Disease in Troy, New York.

Troy, N. Y.—Former Gov. Frank S. Black, long prominent in national republican politics, died at his home here. Valvular disease of the heart, with which he had been afflicted for some time, was the cause.

Mr. Black was born at Limington, Me., Marc h8, 1853. He was graduated from Dartmouth college in 1875 and for a time was editor of the Johnstown, N. Y., Journal. In 1879 he was admitted to the bar. He served as a member of Congress from 1895 to 1897 and occupied the gubernatorial chair from 1897 to 1899. He was prominent in party affairs for many years.

In January, 1912, Mr. Black announced that when he reached his sixtieth birthday, March 8, 1913, he would retire from his profession and spend the remainder of his days on his farm at Freedom, N. H.

"Money," he said, "is not all of happiness. It is a mighty good thing to have, but I could never reconcile my efforts to get money with real happiness."

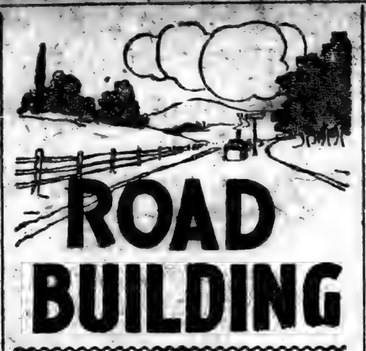
Mr. Black was a candidate for reelection to the governorship but the "organization" of which Thomas C. Platt was leader brought about the nomination of Theodore Roosevelt.

Mr. Black resumed practice of law and was identified with many important cases, including the Molineux case.

MILLION DOLLARS A DAY.

Record for Current Fiscal Year Shows Enormous Movement of Steel.

Washington.—A million dollars' worth a day is now the export record of the iron and steel manufacturers of the United States. The official records for the current fiscal year show $215,000,000 worth of iron and steel manufacturers exported in the 215 days for which a statistical record is available.



Girls Escape By Jumping.

Philadelphia, Pa.—The laboratory of the Munson Homeopathic Home Remedy company, in West Philadelphia, was destroyed by fire. The loss is estimated at $50,000 on the building, and $150,000 on its contents. Many of the 250 girls employed in the building escaped by jumping.

ROAD BUILDING

MAKE BETTER PUBLIC ROAD.

Experience Has Taught That Much Work Can Be Done During the Winter and Early Spring.

At this time of year much interest is aroused concerning road improvement. As has been found out by experience, much work can be done to earth roads early in the season, in fact, during the winter and spring when they soften, if they are systematically dragged there is no equal amount of work that can be done with as good effect at any other time of the year.

The law permits the highway commissioners to make contracts with persons living alongside a road to do the dragging. To facilitate this work, the state highway commission has just issued blank contract forms which may be used by commissioners in making their contracts, says the Farm Home. These blank forms are bound with stubs attached like an ordinary check book and are very convenient. They will be furnished free of charge to any highway commissioner who will apply for them to the state highway commissioner, Springfield, Ill.

Crushed Rock Road in Missouri.

The commission has also just issued a pamphlet on the procedure that should be taken when a vote on hard roads is proposed. Much time and expense will be saved if all who are interested in having petitions circulated and vote taken will be sure that all steps have been taken in accordance with the law. Instances are constantly arising where through a misstep at some point or other the whole proceeding is made invalid, causing delay and expense. Any one wishing information concerning the township hard road law of the state of Illinois can get the pamphlet here mentioned free of charge on application to the Illinois highway commission, Springfield, Ill.

GOOD ROADS IN CALIFORNIA

Pacific Coast State Ranks Next to New York in Making Appropriations for Improvement.

Next to New York, California is doing the big thing in road building. It has 2,300 miles of main routes and 400 miles of laterals, and it is spending its lump appropriation of $18,000,000, of which it is said, "Approximately 70 per. cent. of the burden will fall upon the incorporated cities." California communities have the spirit of the times. For instance, Los Angeles the county alone spent $3,500,000 on oil macadam highways.

In Alabama a system of trunk roads from north to south and from east to west has been laid out. Louisiana has spent almost $10,000,000 in four years. Mississippi counties have declared bond issues of $600,000, and the state will spend millions in the next three years. Utah spent $2,000,000 in the past two years. Minnesota is preparing to build 2,700 miles of road next year. Maryland has got its road-building under a rigorous system. Its newest program calls for about $5,000,000 in two years in the 23 counties. This is the latest expert knowledge.

FILLING ROADS AND STREETS

Modern Transportation Demands Best of Thoroughfares—Aim Should Be to Even Filling.

When graveling streets, if the outsides are filled first and the stones raked toward the center and covered, it will leave the surface in nice condition. When the center is filled first it is impossible to cover the stones with the thin covering at the outside of the fill. I noticed a village street that was being raised ten inches with coarse gravel. The center was filled first and the coarse stones raked to the outsides. It required twice the time to do the grading as if the outsides had been filled first and the coarse stones raked toward the deep part of the fill in the center, writes an expert in the Farm and Home. Moreover, the street is spoiled with stones that could not be covered, which will make extra passes to haul away, and it will be a rough road for years to come.

Healthy Baby is Precious Blessing

To Make It Healthy and Keep it Healthy Use a Reliable Baby Laxative

In spite of the greatest personal care and the most intelligent attention to diet, babies and children will become constipated, and it is a fact that constipation and indigestion have wrecked many a young life. To start with a good digestive apparatus is to start life without handicap.

But as we cannot all have perfect working bowels we must do the next best thing and acquire them, or train them to become healthy. This can be done by the use of a laxative-tonic very highly recommended by a great many mothers. The remedy is called Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and has been on the market for two generations. It can be bought conveniently at any drug store for fifty cents or one dollar a bottle, and those who are already convinced of its merits buy the dollar size.

Its mildness makes it the ideal medicine for children, and it is also very pleasant to the taste. It is sure in its effect and genuinely harmless. Very little of it is required and its frequent use does not cause it to lose its effect, as is the case with so many other remedies.

Thousands can testify to its merits in constipation, indigestion, biliousness, sick headaches, etc., among them reliable people like Mrs. M. Johnson, 752 Dayton St., Kenosha, Wis. She is the mother of little Dorothy Johnson who was always in delicate health until her mother gave her Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Mrs. Johnson says:

Dorothy Johnson.

"I never saw such rapid improvement in the health of anyone. Syrup Pepsin is a wonderful remedy and I shall never be without it again." Thousands keep Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin constantly in the house, for every member of the family can use it from infancy to old age. The users of Syrup Pepsin have learned to avoid cathartics, salts, mineral waters, pills and other harsh remedies for they do but temporary good and are a shock to any delicate system.

If no member of your family has ever used Syrup Pepsin, and you would like to make a personal trial of it before buying it in the regular way of a druggist, send your address—a postal will do—to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 203 Washington Street, Monticello, Ill., and a free sample bottle will be mailed you.

KNEW WHEN TO PLEAD GULITY

Jury Selected to Try Buck Horn Were Somewhat Too Familiar With His History.

"Are you guilty or not guilty?" asked the old justice in Macon, Mo., of Buck Horn, who was before the court for stealing a chicken.

"Might's well say Ah's guilty," sullenly replied the accused. "A nigger doan git no show in dis country, no how."

"Don't, eh?" exclaimed the justice. Then he turned to the constable: "Bill, you skirmish around town and pick me up twelve of the blackest niggers you can find for jury duty. Step lively, now!"

In half an hour the little justice mill was full of black men, tall, short, young and old, all grinning knowingly at the defendant. Everyone of them knew Buck from the floor up, and Buck knew they knew. He sniffed disdainfully at the jury of his peers, and then remarked to the court, in an aggrieved tone:

"If yo's gwine ter make all dis fuss ober a two-bit pullet I pleads guilty."

Warranted In Using Cuss Words.

A small boy in Fort Scott was out playing with his wagon one day and just at the critical moment one wheel came off. The youngster walked around the wagon several times and surveyed it with the air of one accustomed to disappointments. As he dragged the wagon to his home he met a boy friend who joined him, and together they trudged on, the Fort Scott Tribune says. The owner of the wagon sat on the front step with a forlorn look; then quickly brightening up he exclaimed: "Let's cuss." "All cuss."—Kansas City Star.

THE KNOW HOW To Feed Children and Get Good Results.

There are more nervous persons made so by undigested food lying in the stomach than the average individual would suppose.

If food remains undigested in the stomach, it begins to ferment, set up gas and a large portion is thus converted into poison.

That's why imperfectly digested food may, and often does, cause irritation of the nerves and stupor of the mind—brain and nerves are really poisoned.

"My daughter had complained for some time of a distressed feeling in the stomach, after eating, which set me thinking that her diet was not right," writes an anxious and intelligent mother.

"She had been fond of cereals, but had never tried Grape-Nuts. From reading the account of this predigested food, it seemed reasonable to try Grape-Nuts for her case.

"The results were really wonderful. The little brain that seemed at times unable to do its work, took on new life and vigor. Every morning, now, before going to school, she eats the crisp little morsels and is now completely and entirely well, she seems to have a new lease on life—no more distress in the stomach, nor headache, but sound and well everyway." WASHINGTON CITY SIDELIGHTS

One Bachelor in President Wilson's Cabinet

WASHINGTON.—Gatherers of statistics who have been compiling facts about the new Wilson cabinet announced with satisfaction the other day that its members are simple, home-loving and by example, active anti-race suicide propagandists.

Of all the cabinet families, only that of Secretary of War Garrison is without children.

Mrs. William Jennings Bryan is a lawyer, like her husband, but she has found time amid her professional duties to rear two children, Mrs. Richard Hargreaves, Jr., and William J. Bryan, Jr., whose wife will make her home in Washington with the family.

Three daughters call Mrs. Albert Sidney Burleson, wife of the postmaster general "mother." One of the daughters, Mrs. Richard VanWick Negley, has a son about six weeks old.

William C. Redfield, secretary of commerce, and Mrs. Redfield have a married daughter and a son, Humphrey Fuller Redfield, who is a student at Amherst college.

Franklin K. Lane, secretary of the interior, has a 16-year-old son, Franklin, Jr., and a daughter, Nancy, several years younger. Mrs. Lane is a college woman, but thoroughly domestic.

If ever an actual anti-race suicide organization is established among the families of the cabinet officers, Mrs. William B. Wilson, wife of the new secretary of labor, will be at its head by right of achievement. She has nine children.

Mrs. Josephus Daniels, wife of the secretary of the navy, also has several children.

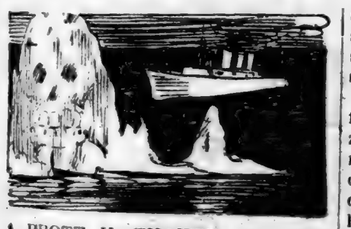
There are three children in the family of David Houston, secretary of agriculture.

Miss Nona McAdoo will preside over the Washington home of her father, William G. McAdoo, the new secretary of the treasury. She made her debut a short time ago. There are two other daughters, one married and three sons.

The only bachelor in the cabinet, which is why he is mentioned last, is Attorney General McReynolds.

Brokers Do a Big Business in Stolen Stamps

INSPECTORS have learned that stamps of all classes and denominations stolen by burglars from post offices and embezzled by employes from great business houses and manufacturing establishments were purchased and resold by the brokers at prices far below their face value.



The postal laws make it a crime punishable by imprisonment to sell any stamp issued by the government for less than its face value. Investigations disclosed the fact that, in addition to selling the stamps for less than a price they could have been purchased for from the government, the brokers in many cases knew that the stamps were stolen when they purchased them.

Stamp frauds against the government and various business concerns aggregating hundreds of thousands of dollars annually have been unearthed in New York City alone, while illegal trafficking in stamps in many other cities has reached large proportions.

One stamp broker in New York City who sells from $300 to $1,000 worth of stamps a day to merchants, it is alleged, has been purchasing some of his supply from an employe of the New York state government at Albany. The employe confessed to post office inspectors that he remitted to the stamp broker from $25 to $50 a week in stamps stolen from the state.

The department redeems postal cards from original purchasers at 75 per cent. of their face value. A few weeks ago a member of congress and a former deputy commissioner of police of New York City requested the third assistant postmaster-general to redeem more than a million cards for a constituent of the representative. Inquiry by inspectors developed the fact that the cards were the property of a stamp broker, whose business is declared by the department officials to be clearly illegitimate.

Expert Says Icebergs Are Invisible by Night

ABBOTT H. THAYER, an artist who has given much study to the question, discusses the invisibility of icebergs at night in the last issue of the bulletin of the hydrographic office. He writes, in part:

"The Titanic and the Arizona ran into icebergs because of the universal notion that white shows at night even against a clear sky. Until this impression can be corrected the world will continue at the mercy of the chance of more ice accidents.

"A steamer may be close to an iceberg on a clear, moonless night, and, as stated above, often on a moonlit night, without the slightest sight of it. Any observing person who has lived in the country knows perfectly well that snowy roofs on such a night are apt to be indistinguishable from the sky, and would always be so if they stood alone out on a plain or out at sea.

"In order to test this matter, notice first that it is the most nearly horizontal top surfaces of a berg, snowy roof or other white object that receive the most skylight, and consequently most nearly match it. It follows that with the average hilltop shape of an iceberg it will be the highest expanses of it visible from the ship's watch that are surest to be indistinguishable. These highest expanses of course constitute the contour that the watch would see if the berg were visible, and when these become thus effaced the berg itself is effaced.

"Even when a near berg is not tall enough to stand up against the sky to the eyes of the watch its top will necessarily be looked at against the most distant part of the sea; and this part averages, especially in calm weather, much brighter than the nearer water; and a sky-matching berg top could not often be distinguished from it any better than from the sky itself."

Beautiful Bronze Sundial Serves as a Landmark

NEARLY all strangers who travel to the beautiful close of the Cathedral of Saint Peter and Saint Paul, on Mount Saint Alban, gather around the sundial. Most of them mount the three granite steps to stand on the narrow granite platform about the sundial and its rectangular pedestal the better to read the inscription and to study the devices engraved on stone and bronze. The structure is called "the cathedral landmark and sundial." According to the handbook of the Washington Cathedral, "On Ascension Day, A. D. 1906, the landmark given by Mrs. Julian James to commemorate the freedom of the cathedral land from debt and the consequent hallowing of the cathedral close was presented and consecrated. This landmark is a beautiful bronze sundial, surmounting an open air altar, on which are inscribed the names of those it commemorates.

Beginning at the northwest edge of the altar is this inscription:

"Transit umbra lux premopset. From the rising of the sun even to the setting down of the same, my name shall be great among the nations, and in every place incense shall be offered unto my name."

On the eastern face of the altar is this inscription:

"This landmark is set up in the cathedral close in memory of Ascension day, A. D. 1906, in the eleventh year of the episcopate of the first Bishop of Washington."

Some of the names carved on the altar sides are Theodorus Bailey Myers, 1831-1888; Catalina Juliana Mason, 1826-1905, and Cassie Mason Myers, Julia James, Frederick James, Edmonia Phelps, Eldon, Mason, Alphonso Sidney Mason and Catherine Kohn.

TERRIBLE AGONIES WORSE MISERY

Advices From Durant's Neck Tell of Mrs. Bazemore's Trying Ordeal, and Her Condition at Present.

Durant's Neck, N. C.—Mrs. Emma Bazemore, of this place, says: "Words fail to express my appreciation and gratitude for the benefit I received from Cardui, the woman's tonic. I suffered agonies from womanly troubles. I tried different doctors, but they didn't help. The last one I went to said I needed an operation, so I agreed to it, and bore those terrible pains. I felt better, but only for a short time, and soon the misery was worse than ever before. I began to use Cardui, and it made me feel entirely different. Now I am the picture of health, weighing 170 pounds. Before I started the treatment, I could not do my housework. Now I can do my work, and I feel so much better."

Cardui, the woman's tonic, acting in its gentle, healing way, upon the womanly organs, helps to restore your natural vigor, and to build up the womanly constitution.

If you are tired, worn-out, weak, nervous, or suffer from any of the ailments peculiar to women, do what over a million other women have done—try Cardui. It cannot do you harm, and is almost sure to help you, just as it has them. Begin taking Cardui today.

SKIN TROUBLE ON LEG

616 W. Grace St., Richmond, Va.—"I had a running sore on my leg for from three to five years. It burst and blood came from it, then it got red around, and was as large as a dollar. It turned white in the middle of the sore, and then began to itch and bleed. After washing it would bleed for hours at a time. Some nights I did not sleep through the whole night. I spent eighty dollars on the sore and it didn't get well. I got worse and fell off to eighty-nine pounds. This went on for four years. I was told it could not get well. One of my friends said I ought to try Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, so I did. After I had used them one month the sore was gone and the itching stopped, and I have never had any trouble since. That was five years ago.

"I had a fever and all my hair came out. I shampooed with a lather of Cuticura Soap and then rubbed the Cuticura Ointment over the scalp and my hair came back and now it is long and glossy." (Signed) Mrs. John Thomas, Mar. 12, 1912.

Kansas City Paper Tells Story of Encounter With Automobilist That Is Hard to Believe.

Thus cynically does the Kansas City Independent speak of the motorist who cares for something else than speed—for he does really exist, appearances to the contrary notwithstanding:

We came upon the motor car standing on the brow of the hill.

"Hello!" we said to the chauffeur. "Broken down?"

"No, sir," he responded.

"Out of gasoline?"

"No, sir. We have plenty."

"Tire punctured?"

"No, sir. The tires are in perfect condition."

"Lost your way?"

"No, sir. The country hereabouts is very familiar."

"Dropped something from the auto?"

"No, sir. Nothing of the sort."

"Then why are you standing here? Why are you not shooting down the hill and across the level at a terrific speed?"

"I do not care to do that," said the owner of the machine, who had been silent until this moment. "Whenever I come this way I have my car stopped here so that I may enjoy the magnificent view from this elevation."

With a frightened glance at him, we turned and hastened to the nearest town, to warn the officials that a person evidently insane was at large in an automobile.

URGING GREAT SALE OF CANNED FOODS

Dealers, grocers, jobbers and manufacturers all over the country are joining hands during the week of March 31st to April 5th in an effort to acquaint housewives with the economy and quality of canned foods.

It is now a well known fact that heat is the only preservative used in preparing these economical foods. The cans are sealed and sterilized at a temperature of 250 degrees, which prevents any contamination and keeps the contents fresh and wholesome as the day the tins were filled in the canneries.

National Canned Foods Week, during which dealers and grocers will make canned foods their sales-features, is for the purpose of demonstrating to housewives that the cost of living can be cut with such foods, and that they may be served in hundreds of delightful ways, and thus served daily without monotony.

The farmer's wife especially finds it advantageous to relieve herself of all the cooking possible and Canned Foods enable her to do this and at the same time improve the quality of her meals.

Women in every community should observe National Canned Foods Week by going to the dealers and putting in a supply. The saving and general satisfaction in the use of Canned Foods is entirely worth while.—Adv.

Directing Children Aright.

The young need to be taught that although there is sometimes a pleasure of the senses in committing sin, it is inevitably followed by remorse and punishment. On the other hand, while it is often hard to do right, the sense of satisfaction, self-respect and self-control that follow right action is worth all the effort made.

Thousands of Women

Have Been Restored to Health By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

There is no doubt about this fact. Why! during the last 30 years we have published in the newspapers of this country volumes of letters from women who have been relieved of all their suffering by the timely aid of this grand old medicine. Letters like the following, true, genuine and honest expressions of gratitude coming from grateful hearts. Surely you can believe these women.

Mrs. L. S. BRENNER, Hudson, Mich., says:—

"Sometime ago I was taken with a terrible pain in my right side, such sharp pains just like a knife sticking me. I tried hot applications but that did no good. I went to our family doctor (we were living in Fayette, Ohio, at that time) and he said it was organic inflammation. I doctored with him a while but kept getting worse. The pain was so terrible I could hardly stand on my feet. I would have that sharp pain in my right side, and a dull heavy pain the whole length of my limb. I realized that something had to be done quickly, so I looked up all of your advertisements I could find, and saw several that described my case. I got a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it helped me from the first dose, and when I had taken two bottles my trouble was gone. Your medicine has done so much for me that I am willing you should publish this letter for the sake of other suffering women."—Mrs. L. S. Brenner, Hudson, Michigan.

Mrs. L. E. BOWERS, Girard, Pa., says:—

"I take pleasure in informing you of what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I had a sick spell last February, and for some months after that I was not regular and had many bad feelings. I was tired all the time, had dull headaches, not much appetite, and also what the doctor called organic inflammation. Your Vegetable Compound has entirely cured me and I feel that too much cannot be said in its praise as I am now able to do my own work. You are perfectly welcome to use my testimonial for the benefit of others."—Mrs. L. E. Bowers, R.F.D. No. 1, Girard, Pa.

Mrs. ELIZABETH GENTILCORE, Buffalo, N.Y., says:—

"I feel that I must write to you about your wonderful remedies. About ten years ago I was troubled with female weakness and was all run down. I was tired all the time and could hardly walk without feeling dizzy. I heard about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, took it, and also used the Sanative Wash. I got stronger, and have not had those dizzy spells since. I feel that I owe my health to you, and hope your remedies will help others as they have me. I tried most everything I heard of, and yours are the best medicines for women's ailments."—Mrs. Elizabeth Gentilcore, 26 Glor Street, Buffalo, New York.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No one sick with woman's ailments does justice to herself if she does not try this famous medicine made from roots and herbs, it has restored so many suffering women to health.

Write to LYDIA E. PINKHAM MEDICINE CO. (CONFIDENTIAL) LYNN, MASS., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

A HOUSEWIFE'S PLEA FOR GOOD ROADS

Mr. Press Man:

Seein the men folks ain't listenin to Judge Deason, F. A. Gulledge, J. O. Wesson, or any of ther kind, maybe they'll hear the pleadins of a woman, as they'er been follow-erin Adam's example sense he herd Eve and eat that apple.

These rainy days put me in mind of last year's wet weathea. Zack was all put out 'cause he couldn't plow; ses I, Zack, "hit's a ill wind what blows nobudy good;" "let's pick them dewberries offen the terraces and sell 'em." All hands fell to, and we soon had three bushels. Zack dressed a fat kid, while me and the chillun gethered up fresh aigs and cabbages.

Zack and Johnny started to Clanton in high sperits, thinkin of the money and good things they wuz goin to bring home. Jest a mile frum our house the road wuz so bad the front waggin wheels broke the mules give a sutten jeck to get out of the deep hole and throwed Zack and Johnny both out, skint Johnny's nose, sprained the old man's hand and took off a hand's breadth of skin offen the off mule's shoulder.

Well, by the time Zack walked to a naber's house and borrowed another wheel and put it on, it wuz night. Not to be out dun, I give them a soon breakfast next mornin tellin them to move along peart, then women could put the berries in ther incubaters and have them cool for dinner. Mind you the roads wuz that muddy; the sun wuz shinin down on the truck in the waggin before they got to Clanton. As soon as they struck town a passel of houn dogs commenced to foller the waggin.

When Zack stopped before a lady's house to begin peddlin out, he went to the back of the waggin and raised the cloth to show his goods; land sakes! no wonder them houns wuz follerin the waggin. The aigs wuz broke and the hull thing mixt up by the awful bumps on the road. The juice frum them berries wuz runnin in a puddle right in front of the woman's door. Zack throwed on the cover and lit out for home as fast as them pesky roads would let him, for he feared he'd be arrested for bringin them spoilt things to town. I told him the roads were to blame for our loss. "Why don't they fix 'em," ses I? Zack sed they wuz mixt up in pollyticks. Tut! ses I, I havint seed a tick sence old Polly died with the tick fever.

The roads down here is mixt up in mud and water; least ways it pears to me. "Zackeriah, ses I, you men folks stop your argufyin, go to work and give us good roads; we can get to town with our truck in good shape and sell it for enough to pay them taxes, or bonds or whatever you call 'em. You dumped enough in the compost pile last year to pay our taxes and buy all of us new hats."

Now, men folks, give us good roads, or must I say you've all gone back on our father Adam?

A Pleadin Housewife.

SOLDIERS HOME

OLD VETERANS ENJOY EASTER SERVICES.

Prof. Eagle, Mrs. Eagle and about 20 young men and ladies from Mountain Creek rendered a select program of church music at the Old Soldiers Home on Sunday, commencing at 2 p.m.

There were at least 300 Chilton county visitors in the hall; twenty coming from Clanton, a large number from Deatsville, Verbena, and Cooper.

Capt. J. M. Simpson and Major C. A. Gunn had all necessary arrangements made, so that when the visitors arrived they could visit over the grounds until the singing was to commence.

The Librarian, Mr. Ignatius O'Reilly, assisted in making everyone comfortable. In a word, the services were a good success and enjoyed by all the old veterans and visitors.

CLIP YOUR HORSES.

A clipped horse will do more work and keep in better condition on same amount of food, than one unclipped, and he will do it with more vim and vigor—easier to keep clean and looks so much better in fact it makes a new horse out of him. Clip him this Spring and you will never let him go through another without being clipped.

We have a first class machine and experienced men to do the work. Our Vetenary Department is equipped with power floats for filling horses teeth without cutting or brushing their gums and mouth like the old style floats. If your horse isn't doing well or does not respond to feed as you think he should; in the majority of cases it is on account of rough or uneven teeth, and a dollar or so to spend toward the correction of the evil, will pay well in the horses rapid improvement, enabling him to properly masticate his food.

Remember we can take care of your horse clipping vetenary, dental work and horse shoeing. Come to see us, We guarantee satisfaction.

MR. ADAMS WRITES ON COUNTY HIGH SCHOOL

Editor of the Press:

Since the enactment of the law providing for County High Schools, the people of Chilton have been sleeping on their rights, and are yet permitting to remain closed, and locked, the door of opportunity to the youth of the county.

It requires no argument to show that the results and returns from a County High School will multiply in such manner as to give the children and future educational advantages which are not now at their command.

We owe it to ourselves to take this matter in hand and make it a reality instead of a dream.

Yours very truly
Wm. M. ADAMS.

GIRLS' TOMATO CLUB WORK IN CHILTON

The season for the organization of Girls' Canning Clubs has opened with an enrollment which is steadily increasing and bids fair to reach, if not exceed, the enrollment of last year, which was at its greatest when numbering ninety-two. The nighest record was near 1000 cans from one-tenth acre; second highest was 733. The former record being made by Miss Vera Williams of Clanton, the latter by Miss Ollie Mims of Clanton. This is an excellent record, though we hope to do even better work this year. The mais things we expect the girls to do are to read the instructions and literature sent to them, cultivate one-tenth acre of tomatoes and their products, and at the end of the season fill out a bank report, which we will send them, and return it to us. Women over 18 may become honorary members, receive literature and instructions and have all the privileges of the Club, but will not be allowed to contest for prizes. It does not cost anything to join the Club.

I wish through these columns to thank the teachers of the county who have sent in enrollments from their schools. In forming these clubs in their schools and community they can assist greatly in furthering this great work. I hope to receive enrollments from still schools, Teachers will please forward their enrollments to me as early as possible so that we may begin work immediately.

The following is the Chilton County Girls' Tomato Club song:

We're a band of Chilton lasses,
Who have joined this Club so grand.
The boys are growing corn in masses,
And we mean to take our stand,
By supporting this great move
We can help our State improve.
Then hurrah! for the Chilton lasses
Who have joined the Club so grand.

Other counties will be forming
In the line of organization,
Up singing songs in early morning
Of the work to aid our nation.
Oh! the boys may think they are working,
We girls will show them we're not lurking,
We mean to help them, even beat them
Now boys, watch us work with vim.

Tomato Club, Tomato Club,
We will aye be true to thee,
From the planting to the canning
When results of work we see,
When the girls the prizes are given,
They return their thanks to heaven,
Then we'll sing Tomato Club
We will aye be true to thee.

Bonnie Jenkins,
Jemison, Ala.

CALOMEL IS ONLY SAFE WHEN YOU LET IT ALONE

Make up your mind right now that you will never again take calomel for biliousness, headache, constipation, or any other serious or slight liver trouble. "Calomel" is but a popular name given to chloride of mercury, and as you probably know, mercury is one of the most deadly and treacherous drugs—it salivates, makes bones ache and decay, hair fall out and teeth become loose.

Follow the example of the best physicians and use a pure, harmless vegetable remedy. BEARLAX will give you the results you wish painlessly, gently but positively, and without any bad after effects. BEARLAX will tone and stimulate your liver, cleanse your system and build up and strengthen your digestive organs. The price is but 50 cents per bottle, everywhere.

Always At Your Service

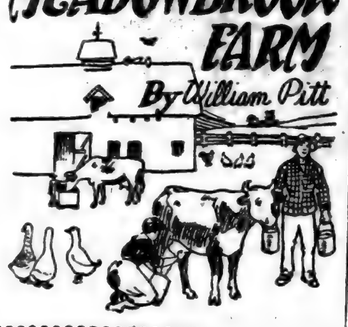
No matter how bitter the cold, how intense the heat, how severe the storm, L. & N. passenger and freight trains are always in operation, always at the service of the general public.

There may come good times and bad times; heavy traffic or light traffic, L. & N. trains move swiftly and safely through the country, at the service of the shipper or traveler.

There is no decrease in the efficiency of the service rendered. A corps of loyal employes co-operate with the official force to keep the wheels of commerce in motion, so that no lull will come in the era of prosperity.

Each way station is a unit in the system which extends over thirteen States. The farmer in the rural districts works secure in the knowledge that when his crop is harvested he has at his command a system of transportation which facilitates delivery to the markets of the world.

It is not the L. & N. as a whole which contributes to the development and prosperity of the territory through which it operates; it is the co-operation accorded the L. & N. by the various way stations, towns and cities through which its trains run. There should and must exist a community of interests.



The L. & N. pledges its support and best efforts for the profitable development of the matchless resources of the great and fertile South. It hopes the people living in the territory served by its lines will accept the pledge in the spirit of sincerity with which it is given, and reciprocate the cordial good will here expressed.

NOTES FROM MEADOWBROOK FARM

By William Pitt

Named your farm yet?

Clover is a cleansing crop.

Get sunlight into the dairy barn.

Grain raising depletes fertility of the soil.

Never throw soft feed on the ground.

Sorghum makes a good material for filling the silo.

Dirty pails cause much sickness among the calves.

If you want your cows to do well make them comfortable.

Bright clover or alfalfa hay should be kept in a convenient rack.

Remember that the swine family are not protected by furry coats.

It is generally estimated that broilers shrink one-half pound each when dressed.

Are the mice or rabbits girdling the trees? Remove rubbish and wrap the trunks in paper.

Get your spraying equipment in good order several days before you must begin spraying.

The cream separator should be firmly fixed on a solid base if good work is expected of it.

The average yearly butter fat production per cow in the United States in 1900 was 145 pounds.

Salt the hogs as often as you do the other stock. They will be healthier and digest their food better.

It is almost impossible to crowd the young pigs too fast, provided you have the right kind of food and care.

Some people have gone so far as to claim that the corn stalks in the silo are worth as much as the ears in the crib.

Wash and dry the cows before milking and keep 94 per cent. of the dirt out of the milk that usually gets in otherwise.

The garden should be well fertilized in the fall or winter. This makes it possible to work it more quickly when spring comes.

The dairy farmer ought to have pigs for market every year. This is the best way to sell the by-products at the top price.

One reason why pure bred sires are so necessary on the farm is because defects are just as easily transmitted as good points.

The heifer that is to be retained in the herd should be handled from her early calfhood so that she will have confidence in her keeper.

It is well to order a few catalogues from the reliable seed and nursery companies. They are educators even if we are not intending to buy.

See that the hens have all the pure water they can drink at all times. If you have skim milk to spare, that also can be placed before them constantly.

Keeping any machine well oiled and in proper repair not only increases efficiency, but decreases the amount of power required to run the machine.

The milk pail is always more nearly full when pasture is at its prime than during any other season, and the silo will produce the same conditions in the winter.

The manure spreader and systematic crop rotation form the two strongest links in the chain for the maintenance of soil fertility and heavy crop production.

The ideal cow! Everybody's looking for her, but few find her, though she is the most valuable asset on the farm. How many possible ideal cows are done into veal in this country every year nobody knows.

Too much care cannot be exercised by breeders in sending out eggs for hatching. A good way is to wrap each egg in paper separately and place them in a basket, doubly lined with newspaper and packed with excelsior.

For poultry food, pea meal will be found nutritious, rice easily digested, linseed meal cathartic, potato starch digestible, barley nutritious but laxative, and oatmeal more nutritious than either wheat or barley. There is fully 5½ per cent. of fat in oatmeal. Corn contains from 7 to 8 per cent. of yellow fat.

Flowers beautify a yard.

Try poultry and fruit together.

Test seed corn before planting.

Oyster shells are too soft for grit.

Dairying develops fertility of the soil.

Don't give the sow too much bedding.

In feeding grain in the runs broadcast it.

Rye and vetch will make a fair grade of silage.

What is known as a yearling hen is one having laid 12 months.

Better seed grain means better crops at no increased expense.

Soaking the churn in brine will occasionally help to keep it sweet.

Half the crop of corn can be turned into five-sixths of a crop by saving the fodder.

A reader recommends powdered charcoal given in the milk as a remedy for scours.

Alfalfa hay and corn balance each other. In addition they are the best relished of any feeds.

Sometimes a week's chill rains or cold weather will set the pigs back a month in their growth.

Indigestion and liver trouble in fowls are paraded under the name of cholera very frequently.

The co-operative creamery that is well patronized and well supported is a blessing to any community.

It does not pay to hold old hogs in order to get great weight if you have younger ones to eat the corn.

Don't let the pigs get lousy. Spray them with kerosene emulsion, while eating, once every two weeks.

When spraying do not work with bare hands. They'll be sore if you do. Put on a pair of rubber gloves.

Are the horses coming up in flesh, and are they getting a little harness work to condition their shoulders?

A feed of chopped onions occasionally will be greatly relished by the fowls as well as conduce to their health.

Hogs that are fat should not be held, but sent to market when fit. There is no profit in killing a hog until it is fit.

For the man who still has not a silo: Build one, and if you can't fill it until next fall, feed soiling crops this coming summer.

If you have never tried rape, raise a small field next spring. It is very popular with hogs, and does them a world of good.

Better not get reckless with the feed yet. It is easily possible that there still are eight to ten weeks of bad weather on the way.

One fatal mistake made at the end of the hatch is to keep the door of the incubator open too long after the eggs have begun to pip.

The critical period of the turkey is the first eight weeks of its life. About forty-eight eggs is the average yearly record of the hen.

Are the young pigs to be allowed to shiver and freeze in the cold, damp winds of early spring? And die at the rate of one to five out of every ten?

One acre of corn well grown and put in the silo will furnish more feed for the cows than can be obtained by any other manner of handling the soil.

The farmer who has never used a fanning mill should get one as soon as possible so as to get well acquainted with it before the busy season comes.

Turkey culture is a success only where the stock can have a good range. There is too much wild nature in turkeys for them to thrive in confined quarters.

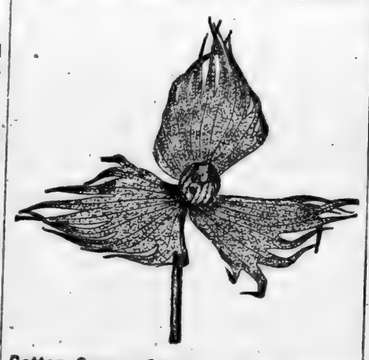
The fruit tree agent is not all bad. But for him a good many orchards would not now be growing and doing well. But it is well to know the standing of his company before ordering.

Most of those who run the dairy at a loss never read literature on the subject. The losses are largely due to this fault, for it is certain that there is no longer any use of maintaining any farm animal at a loss.

It is advisable to increase the quantity of corn in the night feed, as the nights are growing colder and extra fuel is needed. Corn digests slowly, and, being of a heating nature, adds wonderfully to the comfort of the fowls.

Leg weakness in chicks is often due to the food being of a fattening nature, and the bodies in consequence become too heavy for the muscular strength of the chick's legs. There should be bran in the soft food that is fed, it being one of the [illegible] and muscle [illegible]

SEED COTTON SUPPLY



Growers Should Save Stock From Their Own Fields.

By Growing Only One Variety in Neighborhood Many Problems Would Be Greatly Simplified —Easier to Fight Enemies.

Of course, the proper time to select the cotton seed was last fall, while the bolls were still on the stalks. If we have not selected the seed when we should we will have to do the next thing now—buy the best seed we can get.

I like to know the seed that I buy, says a Mississippi writer in the Farm Progress. I want to know where it was grown, on what kind of soil, its behavior under different climatic conditions and the pedigree of the seed if it can be found.

And when I buy from a seedhouse I want that house to be a reputable

one. If their business methods, general reputation and rating for intelligence among seed specialists is high, then I feel that I have something of a guarantee on the seed that I am about to put in the ground.

A man who must buy cotton seed every year is not exercising good farm judgment. It is generally understood now that the time to select cotton seed is in the fall while the plant is still standing in the fields. You can see what it is like then. If it is big-bolled, short-jointed, vigorous and well-formed, you pick the bolls and carefully save them. If this is done year after year, it takes but a little while to get the seed bred up to a high standard.

It takes patience and care to keep them that way, of course. The selections have to be made over and over again every year, the ginning of the seed cotton always has to be watched and personal attention must be given to every detail of the whole business.

But it pays in the long run. Any man who selects his own seed or buys from a reputable seedhouse will increase his yield over the returns from the old, slip-shod methods. The main thing, after all, is to grow more cotton to the acre, and that is just what the selection of seed will bring about.

Price does not always give a fair indication of the value of the seed offered in the markets. Pedigree is the main thing for the buyer to consider. You cannot tell by looking at the seed whether it will be satisfactory or not. You are more or less at the mercy of the dealer.

If you have a pet variety of cotton, one not common in your neighborhood, you will have to be careful about planting it anyway at all close to fields of other varieties. The South Carolina agricultural experiment station, conducted under federal supervision, discovered that cotton varieties in adjoining rows will mix through the medium of the bees and the winds.

Fresh blooming plants easily pollinate other plants at considerable distances. The pollination between rows of different varieties was found to be as high as 30 per cent. in one season.

By growing only one variety of cotton in a single neighborhood a good many of the cotton problems would be greatly simplified. It would be easier to fight the cotton anthracnose and other specific cotton enemies under such an arrangement. The seeds would not be mixed at the gin, as so often happens, and the creating of hybrid plants would be lessened.

THREE CROPS IN ONE YEAR

Peas, Potatoes and Celery Follow Each Other and Profitable Return Made From Acre.

(By J. H. HAYNES, Indiana.)

We planted an acre in early peas on warm, rich soil. Rows were 3½ feet apart and peas drilled in with an Allen seed drill.

They were well cultivated and all brushed. When we began picking the peas, about the 5th of June, the space between the rows was opened and early Ohio potatoes planted, each hill being treated with some well-rotted manure.

By the time the peas were all picked the potatoes were breaking through the ground. The pea vines and brush were removed and the potatoes received attention. They grew rapidly and were kept in fine growing condition.

During the growing of the peas and potatoes we had beds of transplanted celery plants ready to be removed and as soon as the potatoes were laid by and killed these celery plants were put in the furrows made in hilling the potatoes.

When the potatoes were dug in August we began hilling up the celery. By fall we had as fine a lot of celery as could be wished for, and this crop was banked in before frosts came and gave us good prices through the winter.

The bed was covered with dry forest leaves and these sheltered from rain and snow by temporary board shelters.

This piece of land thus gave us three good crops from early April till fall.

The peas were sold in early markets at $1.50 per bushel. The potatoes were for home use and seed, and the celery sold in market at good prices.

On another 1½-acre tract that had been well enriched we planted early sweet corn 3½ feet by 3½ feet apart. When the corn was two feet high we planted between each hill a stocky transplanted tomato plant.

From then on the hoe was kept going to push both corn and tomato.

The shade of the corn had a fine effect on the tomato vines when these began to ripen and the vines kept dark green and the sun did not scald the ripening tomatoes as it did in the open field.

The corn brought 10 to 15 cents per dozen ears and the tomatoes were sold to the cannery at seven dollars per ton.

This 1½ acre netted us over $100. With well enriched land and good cultivation there should be no failure to make double cropping pay.

Every year we do this and have had fine crops.

But remember one must hustle when he undertakes it.

VALUABLE IN CROP ROTATION

Lespedeza, or Japan Clover, Attracts Much Attention in the South—Hay of High Quality.

A leguminous crop that has attracted much attention, more especially in the south, is lespedeza, or Japan clover. This plant has spread all over the south during the past half century, being found generally along roadsides and in waste places. The usual method of utilization has been as summer pasture, but in some sections it is cut for hay. Recently the department of agriculture has found that a number of farmers have found Japan clover valuable in crop rotation. Special attention has been given to the experience of these farmers, and it has been found that the crop is eminently adapted to rotation farming where the soil is suitable and that it produces hay of high quality. A farmers' bulletin, No. 441, on this subject has been issued by the department, and may be had upon application to the secretary of agriculture.

GENERAL FARM NOTES

Do not bed the sows with long straw.

Cauliflower is always in demand at good prices.

Keep the beds shallow while the pigs are young.

Dustless oat straw run through a cutter is the best.

Be sure the fenders are in place in the farrowing pen.

If you like sheep they will like you and do well for you.

"Bad luck" is usually the penalty for bad management.

A litter carrier will make the work in the barn much easier.

Not much sickness comes to the house that is kept clean.

Breed is of importance but the individual cow is what really counts.

When turning eggs in the incubator be sure your hands are not greasy.

Cows lying on cold, damp floors may be expected to develop udder troubles.

Ever hear of anyone going back to pan skimming after using a separator?

Man or woman, you can't win with poultry unless you take care of them.

Corn and Kafir make fat and heat. Wheat, oats, bran and middlings make eggs.

Sows never eat their pigs unless they are feverish and have been unwisely fed.

Keeping dampness out of the poultry house will in many instances keep out disease.

PANAMA CANAL AS A MECCA FOR TOURISTS

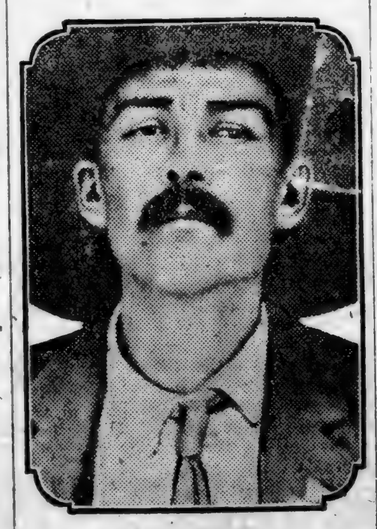
GARIBALDI IS IN U. S.



Six Republics Quietly Wondering What He Intends to Do Next.

True Soldier of Fortune—Has Risked Life in Half Dozen Wars and Escaped—Fought With Bulgaria—Gen. Orozco's Exploits.

New York.—Some folks say there is no such thing as luck. Tom Carter stepped off a two-inch curb the other day—and died. Gen. Joseph Garibaldi risked his neck in six wars and was never scratched. What's the answer?

Garibaldi is in town just now. Coincidentally, the rumor comes from the south that the revolutionary pot is on the fire in six South American republics. That may have something to do with Garibaldi's presence here and it may not. In any event, Garibaldi is one of the free lances of fortune one reads about and rarely sees. He has just returned from the war in Bulgaria, where he had an independent command. Before that he was Madero's chief of staff in Mexico—having fought his way to that position by metaphorically tweaking the nose of Bandit Orozco, the most dangerous foe to established order—any established order—that Mexico holds. Before that he sat in a black cell in Porto Cabella for seven months, at Gen. Castro's order, while he filed at his manacles with the bit of tin that had once been the top of a can of beans. And before that——

But that's the story that must be taken up item by item. Garibaldi is the grandson of the great Garibaldi, the liberator. Fighting runs in the Garibaldi blood. No doubt the Garibaldis are in earnest in their wish to free the world from the bonds of tyranny. There is little question that none of the Garibaldis likes any of the ruling families, and that all the ruling families would be grateful if some one would push the Garibaldis off a dock into particularly deep water. But mostly this Garibaldi fights because he likes fighting. Incidentally he has been rich from time to time. Money never lasted long. Also, when the map of the world seems sure of surreptitious alteration Garibaldi is one of those whose whereabouts are pegged by various secret police. The map is gradually changing color these days. Garibaldi offered to land 20,000 Italians in Tripoli at their own expense, armed and equipped and guaranteed fighting men. The Italian government refused the offer. The government needed men mighty badly, but it didn't care for any Garibaldis. He took 600 Greeks from New York to the war in the east at their own cost. Now he's back in New York. What pot's on the fire?

He's only a youngster in years—a scant thirty-three. But he has been at war for the past seventeen years.

Between times he has killed in with diplomatic and political missions. He has an eye for revolution like a hawk in the sky. Just after the ill-fated Madero raised his banner of revolt against Porfirio Diaz, Garibaldi appeared with eight comrades on the border and offered his services to Orozco, the bandit leader.

"I'll have none of you," growled Orozco. "You're too clean."

That's an insult to a soldier on the desert. But the eight started a revolution of their own—against Diaz, against Madero, against Orozco. Soon they were strong enough to make terms. Garibaldi took Juarez, and Madero made him his chief of staff.

"Back Felix Diaz and Huerta against a wall," Garibaldi advised. "Kill them now—to prevent the deaths of hundreds later on."

But Madero would not. He might have saved himself and his administration if he had taken the soldier's advice instead of listening to the dictates of his own gentle heart. Then Garibaldi went on to Tripoli and Bulgaria and where not—and now he's back in town.

Six republics wonder why.

SAVING LEADS TO WEALTH

Henry E. Huntington, Ship Builder, Asserts Young Men Should Invest to Compel Thrift.

Los Angeles.—Henry E. Huntington, of New York and Los Angeles, who at the age of sixty-three is retiring from business as rapidly as possible, but whose fortune of forty or fifty million dollars will keep right on working for him, said that the habit of saving paves the road to wealth.

Mr. Huntington believes that this is an age of great opportunity for young men and this is his recipe for success:

"Save a little every week. When you get an increase of wages or salary continue to live within the former limits and save the increase.

"If you find it difficult to save go in debt for a home or undertake some other obligation in the way of investment that will compel you to save."

Mr. Huntington declares he has already practically retired from business.

"I shall give little personal attention to my investments here, nor to those in the east, which are practically as large as my interests here," said he. "For illustration, I scarcely bother my head even now about the ship building plant at Newport News. Altogether I have about 6,000 employes in my eastern enterprises, but when I am in New York I do not spend more than an hour a day in my office."

Mr. Huntington's famous paintings, rare objects of art and almost priceless volumes have all been bought by himself and in New York, either as offered for sale there or brought over under options subject to his approval when he saw them. He has never depended on agents, and he will not in Europe if the buying fever seizes him.

PAYS DEBT OF GRATITUDE

Lawyer, Whose Life Was Saved Forty Years Ago by Defendant's Father, Reciprocates.

Kansas City, Mo.—The trial of former State Senator Ernest D. Martin for alleged misuse of the mails in the promotion of an electric railway has one romantic feature of which judge, jury and spectators are in ignorance. By the side of the accused man in the federal court there sits daily a keen-eyed, stout, gray-haired man, with a "fighter's jaw," his chief counsel. That man is Jacob I. Shepherd of Fort Scott, Kan., and he is paying a debt of gratitude of 40 years' standing.

It was 40 years ago that Dr. Solon Martin of Marshall, Mo., while driving along a country road came upon a tent where a woman sat beside a sick child.

"Do you know where we can find a doctor?" asked the woman. "My son is dying."

"I am a physician," said Dr. Martin. "We'll do what we can. But you'll have to get him out of this tent and into a house, where he can have constant care," he added after an examination of the child.

"We're driving through the country to Kansas," said the woman. "We have no house and no means."

"I'll take care of the boy," said Doctor Martin. "You go ahead, and we'll send him to you well in a month or so."

The boy was taken to the home of the physician and kept until he had recovered. Then he was sent to his parents, who were making themselves a home in Kansas.

Shortly after the former state senator had been charged with misusing the mails he received a letter bearing a Fort Scott postmark.

"Forty years ago" the letter ran, "your father put me under a great obligation which I could not fully repay during his lifetime. I beg of you permit me now to discharge that debt by acting as your counsel in the present matter."

The letter was signed "J. I. Shepherd."

ITS AGE IS TWO CENTURIES

Eliot School, Boston, Mass., Celebrates 200th Birthday—Has Occupied Four Buildings on Site.

Boston.—The Eliot Grammar school of Boston held exercises in celebration of the rounding out of the second century of its existence. The school was founded in 1712, when the sturdy fathers of colonial Boston voted to establish a school at the north end of the town to accommodate the growing population in that section. One year later the little edifice was completed and its doors thrown open. The school is the oldest elementary school in the city and the second oldest free school of any kind.

The original building lasted through the period of the revolution and was not torn down until 1792. The second building lasted until 1837 and the third persisted until 1865, when the present edifice was erected. All have occupied the same site, which is within a stone's throw of Christ's church, where Paul Revere's lanterns were hung.

Many famous men received their elementary education at the old Eliot school, among them Edward Everett, the famous statesman and orator, and Rev. Samuel S. Smith, author of "America." The last quarter of a century has seen great changes in the section of the city where the school is located, and today 90 per cent. of the pupils are the children of Italian and Jewish immigrants.

A Falsehood Nailed.

Editor Press:—Please allow me space your valuable paper to say a few words in regard to the report that was told about Elbert Bean. I want to say that it was false. Elbert Bean did not take one ear of corn from me and no one else has. I have not lost any corn and I cannot see why any one should tell such a falsehood, and I want to publish this so that the general public will know that the base report is untrue.

Respectfully,

DEFRAUDED BANKS OUT OF THOUSANDS

MUCH MONEY RECOVERED

Thousands of Dollars Found on Them. Defrauded Banks Out of One Million Dollars.

New Orleans.—Charged with defrauding banks in this country and Europe of approximately one million dollars through alleged manipulation of invoices, Antonio Musica, his three sons, George, Arthur and Philip Musica, New York hair dealers, were arrested in their apartments on the steamer Heredia here. Two daughters of the elder Musica, Louise and Grace, were also detained. The party was taken into custody just before the departure of the Heredia for Colon, Panama.

When searched at police headquarters, a large amount of money and much negotiable paper was found in the possession of the prisoners. Fifty thousand dollars was secured from Arthur Musica and about ten thousand more from other members of the party.

The Musicas carried with them nine pieces of baggage, which the police hauled to headquarters. It is believed that much more money and valuable papers will be recovered.

The Musicas did not appear to be perturbed over their arrest. Affidavits were sworn out charging the father and three sons with being fugitives from justice and the two daughters with being material witnessese.

On the way to the central police station an incident occurred which caused some excitement. The elder Musica attempted to secure from Philip a revolver which the son had in his pocket.

"No, won't give it up. I am going to kill myself before I get to police headquarters," Philip declared.

The weapon was taken away from him after a desperate strugle with one of the detectives escorting the party.

Eighteen thousand dollars in bills of large denominations was found hidden in Miss Grace Musica's corset. Eighty thousand dollars was recovered from Musica and his three sons.

HOW TO BUILD A SILO.

Valuable Booklet Offered Free to the Farmers by the Southern Railway.

Atlanta, Ga.—How the average farmer, using ordinary farm tools, at at expense of only $65 can construct a silo with a capacity of 55 tons—enough silage to feed 20 cows forty pounds per day for four months—is told in a booklet just gotten out by the Live Stock Department of the Southern railway, a copy of which will be mailed free to any farmer addressing request for same to Mr. F. L. Word, Live Stock Agent, Southern Railway building, Atlanta, Ga.

"Where There Is Live Stock on the Farm There Should Be a Silo" is the title of this booklet, which tells of the advantage to the farmer of havitg a silo and the great saving which it enables him to make in the cost of winter feeding for his live stock. The figures gives are taken from the practical experience of a Tennessee farmer who built a silo on the lines indicated twenty years ago, who finds it as good as new today, atd feels that it has paid for itself many times over every year.

Secretary of Agriculture Wilson has recently declared that the Southeastern states constitute the ideal section of the United States for live stock raising and must be looked to in future years for the nation's food supply. To stimulate interest in the live stock industry and to aid farmers to successfully follow this line, the Southern railway has established its Live Stock Department, which is giving unlived attention to this work.

New York.—An Indian camp has been established on the roof of one of the city's newest and most fashionable hotels. Chief Three Bears, who is 80 years old, protested against the confining four walls of a mere room. So he and Long Time Sleep, White Calf, Lazy Boy, Big Top, Medicine Owl, White Calf's Squaw and Medicine Owl's Squaw and a 10-year-old Indian girl all pitched their tepees above the eaves, whence they could look out over the city's artificial peaks and canyons.

200 KILLED, 300 INJURED IN STORM WHICH SWEPT THE MIDDLE WEST

Fire Following in Wake of Storm Adds to Horror—Pitiful Condition of the Sufferers in Devastated District Told by Rescuers.

Omaha, Neb. — Shivering from cold, but awe-inspired by the nature of their work, scores of men, women and children struggled in the snow to recover the dead or rescue the injured, who lay buried beneath the wreckage of homes and buildings crushed by the tornado which swept with death dealing force over Iowa and Nebraska, killing more than 150 persons in Omaha.

Latest reports give the number of injured at 320, while the death list has not increased over last night's report of 202.

More than three inches of snow covers the debris in the section of the city which was struck by wind.

Omaha, Neb.—More than 200 persons were killed and 600 were injured in a wind storm that demolished 450 homes, damaged hundreds of other buildings and caused a monetary loss of $5,000,000, according to reports available from the main path of the tornado in and near Omaha.

Most of the casualties were in Omaha. Nearby towns in Nebraska and across the Missouri river in Iowa suffered severely. Wires were snapped off in all directions and it took many hours to gather and circulate news of the disaster.

Fire broke out in the debris of many wrecked buildings in the Nebraska metropolis and these were menaces for some time as the fire companies were hindered by fallen walls and blockaded streets. A heavy rain followed the wind, however, and drenched the hundreds of homeless persons, but also put out the flames.

Of the 200 known dead within the area covered by the storm, 152 were residents of Omaha. The remaining dead are scattered over a considerable range of territory with Council Bluffs reporting 12, Yutan, Neb., 16; Berlin, Neb., 7; Glenwood, Ia., 5; Neola Ia., 2 and Bartlett, Ia., 3. The same cities and towns report an aggregate of 400 injured and 450 homes demolished.

Perhaps 1,500 persons are homeless. Aside from this 3,000 buildings were more or less damaged, some of these being churches and school buildings. Eight of Omaha's public schools were wrecked.

The greatest loss of life occurred sectionally. Three points in the path of the storm offered the greatest sacrifices. These were at Forsythe and Farnam streets, where a crowd had sought refuge in a garage, at Twenty-fourth and Lake streets, where a moving picture theatre was demolished, and at Twenty-fourth and Willis avenue, where a pool room had attracted a crowd. In each of these places the fatalities were large.

This city never has suffered such a catastrophe. The citizens quickly rose to the situation, however, and measures of relief were organized promptly. Trinity cathedral, parish of the Omaha Episcopal church, was temporarily turned into a coffee house; Catholic priests visited homes that had been destroyed, in many cases admnistering the last rites of the church, and public bodies began the organization of relief committees. One hundred thousand dollars had been subscribed for relief work.

Insurance companies experienced heavy losses, most of their fire policies carrying a tornado clause.

The storm appeared to have started at Fifty-fourth and Center street, it traveling north, veering slightly to the east to Leavenworth street. Then it took a northeasterly course to Fortieth and Farnam streets, sweeping its way through everything. Still traveling a little east of north, it covered a course from Fortieth street east to Thirty-fourth street, a distance of six blocks.

Striking Bemis park, where the homes of the wel to do Omahans are located, the storm turned sharply to the east and passed to Twenty-fourth street, where its path was six blocks wide. In the latter section the damage is complete.

Cuts Path Seven Blocks Wide.

It was late before all the details of the storm with accompanying wreckage were known even within this city itself. The pathway of the storm, from three to seven blocks in width, cut a swath 24 blocks long. Within the space of this storm center, which if made rectangular, would cover a quarter section of land, 1,200 houses are wrecked, 100 bodies have been recovered and search of the ruins is being made for others. Several are known to be still in the ruins at the end of the storm' spath.

Estimates of the value of property demolished by the storm vary between $5,000,000 and $12,000,000. Some of the more substantial houses can be partially rebuilt. Where the buildings have not been torn asunder they have been so twisted that even the material is useless for rebuilding.

The destruction began with the millionaire homes in the West Farnam and Bemis park district, but farther northwest the buildings collapsed more easily, and a large number of deaths resulted.

The body of an unidentified child was found in the ruins of two houses with a little rag doll still tucked under her arm.

A. L. Green, an advertising manager of a department store, was on his back porch watching the storm when it broke.

"It came like a rushing and roaring torrent of water," he said. "It came from the south and passed right by us to the east. I went to my attic window immediately afterward and saw fires bursting forth from houses along the path of the storm. The flames made a ghastly sight as they illuminated the areas of razed buildings."

E. W. Dixon was bruised about the head and his wife and three children were seriously injured. Dixon started upstairs as he saw the tornado swoop down and crush the homes of his neighbors to the south. An instant later the wind struck his house and he was hurled downstairs into the dining room, flat on his face.

Dazed, he struggled to his feet and hurried his family to the cellar. A second later his home was swept away and the family in the basement had but the sky above them. Flames sprang up.

"It semed as if the whole city was afire," said Dixon. "Then I lifted my wife and children out and went down the street, joining scores of my unfortunate neighbors. We had lost our all, but are thankful for our lives."

"The strike is o'er, the battle done; the victory of life is won," sang Cassius Shimer, a tenor of 116 South Second street, at the Easter services in McCabe Methodist church Sunday morning.

Mr. Shimer was killed when the tornado destroyed his home. The church in which he had sung was badly wrecked.

The life of Oscar Carlson night cashier of the Calumet restaurant, was saved in a peculiar way. When the storm approached he attempted to look out of doors and in resisting a sudden gust, he clung tenaciously to the door. The next thing he knew he was out in the back yard with the door on top of him and when he arose and looked around he found there was not a house in sight so far as he could see in the darkness. Outside of a few bruises he was all right.

B. T. Bell, general superintendent of the Nebraska Telephone company, said:

"It is probable that many bodies were burned in the wreckage as many of the buildings immediately caugl fire.

"I saw bodies in heaps, held by heavy timbers. Some were mutilated beyond recognition. One woman evidently had run from the house when the storm struck, carrying a baby in her arms. A timber srtuck her and was driven clear through her body, killing mother and child.

"I was just outside the path of the tornado and could see it plainly. It was of the usual funnel shape and seemed to dip down from a heavy black cloud that hung low over the city. The long swinging funnel swayed sideways and then backwards and forward, sometimes rising in the air several hundred feet and then descending again. Houses were picked up and hurled about as if they were toys."

Chicago.—A terrific wind storm, causing widespread destruction and loss of life and practically wrecking the already demoralized telegraph service, raged over the central west and middle states. Reports from Nebraska, Kansas, Iowa and Indiana indicate heavy damage, but owing to the wrecking of the telegraph lines the reports are fragmentary and lacking in detail.

Austria Presents Ultimatum.

Cettinje.—It is semi-officially announced that Austria presented an ultimatum to Montenegro demanding a suspension of the military operations around Scutari until the entire civil population has left the town. In the event of refusal, Austria will resort to arms against Montenegro. Austria also demanded that all Catholics and Mohammedans in Jakova and the surrounding district who have been converted since the Montenegrin occupation must be restored to their former faith.

Bomb Destroys Tenement Building.

New York.—The fiftieth bomb set off in this city since January 1 exploded in the lower East Side with greater force than any infernal machine placed by Black Hand operators within memory of the police. The lower part of a five story tenement building was badly wrecked, and tenants in the upper stories, who had been thrown from their beds by the shock, found their exit blocked by a great hole torn in the second floor hallway. Several persons were painfully injured.

U. S. COTTON CROP REPORT FOR 1912

TOTAL OVER TWO MILLION BALES LESS THAN RECORD OF PREVIOUS YEAR.

LARGE NUMBER OF LINTERS

U. S. Census Bureau Issues Final Estimate—Figures About as Had Been Expected.

Washington.—The United States census bureau issued the annual cotton report.

The final estimate of the cotton crop of 1912 is 14,076,430 bales.

The crop for 1911 was 16,109,349 bales, and for 1910 it was 11,965,862 bales.

Expressed in 500-pound bales, the 1912 crop is 14,295,500 bales as compared with 16,250,276 bales for 1911 and 12,005,688 for 1910.

The final estimate by states and by subdivisions follows:

Figures by States.

	Estimate Yield 1912-13	Estimate Yield. 1911-12
Alabama	1,366,424	1,727,586
Arkansas	803,071	938,791
Virginia	25,485	31,099
Missouri	56,065	95,336
Florida	60,033	91,146
Georgia	1,887,461	2,867,741
Louisiana	391,437	395,603
Mississippi	1,048,034	1,212,046
North Carolina	934,420	1,152,459
Oklahoma	1,054,857	1,043,803
South Carolina	1,257,708	1,727,094
Tennessee	289,504	457,957
Texas	4,886,415	4,288,510
All Others	15,516	.....
Total	14,076,430	16,109,349

Figures by Quality.

	1912-13	1911-12
Equivalent in 500 lb. bales	14,295,500	16,250,276
Round bales	81,528	100,439
Sea Island	236,641	119,252
Linters	605,704	556,726
Average weight	507.8	504.4

Included in the statistics for 1912 are:

Linters, 605,704 bales; Sea Island cotton, 23,641 bales; round bales, 81,528. Round bales are counted in the estimate as half bales.

The average weight of the bale for 1912 is 507.8 pounds as compared with 504.4 pounds for 1911 and 501.7 for 1910.

Cotton not yet ginned is included in the total estimate, and is placed by ginners and delinters as 129,172 bales.

The only surprise in the estimate is the great increase in linters, which this year are placed at 605,704 bales, a startling jump from 1911.

Analysis of the figures by states shows big crops west of the Mississippi ;Texas with nearly 5,000,000 bales and Oklahoma with a million. When the crop west of the river is heavy, linters show a great increase, and the diminished crop in the east has very little effect on linters.

The Texas cotton has a fuzzy seed, which will not gin clean.

MANY ARE KILLED BY STORM

Buildings Demolished, Houses Unroofed, Wires Paralyzed, Crops Injured.

Atlanta, Ga.—More than one hundred persons are reported killed and hundreds were injured, some mortally, by a storm of tornado intensity, which raged over central western, southern and parts of the eastern states. Property damage will run well into the millions.

Reports from Alabama show the loss of life was heaviest in that state, the number of dead there being placed at sixty, with additional fatalities reported, but not confirmed. Two towns, Thomasville and Lower Peachtree, were practically wiped out. Two are dead in Indiana, two in Tennessee, two in Ohio, two in New York, one in Michigan and one in Louisiana.

McCombs Won't Go to rFance.

Washington.—William F. McCombs, chairman of the Demooratic national committee, issued a statement announcing that he had declined to become ambassador to France. He said: "I do not feel that I can afford to leave my life work—the practice of the law. I feel compelled to devote myself to my personal affairs, and at the same time, I will lend any assistance in my power that will contribute to the success of the Democratic administration and the Democratic party."

Buys Brooklyn Bridge for $500.

New York.—Karl Hoopes, who came over from Amsterdam, Holland, some time ago, sailed for home after a decidedly unpleasant experience in New York. When Karl left Amsterdam he had $2,000, and he expected to make as much in investments in New York as he had heard that many had become rich in America. After his arrival he went out for a walk one night and, meeting an affable stranger, told him that he desired to invest some money. The man sold him Brooklyn bridge for $500.

FLOODS DESTROY LIFE AND PROPERTY

DAYTON, O., FLOODED—REPORTS SAY 21 ARE DEAD AT DELAWARE, OHIO.

THOUSANDS OUT OF WORK

River Des Peres in St. Louis Has Climbed From Its Banks and Destruction Is Threatened.

Cincinnati, Ohio.—Floods in Ohio, Indiana, Missouri and other Central and Middle Western states are destroying much life and property. Dayton, O., is flooded. Reports say 21 are dead at Delaware, O.

Thousands of men have been thrown out of work because scores of big industries situated beside streams in Ohio have been wrecked or forced to close.

Columbus, capital of Ohio, is threatened by the swollen Scioto river. The mayor of Delaware and a score of citizens were drowned when the levee broke, according to a report to Columbus.

River des Peres in St. Louis, has climbed from its banks and death and destruction is threatened in that city.

The torrent is sweeping down the tributaries of the Ohio river from the north and residents of scores of towns have been compelled to flee. At Findlay, O., all residents moved back from the river a mile last night. In the suburbs of Indianapolis four are reported swallowed up by the floor, and great property damage has been done.

The death list so far is believed to total nearly 50. It is increasing. Millions of dollars worth of levees and property will be destroyed. Telegraph communication is becoming more crippled every hour.

Dayton Streets Rushing, Muddy Rivers

Cincinnati, O.—The deep, muddy Miami river is rushing through Dayton's downtown streets. Near the Algonquin hotel at Third and Ludlow streets the flood is many feet deep. The principal corner, Third and Main streets, is three feet under water and the court house is like an island in a sea of mud. The Mad and Stillwater rivers are swelling far beyond their banks.

Residents Flee from Findlay, Ohio.

Findlay, O.—Under a steady downpour of rain, which became torrential the Blanchard river is rising at the rate of three inches an hour and the city is threatened with flood. The stream is eight feet above normal. Hundreds of families have been compelled to move and moving vans worked throughout the night to rescue the marooned residents.

Practically every industry in the city has been closed. Both rail and trolley traffic is paralyzed. The greater part of the adjacent country is under water and much damage is reported.

Mayor and 20 Citizens Drowned.

Columbus, O.—An appeal for help for flood sufferers was received by Mayor Karb, of Columbus, from Delaware, O. It was reported that besides Mayor B. V. Lea, twenty citizens of Delaware were drowned. Efforts to get details are checked because wire communication has been cut off.

14,000 Men Are Thrown Out of Work.

Youngstown, O.—The Mahoning river and Crab creek rose to an enormous height and nearly all the big industries of this district are closed down. The Republic Iron and Steel company, Youngstown Sheet and Tube company, are the biggest plants to suffer, and 14,000 men are thrown out of work temporarily at these plants.

Cincinnati, O.—It is believed here that the Miami river went over the levees and flooded the city of Dayton, O. A telegraph operator working with an operator in Cincinnati abruptly cut off a dispatch he was sending and said: "Goodbye, the levee has broken!"

Columbus, O.—Columbus faces a serious flood. Swollen by heavy rains the Scioto river is at a record high water stage of 21.7 feet. Many families have been driven from their homes and the entire police force was called out to assist in the rescue work. Train service in and out of Columbus is practically cut off.

St. Louis, Mo.—One person was drowned and several families were driven from their homes by the rising of the River Des Peres, which flows through the western and southern part of the city.

Four Are Drowned in Indiana.

Indianapolis, Ind.—Swollen streams throughout Indiana have done enormous property damage. Rain has fallen steadily. Many cities fear for the safety of their levees. Thousands of acres of land in many river valleys are submerged. Hundreds of homes are surrounded by water and thousands of persons have fled to the highlands. In the suburbs of Indianapolis the overflow from two big streams drove hundreds to the hills, and four persons were drowned.

Sillicus—What is the age of discretion?

Cynicus—There isn't any. I know a man over seventy who married his fourth wife the other day.

"Had any accidents on this road lately?" asked the traveler.

"Yep," replied the man who hangs around the station. "Three trains came in on time last week."

Was Much Impressed.

A little girl who had acted as ring bearer at a cousin's wedding was inclined to view her part of the impresive ceremony with great seriousness. One day some time afterward the child heard her grandmother talking of her possible future marriage.

"You know, I'm half married already," the child earnestly remarked.

"Half married already! What do you mean, child?" asked the surprised grandmother.

"Why, don't you remember when I carried Cousin Carrie's wedding ring?"

CONSTIPATION

Munyon's Paw-Paw Pills are unlike all other laxatives or cathartics. They coax the liver into activity by gentle methods, they do not scour; they do not gripe; they do not weaken; but they do start all the secretions of the liver and stomach in a way that soon puts these organs in a healthy condition and corrects constipation. Munyon's Paw-Paw Pills are a tonic to the stomach, liver and nerves. They invigorate instead of weaken; they enrich the blood instead of impoverishing it; they enable the stomach to get all the nourishment from food that is put into it. Price 25 cents. All Druggists.

SCATHING REPLY FROM GOVERNOR

O'NEAL EXPLAINS PRESENCE OF CONVICT AT THE EXECUTIVE MANSION.

TYSON ASKED THE QUESTION

Incident Between Chief Executive and Former Chief Justice Growing Out of Convict Scandal.

Montgomery.—In answer to an inquiry addresed to the acting president of the state convict department by Judge John R. Tyson, former chief justice of the supreme court of Alabama, as to the whereabouts of Jack Gable, a Montgomery county convict, Governor O'Neal issued a statement in which he declared that upon the recommendation of the heads of departments at the capitol, Gable had been assigned to duty at the executive mansion and that this action was taken as a means of saving money for the state.

In his reply to Judge Tyson, Governor O'Neal declares that "the inquiry was not in good faith, but a veiled attack, by innuendo, slightly lacking in the element of straightforward manliness." The governor then goes into full explanation of the matter upon which Judge Tyson seeks information, stating that the former prominence of Judge Tyson moved him to enlighten the ignorance which he possesses."

According to the governor, the employment of convicts to care for the state's property was the inspiration of the heads of departments at the capitol, who suggested by a unanimous vote last fall, that state convicts be brought to the capitol to relieve the unsightly, unclean and insanitary condition which obtained at the state house, as well as to assist in caring for the executive mansion. Under the law the governor is authorized to employ only four servants at the capitol, a number which the officials considered wholly inadequate for the purpose of caring for the capitol building and grounds. The $6,000 which had been appropriated for the maintenance and repair of the capitol, according to the governor, had been exhausted in the improvement of the rooms of the judges of the supreme and appelate courts, and in the purchase of many needed supplies.

With this condition confronting the heads of departments a committee composed of John H. Wallace, Jr., Dr. William H. Oates, and Dr. Thomas M. Owen suggested that the governor request the conviet department to send convicts to the capitol to aid in cleaning the building and to render other assistance in caring for the state's property. The fund of $75 per month, which is allowed the governor by law with which to employ a messenger, was used in the employment of a superintendent of the building and grounds, who has direct control of the labor about the capitol.

HOUSTON GETS INVITATION.

New Secretary of Agriculture Invited to Be Present At Convention of Land Congress.

Birmingham.—An invitation was forwarded to Hon. David F. Houston, the new secretary of Agriculture in President Wilson's cabinet to attend the next annual convention of the Aalbama State Land Congress and deliver an address.

In the event of Secretary Houston's acceptance of the invitation, it is planned to have every farm demonstrator now employed in Alabama by the United States government present on the day Mr. Houston addresses the convention, with a view of consulting with and reporting in person on the wonderful work being performed by those experts in every county in Alabama.

It is believed that the new secretary of Agriculture will look with especial favor on the invitation to come to Alabama in view of the fact that this state leads the entire United States in corn club and farm demonstration results,

In the invitation extended to Mr. Houston it was shown that the 57 boys entered in the corn contests from Alabama last year raised 7,749 bushels of corn on 57 acres of land, netting them a profit of $5,154.

These figures were proven at the recent corn contests held at Columbia, S. C., when Alabama boys led every state in the union, receiving first prize.

The president of every railroad system operating in Alabama has also been invited to be present at this convention.

STATE HELP FOR NEGRO SCHOOLS

Superintendent Willingham Indicates Such in Letter.

Montgomery.—State aid for the betterment of negro schools of Alabama may be forthcoming according to a letter from H. J. Willingham to J. A. Albright, county superintendent of education of Lee county, in which the state official says county funds may be used to improve the condition of negro schools if it is the desire of the county boards to do so.

TWO DIE ON GALLOWS.

White Man Hung in Jefferson County For Alleged Murder of Negro.

Birmingham.—Arthur Jones was executed in the jail yard of the court house. Will Watson, charged jointly with Jones in the killing of Holland, a negro, was executed an hour later.

Jones on the gallows said: "I am ready to die and I hope I will meet all you people gathered here in heaven."

An hour after the execution of Arthur Jones, his companion in crime, was led upon the gallows on which the former was executed, and he too was launched into eternity.

Arthur Jones and Will Watson are the first two white men to be hanged in Jefferson county since the execution of Frank Duncan, member of the famous Miller-Duncan gang of safe blowers for the murder of Policeman Kirkley and Adams in 1904. Before that execution "Dutch" Miller, member of the same gang was hanged in about 1901 for the same murder. There have been only two other white men executed in the county during the past 20 years, these being Scroggins, hanged for the murder of a Jewish peddler, and Eugene Byers, who was executed for the killing of his cousin on Red mountain.

The hanging is the first hanging of a white man for the murder of a negro in this county. It is probably the first time a white man has been hanged in the state for the killing of a negro.

The crime for which the two white men died on the gallows was the alleged murder of John Holland, near Coalburg, alias Hollis, a negro, who was shot and killed on Cat mountain, near Coalburg, in the western part of the county on June 16, 1911.

The arrest of Arthur Jones, Walter Jones, and Will Watson for the murder of the negro threw the county into a fever of excitement and the investigation of this case eventually resulted in the clearing of the number of grewsome murders of the Lewisburg district, the territory in beats 22 and 50. Some little time after the arrest of Walter Jones, Arthur Jones and Will Watson, John Wade, another white man alleged to have been implicated in the murder of Holland was arrested. Wade is now being held in the county jail pending the trial of his case.

Death sentence was imposed by Judge Frank Cahalan on Arthur Jones and Will Watson on June 8, 1912. The date of the executions was fixed on Friday, July 19, 1912. Both men gave notice of appeals and the sentences were suspended pending the action of the supreme court.

The supreme court finally on February 6, 1913, affirmed the judgment of the lower court in the cases of Arthur Jones and Will Watson and on February 10 the action of that body was certified by Robert F. Ligon, clerk of the supreme court. The date of execution was fixed by the supreme court on Friday, March 21. Applications for rehearings of the cases of the two men by the supreme court were filed at once by that body a day or two ago denied the applications. Petitions for a commutation of the sentences were presented to the governor in behalf of both of the doomed men. The governor granted a hearing on the Watson case and a petition beading 15,000 names was presented. However, he declined to exercise executive clemency in tehse cases.

JUDGE OF COURT OF CLAIMS.

Little Doubt But That Birmingham Man Will Be Appointed To Important Judgeship.

Washigton, D. C.—E. K. Campbell is to be judge of the United States court of claims. His appointment has not yet been made and probably will not be until after the extra session of Congress convenes, but there is no doubt but what Attorney General McReynolds will recommend him for appointment to the President for this place and his name will be sent to the Senate early in April.

A prominent congressman from Pennsylvania sought the place for one of his constituents and was told by the Attorney General that Mr. Campbell was slated for the job.

The judgeship to which Mr. Campbell is to be appointed is a life position and pays $6,000 a year. The court of claims sits in Washington and passes upon all claims made against the government.

ALL FORMER RECORDS BROKEN.

Rolls of University Now Show 1196 Students in Attendance.

University.—With a grand total in all its colleges and departments of 1,1196 students, representing 60 of the 67 counties of Alabama, six other states, the District of Columbia and Cuba, the enrollment for the scholastic year 1912-13 breaks all previous attendance records of the university and surpasses the enrollment of 1911-12 by 52 per cent.

This registration is distributed as follows: College of arts and sciences, 309; college of engineering, 82; school of law, 139, a total of 530 students this session at Tuscaloosa. In the school of medicine at Mobile there are this year 149 matriculates. And in the last session of the summer school 517 were registered.

An investigation of the distribution of the student body by counties and states made by a member of the Press club here shows that Jefferson county, with a delegation of 96, leads all the rest.

CYCLONE SWEEPS THE COUNRTY SPREADING DEATH AND DESTRUCTION

MANY KILLED AND NEARLY $3,000,000 IN PROPERTY DESTROYED.

ALABAMA CITIES SUFFER

Lower Peachtree Practically Wiped Out of Existence, While 30 Are Reported Killed.

Montgomery, Ala.—More than 100 persons are reported killed and hundreds were injured, some mortally, by a storm of tornado intensity which raged over central western, southern and parts of eastern states. Property damage will run well into the millions.

Definite advices have been received accounting for at least 70 persons dead with reports from points temporarily cut off from wire communication by the storm, adding hourl yto the list.

Reports from Alabama show the loss of life was heaviest in this state, the number of dead being slightly definitely placed at 27 with additional fatalities reported but not confirmed. Lower Peach Tree was practically wiped out. Two are dead in Indiana, three in Tennessee, two in Ohio, two in New York, one in Michigan, two in Louisiana five in Mississippi and one in Texas.

Accompanying the death lists are estimates of the injured totalling more than 200 with additions coming in at brief intervals.

Coming up out of the southwest, the storm swept with startling suddenness diagonally across the country from northern Texas to western Pennsylvania and New York, besecting the Mississippi valley and moving northeastward across the Ohio into the Great Lake region.

Shifting winds or great volience accompanied in various sections by snow, sleet and hail, characterized the most destructive storm of the year and rarely equalled in the extent of its sweep and damage. Buildings toppled before the blow in nearly a dozen states and death lay all along its wake.

The property loss was heavy all along the storm's track.

Besides demolishing or unroofing buildings and felling trees, the high winds, rain, hail and sleet did serious damage to early crops, according to reports from some of the affected sections. Estimates of the damage to property from Indiana and Michigan alone aggregating $2,000,000, about evenly divided between the two states. Early reports of losses ranging from $25,000 to $500,000, or more from sections of the storm region indicated that the total would reach large figures.

Wires fell in all directions before the blow. Not in many years has there been such prostration of the telegraph and telephone service. Chicago was cut off for hours from communication with points east. Only by devious routes was communication finally established. Railroad traffic was seriously delayed in many districts where wire communication was crippled and washouts occurred.

The wind which wiped out so much property and cost so many lives attained record velocities at some points. Figures given by the weather bureau in Washington showed that at Detroit it reached 88 miles an hour, a new high record in that city; 84 miles at Toledo, 88 miles an hour at Buffalo, and at Memphis 64 miles. Cold weather is trailing the destructive blow. The storm seems to have spent its force and then taking the accustomed route of such disturbances out the St. Lawrence valleys.

Selma, Ala.—Lower Peachtree, a thriving community of about 400 inhabitants on the Alabama river in Wilcox county, about 75 miles south of Selma, was practically wiped out of existence by a cyclone which touched there. According to reports received in Selma 18 whites and 12 negroes are known to be dead. Between 20 and 30 white and negro residents of the village are missing and are believed to dead.

So far as was obtainable from meagre reports in Selma the partial list of the white dead follows:

Miss Mary Watson of Selma, school and music teacher; Mr. and Mrs. Clark, G. E. Williamson and three members of his family, four members of the Sables family, Mrs. L. D. Bryant and two daughters, as well as several members of the Cooper family. With 18 whites and 12 negroes known to be dead and with not less than 30 residents of the village missing.

Central or southwestern Alabama has never before been visited by a cyclone of such force as that which has practically wiped Lower Peachtree from the face of the earth. From reports the path of the cyclone was a half mile in breadth and about three miles in length. It extended from west to east through the county. In the path of the winds there were numbers of shacks occupied by negroes who did not go as usual to the stores of Lower Peachtree. Among the debris of the razed homes of that section it is expected that more than the reported missing will turn up. Practically every coffin which was in stock at Thomasville and Pinehill were put on wagons and carried to the stricken district.

Montgomery, Ala.—A special from Thomasville, Ala., says that nineteen white and nine colored persons lost their lives in the storm which swept that section. The town is practically wiped out.

Birmingham, Ala.—Traveling in a southeast direction, a cyclone swept through the western part of Birmingham, leaving in its wake damage conservatively estimated at $100,000. No fatalities or injuries reported. Churches especially seemed to be the particular prey. Powderly Baptist church was wrecked. The Protestant church at Cleveland was demolished. St. Andrew's Episcopal church was blown from its foundations, while the parish house is a complete wreck. Roof of the Southside Baptist church was loosened from its holdings. The church at Dolomite was completely wrecked.

Decatur, Ala.—A white boy, Joel Sherill, aged 8 years, was killed outright and a number of negroes are reported killed by the cyclone windstorm which struck this section. The roof was blown off the Masonic Temple at Trinity and the Episcopal church and a number of tenemefits wrecked.

Huntsville Ala.—Monrovia, White Cross Roads and Meridianville, northwest and north of Huntsville, in Madison county, were swept by a cyclone, and a great many houses were blown away. Two persons were killed and many injured.

At White Cross Roads the homes of Cletus White, Ike Buford and Jerry Horton were blown away, the Matthews farm was stripped of all buildings except the manor house.

At Meridianville the Methodist church was destroyed. Mitchel's store and Thompson's store were badly damaged, and the Hampton school was almost demolished. The path of the cyclone at Meridianville was a quarter of a mile wide.

Pell City, Ala.—Pell City and vicinity was visited by a very severe wnid storm and reports are that a great deal of damage has been done. In Pell City very little damage resulted. Most of the damage was done at Eden, where the Methodist church was blown to the ground and is a wreck; the Eden high school building was blown from its foundation. At the Dunlap saw mill every house was blown to the ground and the only injury is reported from this place, where one of the children of R. G. Steed was hurt by falling timber.

Memphis, Tenn.—Five persons were killed and more than 50 injured by the storm at Popiar Bluff, Mo., according to members of the crew of the St. Louis and San Francisco railroad passenger train. They also reported one dead and 25 injured at Hoxie, Ark., and the town practically blown away. Great damage was done at Popiar Bluff and in the country between that point and Hoxie.

Jackson, Miss.—A special from Rule ville, Holmes county, Mississippi says that town suffered serious damage from a storm. Three negroes are reported to have been killed. Among many building which were more or less damaged was a 30 room hotel which was lifted off its foundation and carried several feet away.

Columbus, O.—Three persons known to be dead, a score missing and unaccounted for, several score injured, many seriously, and property damage estimated at considerably in excess of $1,000,000, is a summary of the damage done by the storm. William Wicks, aged 75, was killed when a smokestack at the county infirmary fell. Richard Plimmer, a Columbus contractor, was killed when the walls of a brick building on which he was working, was blown down, burying him and three other workmen. The latter were seriously injured. The third known victim, Nicholas Boyer, a painter in Cleveland, was killed when he was blown from a scaffold

Macon, Miss.—Seven negroes were killed near Macon by a small tornado which destroyed the residence of M. Obyrne, four miles north of here and wrecked several negro cabins in that vicinity. None of the Obyrne family was injured. One negro was killed in that vinsity. On the adjoining place a negro woman and her four children were killed. One negro woman had her child blown from her arms. The body was not found until several hours after the storm. No damage was done in Macon.

Hedin, Ala.—Twelve houses were blown down in Hedin in a heavy storm that swept over this section. Several persons were hurt, none seriously. The storm was terrific between Cook Springs and Pell City. Much property was damaged.

Memphis, Tenn.—In Mississippi the storm was severe from Grenada to Water Valley. At Senatobia the wind was unusually high, and houses are said to have been tossed about as if playthings.

A CALL TO ARMS

ANOTHER SPEAKS OUT IN MEETING

Mr. Editor:—

I have hesitated to appear in print because I thought it best to allow older heads to have the first say, but they seem to be so hesitant about speaking their sentiments I am almost forced to give expression to my views. I wish it were otherwise and that the older ones would come to our rescue, for I verily believe that if they would do so almost every young man in the county would buckle on his armor and go forth to do battle for better roads.

I cannot see how any reasoning man can stand out against a bond issue when he looks the cold facts in the face; I do not understand why any citizen of the county can oppose a movement that will enhance the value of our property, increase our productive capacities and give us greater pleasure in country life than we have yet been permitted to enjoy.

We have seen the old "warning system" worn to a frazzle; our roads are no better than they were forty years ago—not even so good We undertook a new system which has worked well in other counties but discovered it would not suit our particular county on account of the various soils and other conditions. The system itself is not to blame; it has accomplished much good in other sections. To be sure we have to admit that it brought us no permanent good but that does not mean that our Commissioners are to be censured for having made an honest effort to secure better conditions for us; that they failed was not the result of a dishonest effort, but because of the adoption of a system not adapted to our section—merely an error in judgment—and all of us are subject to such things.

If, then, having tried the old warning system and the improved "flat section system" for sandy sections, and having made a miserable failure with both, it appears to me that the sensible thing for us to do is to apply that system which, wherever it has been tried, and I am informed it has been applied in more than a thousand counties, has proven itself a decided success.

We have improved our educational systems by adopting the ideas of others and incorporating the best, the proven theories; the same is true of our church, agricultural and other systems No one would presume in this day to employ the old systems of farming; no would begin to be satisfied with the old educational systems. They are antiquated, useless and almost forgotten. Activity and progress has been the order of change. Why should we not adopt it in the matter of working public roads?

The Spring time is now upon us; shortly the Fall will be here and we will need roads to move our crops; the loss of time, of labor and the disasterous effects upon farm teams and vehicles should make a reasonable appeal to every farmer in the county.

We know—those of us who have studied the conditions—that in those counties where bonds have been issued for the building of public roads, the farmers were the direct beneficiaries, the profit gatherers. Those who had to occupy ten days to move their crops under old systems required but two days under bond system; the saving of time itself more than paid for the bond tax, to say nothing of the wear and tare.

If we should stop a moment to consider the dilly-dally system we have heretofore employed and the superior merits of the bond system there could not possibly be a forceful objection to it.

For instance, a man owning two thousand dollars worth of property and raising, say, ten bales of cotton, requires at least two days to move his cotton to town for sale; going to town he is liable to break a trace, cripple a mule or in some other way come to misfortune.

If we figure his team at three dollars per day (and that is reasonable enough) the two days would cost him eight dollars to move his crop. Under the bond system he could take his entire crop to town in one day—saving thereby at the above figures four dollars in actual money besides being able to put the extra day on his farm. That, however, is but one feature of the proposition. He might go on under the old system for a generation and at the end of his long life have no better roads than he enjoyed in his boyhood. With the bond system in a year he would have, think of it, ACTUALLY HAVE, good roads and the FOUR DOLLARS saved in one year would pay the entire debt for he would save that four dollars each year thereafter.

Its purely and simply a matter of revenue; paying for something that we need; paying it and GETTING it; whereas under the present system we are PAYING and NOT GETTING.

There is much to be said on the bond issue proposition, but one must not undertake to say it all. I am satisfied that the saving to me would much more than pay my bond issue tax, and besides I would have something for my money, whereas I am now paying (and also working the roads) and get NOTHING for my money or my time.

If we are afraid of our present officers where are we to get better? They are Chilton county men; their records for honesty are good; if not, then we are to blame for putting them in office. The old political see-saw that we must not trust our officers is worn out; we can and must trust them or hide our faces in shame.

I want, in conclusion, to commend the Commissioners for having secured that road machine for demonstration purposes; it has shown us that good roads CAN be built if we GO AFTER THEM in the proper way. I hope they will buy the machine and then give us an opportunity to vote for bonds—we certainly need them.

For one I want to say that I am not afraid to trust our Commissioners, though the majority of them are politically opposed to my views; I believe they are honest and will do the best they can for the county. I want also, to commend their painstaking care in not entering into contracts for the purchase of machinery until it has proven itself to be worth the purchase price.

Please write me for BONDS; I want to go on record that way, and I want to be among the first to endorse the movement that will save to our farming sections much money, time and labor each year; that will not only do this but will also give us at a nominal cost to each of us, roads over which we can travel without fear of disaster.

T. L. McKEE.

ALL FOOLS' DAY OBSERVED.

PUPILS PUT IT OVER PROFESSOR PICKENS.

The pupils of Clanton Academy put it over Prof. Pickens Tuesday morning good and proper; he was up town early in the morning and several persons asked him what he was going to do during the day. Invariably he replied that he going to teach school as usual. Each of his inquirers suggested that he would probably not have any pupils to teach." Oh! yes, you need have no fears of that; my pupils know better than to abandon school during the middle of the week," was his usual reply, but when he went to the academy for opening services he learned something that he had not known before. Less than half, probably not a third of the pupils were present; a large majority of them had arranged picnic baskets—that is the girls had—and the boys had engaged several wagons. Into these wagons all were crowded and a merry march for the woods begun. They passed through the town singing and screaming at the top of their voices. At the academy Prof. Pickens twisted and squirmed for a few moments, then announced that he would close the school for the day as but a few of the pupils were present to recite; in the meantime, however, he secured the names of those faithful ones who had reported for duty, and announced that the others, failing to have a good excuse for non-attendance, would receive no mercy at his hands.

Those who know the genial professor, however, are confident that he will not deal harshly with his youngsters; it seems to have been the custom with the pupils of the academy for years to observe "All Fools' Day" in the same manner it was observed this year. Each year the principal declares that he will take drastic action but when the time comes he usually enters into the fun with a cherry smile.

Give the young folks a good lecture on organization, school discipline, and then let them go, Professor; they'll be all the better for their little outing. You know "boys will be boys," and, as for that matter, "girls will be girls," too.

"Admit the corn;" acknowledge that the youngsters "put it over you good and proper."

MEDICAL SOCIETY

HOLDS INTERESTING MEETING.

The Chilton County Medical Society met in regular session on Tuesday, April 1st, at 10 a. m., and after the regular routine of business Dr. C. A. Grote, representing the State Board of Health and the Rockefeller Hookworm Commission, made an interesting talk on the campaign that is to at once begin in this county for the eradication of hook worm disease and the betterment of sanitation in general. In his address he gave a history of the work done along these lines in the South, and especially in Alabama since the inauguration of the campaign, emphasising especially that hook worm disease is not only important because it kills, but from the fact that thousands of people of our State are being incapacitated and debilitated, thus making Alabama and her people poorer. Less than ten years ago hookworn disease was found to be prevalent in the Southern states since that time the world has never known such an organized campaign as has been waged against this disease.

Mr. Rockefeller appropriated a million dollars to help in the fight, the State Boards of Health have all contributed, and each county into which the work has been carried has aided to rid the people of this disease. More than 400,000 patients have been treated in the Southern States, and the fight is just under way. Thirty counties in Alabama have been worked and 27,000 patients have been treated for hook worm disease.

Dr. Grote will be in Chilton county for the next two months conducting this campaign, and the Chilton County Board of Health is enthusiastic over the work, and bespeak for Dr Grote the hearty co-operation of every individual in the county.

At the afternoon session Dr. H. P. Perry of the State Board of Health made an interesting talk on the Importance of Vital and Mortuary Statistics. The Society realizes more than the importance of this phaze of the medical work and hope to better these conditions in Chilton county.

The next session of the Society meets at Mountain Creek, Tuesday, May 6th, at 10 a. m.

T. J. MARCUS, Sec'y.

Make Us Prove It

We dare not exaggerate to you. We are dependent upon your patronage. To get it we must have your trust and confidence. We make the following statements with a full understanding of what they mean to us. You are safe when you believe in these statements.

For the Bowels

If you only knew as much as we and those who have used them know about Rexall Orderlies, you would be as enthusiastic about recommending them as we are. They taste just like candy. They act so easily and so pleasantly that the taking of them is a pleasure.

Even children like Rexall Orderlies; and you know that if a medicine appeals to a child, it will appeal to grown-ups.

Rexall Orderlies

help chase gloom, dispel blues and make you feel happy by their splendid tonic, cleansing and strengthening effect upon the bowels.—They act to free the system—and keep it free—from the distress and ill feeling that naturally results from irregular and inactive bowels.

Rexall Orderlies do this quietly, without griping or causing nausea, purging or excessive looseness. They act to overcome and remove the cause of bowel ills and in a short time usually make unnecessary the continued use of physics and purgatives, thus tending to stop such unhealthy habits as may have been formed.

Make Us Prove This

We do not ask you to take our word for this. We want you to make us prove it, and at no cost to you.

Buy a box of Rexall Orderlies at our store. Use them once, or use up the whole box. Then, if you are not thoroughly satisfied, just come back empty handed and tell us. Without obligating you or questioning you we will return the money you paid us for them.

Doesn't that indicate that Rexall Orderlies are at least worthy of trial? Doesn't it prove our faith in them? Doesn't it merit your confidence? Could any offer be more fair to you?

We particularly recommend Rexall Orderlies for children, delicate and aged persons. Rexall Orderlies come in convenient vest-pocket size tin boxes. 12 tablets, 10c; 36 tablets, 25c; 80 tablets, 50c.

CAUTION: Please bear in mind that Rexall Orderlies are not sold by all druggists. You can buy Rexall Orderlies only at The Rexall Stores.
You can buy Rexall Orderlies in this community only at our store:

Lower Peachtree, a thriving community of about four hundred inhabitants on the Alabama river in Wilcox county, about 75 miles south of Selma, was practically wiped out of existance by a cyclone which touched there. The deaths number 15 whites and 10 negroes.

Central or southwestern Alabama has never before been visited by a cyclone of such force as that which has practically wiped Lower Peachtree from the face of the earth.

The path of the cyclone was a half mile in breadth and about three miles in length. It extended from west to east through the county. In the path of the winds there were numbers of shacks occupied by negroes who did not go as usual to the stores of Lower Peachtree. Among the debris of the razed homes of that section it is expected that more than the reported missing will turn up. Practically every coffin which was in stock at Thomasville and Pinehill were put on wagons and carried to the stricken district.

PIMPLES CAME IN BLOTCHES

Morrison, Tenn.—"For one year I suffered from a very severe attack of acne or pimples, accompanied by eczema. It first showed itself by the formation of small red, rather hard pimples which were not only disfiguring, but were painful. They also appeared on my neck and chest. Their itching was often so intense as to cause insomnia, and they very often caused pain and burning. I tried several so-called 'sure cure' remedies, but they did little or no good. Several months ago I heard of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and wrote for a sample.

"I found them so soothing that I at once purchased a twenty-five cent cake of Cuticura Soap, and a fifty cent box of Cuticura Ointment. After using them for about a month, all of the itching and the pimples had entirely disappeared." (Signed) John Finger, Dec. 30, 1911.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston." Adv.

Personality.

Personality is just one's centralized experience of the world, and there is no way of making it greater except by making that experience greater and more centralized; in other words, being a bigger, broader, better man or woman. Every intellectual achievement, every moral victory, every bit of solid work, will leave personality richer, profounder, more delicate. In fact, to cultivate it, the plan is don't cultivate it. Let it alone and do your duty and it will grow.—E. B. Andrews, in the International Journal of Ethics.

Profound Criticism.

Kin Hubbard, the Indiana humorist—one of them, that is to say—once was assigned to cover a performance of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." Hubbard had his brain-child, old "Abe Martin," report the play. This was the critique: "'Uncle Tom's Cabin' played down t' Melodeon hall las' night. Th' dogs was good, but they had poor support."—Everybody's Magazine.

FLY TO PIECES.

The Effect of Coffee on Highly Organized People.

"I have been a coffee user for years, and about two years ago got into a very serious condition of dyspepsia and indigestion. It seemed to me I would fly to pieces. I was so nervous that at the least noise I was distressed, and many times could not straighten myself up because of the pain."

Tea is just as injurious, because it contains caffeine, the same drug found in coffee.

"My physician told me I must not eat any heavy or strong food, and ordered a diet, giving me some medicine. I followed directions carefully, but kept on using coffee and did not get any better.

"Last winter my husband, who was away on business, had Postum served to him in the family where he boarded. He liked it so well that when he came home he brought some with him. We began using it and I found it most excellent.

"While I drank it my stomach never bothered me in the least, and I got over my nervous troubles. When the Postum was gone we returned to coffee, then my stomach began to hurt me as before, and the nervous conditions came on again.

"That showed me exactly what was the cause of the whole trouble, so I quit drinking coffee altogether and kept on using Postum. The old troubles left again and have never returned."

"There's a reason," and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Wellville, in pkgs.

OH! MY BACK!

A stubborn backache that hangs on, week after week, is cause to suspect kidney trouble, for when the kidneys are inflamed and swollen, bending the back brings a sharp twinge that almost takes the breath away.

It's hard to work and just as hard to rest or sleep.

Doan's Kidney Pills revive sluggish kidneys—relieve congested, aching kidneys. The proof is an amazing collection of backache testimonials.

A CONNECTICUT CASE

Charles R. Phillips, 581 Elm St., New Haven, Conn., says: "I suffered from cutting backaches and dizzy spells, and my whole system was run down. I was confined to bed for three weeks and my physicians said I was bordering o. Bright's disease. His medicine failed to help me, and finally I determined to give Doan's Kidney Pills a trial. They relieved me almost from the first and soon cured me entirely."

IN WARFARE OF FACTIONS

Snapshot of Quiet Domestic Scene When Rivals Fought for the Control of Mexico.

There was a dramatic silence.

"We need butter for supper," said the wife and mother firmly. "I don't see how we can get along without it. I'll send Johnnie to the grocer's. It's just across the street, you know. He's little and can run fast."

"No," said the husband and father firmly, "I will go."

But the wife flung herself on his breast as he took down his hat.

"No, no, John," she cried; "you can't be spared. I will go."

He caught her by the arms.

"No," he quickly said. "What would I do without you? Hark!"

They all listened.

"I can open a tumbler of jelly," said the wife and mother.

"Gimme jelly," cried the child.

So they sat down and ate their butterless supper.

And all this happened because they lived in the City of Mexico, and the rival factions were using the streets for gun practice.

ACCIDENT DUE TO A CUSPIDOR

Mother of Young Baby Stumbles And Falls. Serious Complications Set In.

Duffield, Va.—In advices from this place, Mrs. J. L. Johnson says: "When my baby was about a month old, I stumbled and fell over a cuspidor, and contracted such pains in my back, I could not stoop over without falling to the floor.

I got terribly weak, and was very uneasy about myself.

My case was certainly a serious one. I was so delicate that most people thought I was going to have consumption, and I thought so myself.

Finally my husband advised me to try Cardui, the woman's tonic. I tried it, and am confident that it saved my life.

The pains in my side and back have disappeared, and all of my friends here say that I am looking better than I have done for a long time.

I recommend Cardui to all of my lady friends, as I believe it will help them, just as it did me, if they will only give it a trial.

You may use this letter in any way you wish. I feel so grateful, for if it had not been for Cardui, the woman's tonic, I believe I would by this time have been in my grave."

Try Cardui for your troubles. It will help you, as it did Mrs. Johnson.

RECORD OF WORK WELL DONE

Anti-Tuberculosis Campaign Fruitful of Results for the Good of All Mankind.

Some comparisons showing the progress of the anti-tuberculosis campaign in the last eight years and the present needs of this movement are made by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis in a brief report of its work recently issued. During the eight years of its work, the national association has assisted in the organization of over 800 state and local anti-tuberculosis societies located in almost every state and territory of the Union. Over 500 hospital and sanatoria have been established, with more than 30,000 beds for consumptives. About 400 dispensaries, with more than 1,000 physicians in attendance and at least 150 open air schools for tuberculous and anaemic children, have also been provided. Laws dealing with tuberculosis have been passed in 45 states, and ordinances on this subject have been adopted in over 200 cities and towns. An active field campaign of education against tuberculosis has been carried on in 40 states and territories by means of lectures, exhibits, the press, and the distribution of over 100,000,000 pamphlets on this disease.

No Little Girl for Him.

The six-year-old son of a well-known Indianapolis family attends a dancing school. He is a chubby little fellow who has not begun to stretch out yet, and he keenly feels his "shortage." He demands that he be recognized as a little "grownup." Several days ago the teacher planned to instruct her pupils in dancing "the Butterfly." A five-year-old girl who is small for her age, and just a trifle stouter than our hero, but an adept at dancing, was assigned as his partner. He gazed at her in silence. Then he took hold of her hand and, with his mouth set firmly, walked straight over to the teacher.

"Don't you think you'd better give me a bigger girl?" he asked.—Indianapolis News.

Explaining the Needle.

A typesetter in a printing house became very adroit in explaining the large number of misprints for which he was responsible. Even when he changed his work and became a waiter in a restaurant, says Das Echo, his skill did not forsake him.

One day he had served a guest with a plate of soup, and was turning away, when he was called back sharply.

"This is an outrage!" cried the indignant diner. "I find a needle in my soup! What does this mean?"

"Just a misprint, sir," explained the former typesetter. "It should have been a noodle."—Youth's Companion.

Counter-Thrust.

"A very good retort!" said Senator Lodge in an argument in this city over the immigration bill. "A very good retort indeed! It reminds me of Weeks.

"Weeks and his wife were quarreling. Weeks, with a hard, scornful laugh, 'you acted like a fish out of water.'

"Weeks sighed.

"'But a very cleverly landed fish,' he said, in a musing voice."

DID HE WRITE IT ?

LETTER ON GOOD ROADS MATTER.

We have received a letter from Mr. Allen P. Howison, of Randolph, on the "Good Roads" proposition. Mr. Howison is a large land owner, a large tax payer and a large user of the public roads. Being in the lumber business and owning large tracts of land in various counties of the State he naturally should want good roads; however, his article does not indicate that he does. Mr. Howison is a man of culture, of large experience and of influence; his article is not signed with a pen (being signed with type writer) and we cannot believe that a man of his standing wrote the article purporting to come from him, hence, even if we had the time or the space we would not publish the article until we hear from him personally stating that he is in reality the writer of the article.

We, of course, intend no reflection upon Mr. Howison; we have known him since boyhood days and have never known him to do anything that would not reflect credit upon himself and his friends.

We invited an open discussion of the road question and are glad to have every phaze of it brought to light, but knowing Mr. Howison as we do we cannot believe that he is the author of the article which was sent us for publication.

This paper goes outside of Chilton county; is read by a considerable number of people of intelligence and financial standing who are not in any way connected with Chilton county's good roads—or bad ones—and we do not wish to do Mr. Howison a seeming injustice.

The article will be published just as soon as Mr. Howison over his own signature, vouches for the genuineness of the letter.

In the envelope was a post office order for a subscription to this paper, but that indicates nothing whatever.

Articles to be printed must be SIGNED.

SPECIAL BONUS OFFER

IT HOLDS GOOD UNTIL THE FIRST COUNT ON THURSDAY, APRIL 10, WHEN VOTES WILL BE COUNTED AND A $10 GOLD PIECE WILL BE AWARDED TO THE LADY HAVING THE MOST VOTES.

The big prize contest is attracting more attention every day, so as incentive to all contestants, we have decided to give the following special votes:

For every seven new subscriptions 4,000 extra, making a total of 8,200. These subscriptions need not be for one party for seven years, or for seven different people for one year, but must be handed in all at one time.

For every seven renewal subscriptions 3,000 extra, making a total of 6,500. These may be for seven different people, or all for one, but must be all renewals and handed in all at one time.

The above special offer will hold good until the first count, on April 10, at which time votes will be counted by the judges who will award the $10 in gold to the contestant who receives the largest number of votes up to the first count. The ballot box will close promptly at 7:30 p.m., on Thursday, April 10.

Remember the $10 in gold to be given to the contestant having the largest number of votes on April 10 is a special prize offered by the PRESS. It will in no way effect the standing of the winner of the contest.

A few contestants thought that the winning of the $10 would effect their votes for the piano. It will NOT. All votes found in the box on April 10 will be included in the final count, which will decide the winners of the piano and other prizes.

Remember that each subscription you receive—either new, renewal or back—will get a certain number of votes with an extra bonus vote also.

All votes to be counted must be in by 7:30 o'clock p.m. Thursday, April 10.

The following names have been suggested to act as awarding committee and to count the ballots, and if no objections are offered they will constitute the committee:

W. W. Fox,
W. A. Kemp,
Dr. J. E. Gowan.

Get busy and vote for your choice. The contest will be conducted squarely and no partiality shown to anyone. Do it now and help someone reap the benefits of the liberal offer

FOR A COUNTY HIGH SCHOOL.

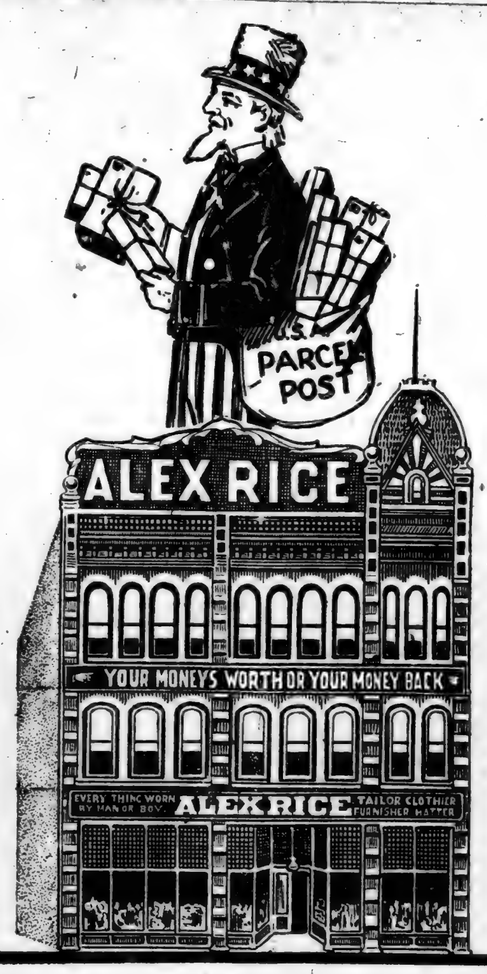
Editor Clanton Press:

I am very much interested in the subject of a County High School for Chilton Connty. We can very plainly see that Chilton County has been sleeping over her rights and has kept closed the door of opportunity to the boys and girls of the county.

I am with Judge Deason on this question; we need a school that will teach the youths of our county about the practical methods of farming, etc. I believe in teaching the boys and girls that there is a perennial nobleness in honest toil, not in teaching them that work is something in which nobody but savages take part.

Look at the number of boys and girls who leave the county each year to study at some institution of learning. Why do they leave this county? Because we haven't the schools in this county that other counties have. Simply because we haven't taken advantage of our opportunities as other counties have.

It has been very plainly shown by Profs. Pickens and Foshee, Judge Reynolds, Judge Deason, and others, wherein the High School would be a paying investment for the county, not only in dollars and cents (which should be the least consideration) but in the number of educated boys and girls, thus bringing our county and state further toward the front in our needed progress and educational development.



Another reason why we should have a County High School is this: Our county has never had a Seventh Grade Elementary Examination for the rural schools and will probably not have one this year. Why? Because we have no County High School for them to enter should they pass the examination. And, by-the-way, I want to say here that I believe this examination is the key to the solution of the problem of grading rural schools. Each successful applicant would expect to enter a High School with all the advantages and privileges of a High School student, which they could not do by going to some other county.

To build a High School is a duty which the county owes to the future generations of boys and girls; so let the people of the county get wide awake to this important matter and go about establishing a County High School for Chilton County. Respectfully,

R. A. SMITH.

Land Value Almost Doubled

WHEN a Lee county, Illinois, farmer bought a run down 400-acre farm, his neighbors thought he had made a bad bargain. After three years' soil treatment by scientific methods, he raised more than eighty bushels of corn to the acre on land that produced less than thirty bushels the first year he farmed it.

It is no longer unusual for us to get reports from farmers who have been using manure spreaders consistently for periods ranging from three to five years, to the effect that their land is regularly raising so much more produce that the value of the land is almost doubled.

I H C Manure Spreaders

are made in various styles and sizes to meet all conditions. The low machines are not too low to be hauled, loaded, through deep mud or snow. I H C spreaders are made with trussed steel frames in wide, medium and narrow styles; all of guaranteed capacity. There are both return and endless aprons. In short, there is an I H C spreader built to meet your conditions and made to spread manure, straw, lime, or ashes as required.

I H C spreaders will spread manure evenly on the level, going up hill, or down. The wheel rims are wide and equipped with Z-shaped lugs, which provide ample tractive power. The rear axle is located well under the body and carries most of the load. The apron moves on large rollers. The beater drive is positive, but the chain wears only one side. The I H C dealer will show you the most effective machine for your work. You can get catalogues from him, or, if you prefer, write

CLIP YOUR HORSES.

A clipped horse will do more work and keep in better condition on same amount of food, than one unclipped, and he will do it with more vim and vigor—easier to keep clean and looks so much better in fact it makes a new horse out of him. Clip him this Spring and you will never let him go through another without being clipped.

We have a first class machine and experienced men to do the work. Our Vetenary Department is equipped with power floats for filling horses teeth without cutting or brushing their gums and mouth like the old style floats. If your horse isn't doing well or does not respond to feed as you think he should; in the majority of cases it is on account of rough or uneven teeth, and a dollar or so to spend toward the correction of the evil, will pay well in the horses rapid improvement, enabling him to properly masticate his food.

Remember we can take care of your horse clipping vetenary, dental work and horse shoeing. Come to see us, We guarantee satisfaction.

THE DIXIE PLAYERS

Last Thursday night at the Clanton Theatre the Dixie Amusemust Company appeared before a large and appreciative audience. The title of the play was "The Sweetest Girl in Dixie" and to say that that the company entertained the large audience in a masterly manner would but express the real facts. To individualize, or to give any particular artist special mention would be an injustice to the others, for each acted the part assigned with so much credit that it would be impossible to speak too nighly of them.

Clanton little knows the value of a good theatre company or an up-to-date opera house, but when the long dull days of Summer come they will begin to appreciate what they now have.

Give the local company all the encourrgement possible; they deserve it and will appreciate it.

If you wish to buy your feed at the right price, go to the new Clanton Feed Store, where you will find a fresh line of all kinds of feed stuff. The place that makes the prices right and the dollar do its duty. Visit this place.

Dr. J. P. Ellsberry, the Soldiers' Home physician, visited Clanton, last week.

TEACHERS EXEMINATION

The next State Teachers' Examination for Chilton county will be held at the court house in Clanton on the third Monday in April, 1913, 21, 22, and 23 days of April, 1913. All applicants should be present at 9 a.m. Monday, April 21st, as some preparations should be made before the regular work can be taken up, which must begin at 10 a.m.

ALL TELL STORIES OF HEROIC DEEDS

Survivors of the Flood Disaster Proud of Record Made by Brothers

NEEDS OF OTHERS PUT FIRST

No One Has Cause to Be Ashamed of Spirit Displayed in Agonizing Time—Some Fearful Experiences Brought to Light.

Chicago.—"Women and children first."

This world-old cry, made more memorable when the Titanic disaster thrilled the world, echoed over the flood-stricken districts of Ohio and Indiana. Refugees who reached Chicago told innumerable stories of men risking their lives to save the women and children.

The unwritten law of the sea was observed on the inland rivers. The entire tenor of stories told by refugees was one of bravery, self-sacrifice and devotion to the weak and unprotected.

"Women and children first."

Only One of Many.

"What is your name?" asked the registerer who received refugees at Dayton, O., of a slender person in men's clothing.

"Norma Thurma," was the reply.

Norma came in with Ralph Myers, his wife and little baby. Myers had climbed a telegraph pole first. He let down a rope to his wife, who tied it to a meal sack which contained their baby, three months old. Myers pulled the rope with its precious burden up and then let it down to aid his wife. Holding on to two thin wires, he traveled across the cable a full block to safety.

Whole Families on Roofs.

All of the first terrible night, while the city of Peru, Ind., was in inky darkness because of the cutting off of the gas and electric light supply, men, women and children, and in some instances entire families, lay flat where they had crawled to the roofs of their homes, waiting for daylight to bring relief. Hundreds of others were jammed in the courthouse and lodge buildings, which were in the only four blocks of the city not under water.

The first thought of rescue parties was to send into the town boats to carry to safety those who were threatened with drowning. Telephone communication had been opened with points in the residence and business districts and from those marooned in buildings it was learned that many persons, including some women who held their children in their arms, had been on roofs exposed to an almost freezing temperature all night. One man telephoned he had seen several fall from exhaustion and slip into the water. It was the purpose of the rescuers first to reach those in greatest danger. Hundreds of others huddled together at the courthouse, although in want of food and water, were to be taken later.

Heroes in All Classes.

If a great loss of life was averted at Peru, this is due to some heroes of the Owen Wister type, river men and water rats from surrounding lakes, who by unbelievable prowess with a pair of frail oars rescued the doomed, and in splendid harmony with their virile efforts shines the spirit of women who valiantly helped, supremely oblivious to distressing surroundings.

Among the latter are Mrs. R. H. Bouslog, Mrs. R. C. Edwards, and Mrs. Albert Shirk, all three wives of local millionaires, and also leaders in the self-sacrifices required to provide sandwiches, coffee and smiles to a panic stricken multitude in emergency quarters.

Among the boatmen two brothers, Charley and Ted Knight, are praised on the corners left in Peru. Ted, with W. A. Huff, a dentist, braved the turbulent waters of the Wabash river, cutting off Peru on the south side and rendering uncertain the fate of the inhabitants of South Peru. According to the report the two rescuers reached the opposite shore alive, after having been overturned several times.

The Man on the Roof.

There were two heroes on the Dayton floods. Their names are M. B. Stohl and C. D. Williamson, and they are employes of the American Telegraph and Telephone company.

Stohl is a wire chief at Dayton. He reached the Dayton office of his company late the night before the floods came. The rush of the waters put all the telephone batteries and power out of commission. Forgetting thoughts of escape, Stohl rummaged around until he found a lineman's test set. With this he rigged up a sending and receiving apparatus, and cut in upon the wire on the roof of the four-story building. This wire connected him with Phoneton, a testing station eight miles away. Thus he established communication with Williamson, whose batteries were still working.

Then Stohl sent messages from the flooded city, otherwise cut off from communication with the outside world. All night he stuck to his post. All next day he remained. The following noon found him still on the roof of a building whose foundations were being sapped by the waters.

There he stayed in the rain and cold, with the prospect of death staring him in the face every moment. He sobbed a strong man's sob as he told his tale of death and desolation; of floating wreckage bearing men, women and children doomed to death; of dead bodies borne upon the crest of the waters; of piteous sights, in themselves enough to unnerve the bravest of men. But he stuck to his post.

Surgeon Tells Graphic Story.

Dr. Ray B. Harris, a police surgeon of Dayton, Ohio, and one of the chief workers among the injured immediately after the cyclone, told a graphic story of the sufferings of the hundreds who were hurt.

"When we began to collect the bodies we realized for the first time the fearful state of affairs," said the physician. "It was as grewsome a task as I ever worked at. Some of the bodies were twisted into frightful shapes and some had pieces of wreckage—wood and iron—driven through their bodies. Dozens were smothered to death, some were burned, still others were crushed and beaten to death by the flying timbers.

"Every physician in the city, and even the medical students, were at work Sunday night and all day Monday. I impressed two dentists myself, although I didn't want any teeth drawn. They worked like Trojans, too.

"Some of the taxicab drivers thought it was a golden opportunity to reap a harvest, and demanded huge sums for carrying the injured to the hospitals. The doctors wouldn't stand for anything like that, and I personally thrashed two drivers who presumed to haggle."

Another husky young doctor had an argument with a chauffeur, who demanded $5 apiece for conveying two injured women to a hospital. When he would not yield the physician seized a piece of board and knocked the man senseless with it. Then he took the chauffeur to the hospital with the women and ministered to him.

It is such incidents as this that evidence the fearful night of terror and panic and the day of sorrow that followed.

Hang to Roof Thirty Hours.

After hanging to the roof of their home for thirty hours, with a strong wind blowing and a heavy snow falling, August Schmidt, wife and two children were rescued. None of them could move a muscle, being chilled through. They were removed to Van Cleve School, where hundreds of other rescued were taken.

"I'd have fallen into the water if it hadn't been for daddy," exclaimed the little girl, who was first of the four to recover sufficiently to talk.

"When the water came into the house we had to climb on the roof. Daddy held me and mamma held brother. Oh, it was cold. I thought I was going to die, but daddy kept hold of me."

A little boy, who, during the night clung in full sight of the rescuers, was rescued. He probably will die. The little fellow was discovered after the flood had risen so high he could not weather the waters.

Heroic Rescues Common.

From all parts of Dayton come stories of heroic rescues. The stolid volunteers pay no attention to them. All of them for three days have constantly offered their lives to save others. Several of these men have given their lives on rescue work. Their names are unknown. Watchers on the banks saw them trying to reach persons in floating houses, saw their boats upset and the men go down.

Late in the day a large frame house floated down the river. Four women were in the windows. As they neared the Main street bridge they waved at the crowd on the banks and the building struck the pieces. There was a swirl in the murky waters and a little farther down stream the debris appeared, but none of the women.

Victims Are Cheerful.

One of the remarkable features was the cheerful spirit with which flood victims viewed their plight. This was Dayton's first great flood in many years. Much of the submerged area had been considered safe from high water, but as the majority of residents of these sections looked out on all sides upon a great sweep of muddy, swiftly moving water, they seemed undisturbed.

In some of the poorer sections the attitude of the marooned was not so cheerful. As a motor boat passed before the second floor of one partly submerged house a man leaned out and threatened to shoot unless they took off his wife and a baby that had just been born. The woman, almost dying, was let down from the window by a rope and taken to a place of refuge.

Further on, members of a motor boat party were startled by shots in the second floor of a house about which five feet of water swirled. The boat was stopped and a man peered from the window of the house.

"Why are you shooting?" he was asked.

"Oh, just amusing myself shooting at rats that come upstairs. When are you going to take me out of here?" he replied.

The bodies of a woman and a baby were seen floating down Jefferson street, one of Dayton's main thoroughfares. It was thought they came from the district north of the river.

Go Insane, Slay Families.

There were stories of insanity caused by the flood at Dayton. A father had killed his four children and his wife and then leaped into the flood.

Children had been born in boats that were carrying their mothers to places of safety, and on the roofs of buildings, only to die from exposure.

The suffering of the survivors huddled together in the marooned buildings was awful. Food and water could not be taken to them.

Foreigners killed their countrymen and even members of their families in their desperate efforts to obtain food, according to John Volbrecht of Yukawa street, in North Dayton, who was taken from the one remaining abutments of the Herman street bridge. Volbrecht said he was at his home with his family when the flood struck North Dayton. The house was picked up by the current and carried against the Herman street bridge. Volbrecht said he clung to the bridge and didn't know what became of his family.

One woman with a ten-day-old baby climbed over the roofs of three houses to reach the rescuers.

Many Rescued by a Cable.

Many thrilling stories were told by the Dayton refugees who had been trapped in their attics and on their roofs in the very heart of the flood. A. J. Bard of Belmont avenue, who was penned in the City National Bank building on Third street, near Main, Tuesday, was rescued.

"One hundred and fifty of us were caught in the building," said Mr. Bard. "We remained there until the fire started, then we began to plan an escape."

"We cut the elevator cable and obtained a ball of twine and some small wire from one of the offices. We attracted a boatman, who risked his life to come to us. We gave the boatman one end of the twine and he rowed to the old courthouse. He then pulled the wire over and after that the heavy cable.

"One end of the cable was made fast in the bank building and the other in the old courthouse. Then, with only the light of the burning structure, the 150 persons in the bank building made their way, hand over hand, along the cable over the swirling torrent to the courthouse. I believe every one, men and women, made the trip in safety. During our imprisonment I had two crackers and a slice of chipped beef to eat."

Only Doctor a Drug Fiend.

Terrible scenes were reported from West Indianapolis. Conditions in the flooded district were made worse by the fact that the only physician who was there to attend sufferers was a victim of the morphine habit. In the Methodist church a woman rescued from the bottoms gave premature birth to twins. The physician, what with the horror of his duty and his inability to obtain more of the drug, went insane, and after making three unsuccessful attempts to jump from a window, was placed in a straightjacket.

Forty Dead at Bridge.

Richard Lee, an engineer on the Pennsylvania, who brought in the last train over that line from Logansport, reported a terrible condition at the Pennsylvania bridge over the Wabash on the outskirts of Logansport.

"This bridge is braced across an island and is as near indestructible as a bridge can be made," said Mr. Lee. "It is eighteen miles down stream from Peru and has caught all the debris from that town.

"I think we saw the remains of more than 100 houses stacked up against this bridge, with the current tugging and pulling at them. We could make out thirty or forty dead bodies in the crushed lumber, and it seemed as if some section of Peru must have been overwhelmed suddenly and swept down stream to destruction."

Robber Prices of Boatmen.

Boatmen in Peru, Ind., reaped fortunes by carrying flood sufferers from the danger zone at exorbitant prices, according to M. S. Scott, a traveling salesman of New York, who arrived from Peru with two other traveling men.

"The condition at Peru," said Mr. Scott, "cannot be told. I was at a hotel across the street from the court house and last night six babies were born to women who lay on the bare floor of the building. When we learned of this we had them rowed across the street and gave them our rooms. The boatmen charged $5 each to row three women across the street. We paid $15 to be hauled three miles, and were lucky to get off that cheaply."

Passengers Give Refund Money.

The flood relief fund collected in Chicago was increased $152 by the two hours' delay of the Twentieth Century Limited from New York. For every hour the train is late the passengers are given $1 by the company. It arrived in Chicago two hours behind time.

J. L. Daube of Philadelphia conceived the idea of giving the $2 which would be refunded by the railroad company to the fund. He made known his intentions to Joseph Horowits of New York and Fred K. Townsend of Rochester, who also were passengers. They became enthusiastic and formed a committee to collect the refund slips of all the passengers on the train.

Out of eighty passengers seventy-six readily gave up their slips. Among the four was an Englishman just arrived. The flood situation was explained to him and Daube pictured the sufferings of the victims.

"I don't believe it," declared the Englishman. "It is some bally American scheme to defraud strangers. Show me your credentials. I never heard of any flood. I know all about your schemes in this country to defraud travelers."

DEVASTATION RAMPANT WHEN OHIO RIVERS SWELL

Frightful Losses of Life and Property in Ohio and Indiana Cities and Towns.

DEATH LIST WILL APPROXIMATE 500

Localities Heretofore Considered Safe Visited by Terrible Calamities — Martial Law Invoked to Establish Order — Fires Finish What Waters Spare and the Full Story Not Yet Known

Never within the recollection of the oldest inhabitant have there been such scenes enacted in the section as are recorded in southwestern Ohio, and in the valleys of the Miamis, the Wabash and the White rivers.

Although this section has suffered from flooded rivers, yet it was never dreamed that such utter destruction of life and property could be wrought by the elements as has been in the present Easter season. Heavy rains swelling the streams and the bursting of reservoirs caused such high waters that cities heretofore considered safe places of business and residence were demolished in sections and with the destruction of the buildings and homes came consequent loss of life. Then followed in several instances fire which burned what the waters had spared, and in some places attacked the marooned as they waited for rescue or help where water had never before lain in more than a thin coating as it fell in gentle rains.

Dayton, one of the most prominent of Ohio manufacturing cities, has suffered such a severe blow that it will be long in recovering. The state capital, Columbus, on the Scioto river, was nearly as badly injured. While reports at the first were terrifying, they are happily proved exaggerated in the fright of early stunning intelligence, but with the death list reaching into the hundreds and the property loss into the hundreds of millions of dollars—and the true facts not yet known—the entire world unites in sympathy that has already taken a practical turn and supplies and aid of all sorts are rushing to the stricken districts by every train.

Dayton, O.—Flood waters have receded sufficiently to show that the number of persons drowned in all the affected cities in Ohio and Indiana may not exceed 500. While many persons are still missing to friends and relatives, investigations indicate that many are safe who had been thought lost.

In Dayton careful estimates placed the number of deaths at 150 or fewer. Relief work went on rapidly and all parts of the city were reached.

Many Killed in Business District

The loss of life is confined almost entirely to North Dayton, inhabitated by foreigners and laborers. West Dayton, which comprises districts of a more substantial character and to Riverdale. In Daytonview and other residence districts there was almost no loss of life. Several lives are known to have been lost in the business district, but none of the rumors that human beings had perished in the fire that swept two city blocks stand the test of searching investigation.

Effects of Martial Law Seen

Effects of the strict martial law were to be seen on all sides. Only in extraordinary circumstances were pedestrians permitted upon the streets after 6 o'clock. Reports of looting in some sections of the central Dayton district persisted, but it was believed raiding was restricted to isolated instances.

Food Supplies Reach the City

Food supplies reached Dayton in large quantities. The relief stations were sufficiently organized to take care of the incoming refugees from the flooded districts. The problem of caring for the homeless still was serious, but with the promise of warm weather it was hoped there would be less suffering than first was threatened. Health officers report that there is only one car of lime in the city.

Thousands Freed From Houses

With the receding of the water, nine thousand have been taken off in boats, and of this number 1000 are being taken care of in relief stations. There has been a remarkable absence of sickness.

No Description Adequate

Even the most graphic photographs taken of the ruins fail to reveal in comprehensive detail the desolation of the stricken city. Whole streets are heaps of splintered timbers, twisted steel and brick and mortar. Once handsome residences are to be seen upturned and broken in parts. Blocks and blocks of houses are jammed against one another in baffling confusion. Debris litters scores of thoroughfares for long instances and about all is a sea of mud and water.

United in Sympathy

Without exception the people are considering others before themselves. Hungry men receive rations but divide them, or give them to women and children physically unable to stand long hours waiting to be served. Since the flood came scores of babies have been born in different parts of the city. In almost every instance the babies lived and the mothers are getting along nicely.

More Than 50,000 Are Homeless

While approximately 8500 persons are being cared for by the relief committee there are more than 50,000 homeless persons in Dayton who are caring for themselves as best they can. None of the banks are open for business.

The city is without means of general transportation; there is not an electric light in the place except those of the National Cash Register company. There is no adequate water supply, the system is ruined, the available fuel supply is limited and the supply of natural gas, used for cooking, has been shut off since Tuesday.

Thrilling Escape of Thirty-four

Perilous trips around the coping of burning buildings with the flood below them marked the escape of 34 women and children from the flames that destroyed the structures on the north side of Third street. Driven by the flames the refugees retreated. Finally they reached the Cooper building which became the common place of refuge. Hemmed in on both sides, a way out was now sought across Third street. One of the party was let down with a rope. He swam to the opposite side, fastened a rope in a street staircase and then signalled his comrades behind.

Struggled Through Torrent

Supporting the women and children the men let themselves down from the Cooper building and struggled through the torrent swept street to the other side. The stairs led to safety on the upper floor. Then the entire 34 made their way to an alley and across to a place of safety.

In Ohio's Capital

Columbus.—This city will have the next to the largest loss of life, 56 bodies having already been found in the inundated portion of West Columbus.

Unverified figures for Miamisburg give 50 dead, but in all other flooded cities the figures fell off rapidly, as relief expeditions covered the ground.

The best figures from Piqua give a death toll of 13 persons. Fremont and Middletown, O., each had 14 dead; Massillion five and Zanesville ten.

In the Hoosier State

The Indiana total drowned receded to fewer than 50, distributed as follows: Peru 20, Brookville 16, Fort Wayne six, and Terra Haute four. No bodies have been found in West Indianapolis where as many as 200 deaths were at one time reported.

With the situation somewhat alleviated in the flood swept districts of Ohio and Indiana, a new menace threatens in the rise of rivers in the southern valleys of both states.

In Indiana alarm was felt in the valleys of the Ohio, Wabash and White rivers, but ample warning served in a measure to reduce the panic.

Eighteen Dead in Chillicothe

Chillicothe, O.—First authentic information regarding the loss of life here shows 18 persons dead.

Already 11 bodies have been taken from the wreckage of East End homes where many railroad men lived.

With field glasses, seven more bodies were discovered hanging on the Kilgore bridge, three miles south of here, but it has been impossible to bring them into the city.

Conditions are much improved. The light plant has been able to resume service and the water supply also again is adequate. The estimated damage to property is $1,000,000. Cleaning away of the wreckage has begun.

Four Deaths in Zanesville

Zanesville, O.—With communication being slowly restored, rumors are rife of loss of life, but there are only four known deaths in this city as a result of the flood. However, half the city is still submerged.

The property loss is estimated at between $6,000,000 and $8,000,000. Water completely covers the "Y" bridge to a depth of 15 feet and it cannot be told whether it is still standing.

Rufus C. Burton, president of the Chamber of Commerce, has asked Governor Cox for $50,000 to be used in alleviating distress.

The city has been endangered by several fires which died out on their own accord, as no fire fighting apparatus could be gotten near. The worst of these fires was when the Old Burt mule barns, in which a carload of carbide was stored, was burned.

Along the Big Miami

A scene of desolation that defies description is being uncovered between Hamilton and Lawrenceburg by the receding waters of the Great Miami river. Wreckage of the homes of once prosperous farmers is strewn miles beyond the normal banks of the river, and refugees can find little consolation in the inevitable prediction of loss of life and incalculable property damage.

Not the slightest word or signal that might be construed to be hopeful had been received from Harrison, Ohio, and as the little city is located on a site that must have been partly submerged to a depth of many feet, grave fears are entertained for the safety of the inhabitants. Wire and rail communication with the city have been severed since the last bridge was swept away.

Will Have to Rebuild

It is estimated that it will cost about $2,000,000 to repair the damage done by the flood to the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton railroad, on the main line between Cincinnati and Toledo and between Hamilton and Indianapolis. Officials state that the road will have to be rebuilt entirely between Hamilton and Dayton.

On Ohio's Southern Border

Along the Kentucky shore conditions are rapidly becoming worse. At Covington more than 500 houses are submerged and their occupants are being given shelter and protection in public buildings.

Plans are rapidly being formulated to care for flood sufferers and a meeting was held at Covington at which arrangements were made to raise funds for the purpose.

At the same time arrangements also were made for policing the flood zone and preventing looting.

Many Citizens Leave Home

As the Ohio and Licking rivers rise and the former attains the 70 foot stage, more and more of Covington recedes beneath the surface of the flood waters. Inhabitants of the western end of the city have left their homes.

The river front section of Ludlow is deep under water and the residents have removed. Bromley is entirely cut off from other neighboring towns. Dayton, Ky., and other nearby small towns, are in the same isolated condition and there is much suffering in consequence.

Newport, which, with Covington, is opposite Cincinnati, forming the larger of the suburban sections, is in almost as bad a case as its neighboring city, the flood is rising in all parts of the town.

Close Bridges to the Public

One of the bridges across the Ohio has been closed and authorities are preparing to close others to the public.

The Picture in Indiana

Brookville, Ind.—Sixteen known dead half a dozen missing, heavy loss of property and live stock and a food and fuel famine imminent is the situation in Brookville. Many of those rescued will, it is feared, die from the effects of exposure.

There are six persons missing and it is feared that they have been drowned and their bodies washed away, or buried in the debris that has not yet been searched.

Disease Attacks Survivors

Indianapolis.— Indianapolis' flood death toll remains uncertain with all reports confirming more conservative estimates of the lost, while panic is attacking cities in the southern valleys of the White and Wabash rivers and all along the Ohio as rising water threaten repetitions of the upstate horrors. Sunshine and disappearing waters relieved sufferers in the cities that have been flooded and authorities in charge of various localities face a great problem in fighting off disease before the insistent demands of refugees and that they be permitted to return to their devastated homes.

West Indianapolis and Peru were placed under the strictest quarantine orders. Much serious sickness among Peru refugees is threatening greater toll than was caused by the waters. The Indianapolis city board of health quarantined West Indianapolis.

No bodies were found after a diligent search, but rescue workers assert they saw a number drowned and swept away down the river. Receding waters left West Indianapolis covered with mud and filth and in great danger of disease epidemics.

Along the Ohio

New Albany and Evansville citizens were especially alarmed at the continued rise of the Ohio, and all movables were being carried to places of certain safety. Four drownings were reported from Terra Haute, where the Wabash river continued rising. Vincennes is said to be in great danger but all reliable communication with that place has been cut off.

RUINS OF SACRED HEART CONVENT, OMAHA

Just before the full force of the tornado struck Omaha the nuns of the Sacred Heart convent took refuge in a house across the street. A moment after the last of the women had left the convent its walls collapsed.

Investigations tend to confirm the estimates of fewer than 500 deaths in the floods that swept over a score of cities in Ohio and Indiana last week. The waters receded from Dayton, Columbus and other places, leaving a thick coating of mud. Alarm was caused by a rapid rise in the Ohio and Mississippi rivers, inundating parts of cities along their banks. There is not much danger of loss of life in these places, however, as the inhabitants have hills to flee to and are used to floods.

Revised reports indicate that the number drowned in Dayton, may not exceed 150, although there are those who say the number will be much greater.

The death list at Piqua, Ohio, fell off from the estimate of 50 to 12 known dead.

The latest estimates show the following deaths:

Ohio.
Dayton	150
Columbus	56
*Hamilton	50
*Miamisburg	50
Tiffin	18
Chillicothe	18
Middletown	14

*—Roughly estimated.

Indianapolis' worst danger now lies in a wave of disease that may follow the floods. Government health authorities are reaching the northern Wabash valley from Chicago and Dr. C. O. Cobb, the surgeon general of the marine hospital at Chicago with a staff of assistants will aid state and city authorities. Water service was resumed with warnings issued that the water must not be used for drinking

MANY TO BE PROVIDED FOR

Forty Thousand Must Be Fed, Clothed and Housed for a Week, or More.

Dayton, O.—Here is the problem presented to Dayton as summarized by George F. Burba, secretary to Governor Cox and representing the latter here:

Forty thousand persons must be fed, clothed and housed for a week more.

Many thousand persons must be cared for indefinitely, these persons who lost their all, when their household goods were swept away. They must be provided with a few necessary household articles, such as bedding, pots and pans, stoves and a few dollars. A half million dollars could be used in this way by the relief committee.

Fifteen thousand houses and business buildings must berehabilitated.

Two thousand houses and other structures, or what remains of them, must be pulled down.

Thousands of tons of debris must be removed.

Following are some of the accomplishments since the flood broke over the city:

The water works pumping station is in operation, but the distribution of water is greatly retarded by open pipes in wrecked houses. The pressure is feeble, but growing stronger as leaks are checked.

The main sanitary sewer is in operation, although many of the laterals leading from houses are clogged with mud or backed up with water.

The flood sewer, separation from the sanitary, will be in operation soon. These sewers carry off the rainfall from the gutters and are needed now to remove the water being pumped from basements.

Telegraph service is fast catching up with requirements, which have been and are still enormous.

No braver service has been performed than these by the telegraph and telephone linemen, who made possible the disseminations to hundreds of thousands of friends and relatives of Daytonians. They waded and swam icy floods and entered tottering buildings unhesitatingly in pursuit of their duty. John H. Patterson, chairman of the general committee, found many operators who had not removed shoes or clothing since last Tuesday. There is enough food and clothing for present needs, but relief will be required on a diminishing scale for another month.

Martial Law Extended.

By order of Governor Cox the reign of martial law over Dayton was extended to take in the whole county.

OBSERVE MEMORIAL DAY

DAUGHTERS OF CONFEDERACY MAKE REQUEST.

The few ladies composing the daughters of the Confederacy in Clanton are determined that Memorial day shall not pass altogether unobserved here. While they have made no extensive arrangements for the observance of the day—a day which seems to be almost forgotten, in Clanton, but is elsewhere an evergreen day in the South—they are determined that some honor shall be paid to the memory of the old soldiers who rest in the quiet city of the dead.

Just what program will be carried out they have not yet decided upon, but one definite plan has been determined: They will meet on Friday, April 25th to do such work about the cemetery as is necessary, especially to clean and decorate the graves of those who in the memorable struggle of the sixties wore the grey.

Whether or not they will select an orator for the occasion has not yet been definitely decided, but other appropriate ceremonies will be held. It is the desire and request of the daughters of the Confederacy that all who are interested, those who love the South for its memories and its traditions, those who have loved ones sleeping in God's acre, those who in any other way may be interested, Come with them at 3:00 o'clock in the afternoon of Friday, April 25, and assist in this labor of love and at the same time enjoy a program that will be elevating as well as entertaining.

NEARLY SERIOUS

SUNDAY NOON ACCIDENT

Last Sunday, near the noon hour, Mr. W. W. Fox, who had been on a short trip into the country, was returnining in a buggy with his driver when the horse attached to the buggy, became frightened and plunged madly down the street, throwing both Mr. Fox and his driver forcibly to the ground.

It appears that the horse became frightened at the touching of the shaft and before the driver was aware of it had gained such headway that it was practically impossible to stop him. He turned quickly, made a circuit near the post office and crashed into the posts near the post office, where the buggy was overturned and the horse freed from the harness.

Mr. Fox, recognizing the danger, attempted to jump, and in his effort was thrown to the ground, sustaining several severe bruises; the negro stuck to his job bravely and was thrown on his head; for quite a while it looked as if the poor negro was dead; he lay entirely motionless for some seconds; when assistance arrived he was picked up and given a seat on the curbstone where he sat for a few moments and then walked away as if nothing out of the ordinary had happened.

It came near being a serious affair and how the two escaped without even more serious injuries is a mystery.

Mr. Fox says that he "jumped out" but if he did, if he did, eh should be written as the most ungraceful acrobat in all this section; a sway-backed cow could do the "turkey trot" more gracefully than Mr. Fox did the jump act; but maybe he did jump; least wise we are not saying he didn't jump.

Dr. Grote, who is in Chilton in the interest of the hookworm investigation, has arranged a most attractive itinerary in order that he may deliver lectures throughout the county before establishing his dispensaries for the treatment of the disease. The list of the places will be published later.

MAJOR ATKINS HERE.

TALKS TO COMMISSIONERS' COURT

Major Atkins, of Selma, a member of the State Road Commission, was here during the week and addressed the Commissioners' Court with reference to the building of public roads in the county, and the feasibility, as well as the desirability of issuing bonds to that end.

In his capacity as one of the Commissioners of the State he has visited every county of the state and has had large experience in the building of roads; hence, his advice is worth much more than the ordinary man on such matters. He has seen the working of the bond issue in other counties, has looked upon the roads built by bond issues and upon those attempted to be built without bonds; he knows what a bond issue means; he has discussed the matter with men of large experience over the state and knows that in those counties where bonds have been issued the people are satisfied and contented. He advises every county to fall in line and assist in securing a system of good roads by bond issue.

But, his business in Chilton, primarily, was to tell the Commissioners' court that they must complete the Clanton-Maplesville road, in first class shape or that the state would "step in" and do the work and charge it to the county.

Now that may sound a little unreasonable at first but to a thinking man it is sound logic. The Commissioners are to be praised, greatly praised, for what they have already done; every one in the section worked is loud in their praise of the commissioners; the road, they say, is an "A. 1" road so far as the work goes, but it hasn't gone quite far enough; its like building a fine house and failing to put a roof upon it.

The state is interested in that road—it has invested money in it—and it does not feel inclined to let its money go to waste by not having the necessary "roof."

The commissioners readily saw the logic in the argument and agreed to do its full duty in the premises. This, of course, was to be expected of the Commissioners; they have measured up to the full duty thus far and no one except a grouch is disposed to criticise them adversely.

The visit of Major Atkins was timely, however, and much appreciated.

SHERIFF CAPTURES MORE

Over on the western side of the county, in the classic little town of Maplesville, of picturesque cognomen, one would scarcely think that that species of varmints known as tigers would keep their lair, and, yet, sad to relate, such is the case. Yes, a lair large enough to accommodate a circus tent full of tigers; tigers as blind as the proverbial bat, if you are ready to admit that a tiger ever goes blind or that any other than a brick bat is devoid of optics.

But, to the point; while on a visit to the west side last Sunday Deputy Fallon coralled two tigers (both males, but one white and the other black) and four dark hued panthers. The first two, Goodman Smotherman and Harry White (who is black) were the tigers of the menagerie; they were charged with dispensing liquid refreshments, such as Governor O'Neal and his law-makers say shall not (in certain prescribed sections) stain the lips of men.

The four panthers were accused of mixing it up in a fisticuff and making things unpleasant generally. The half dozen were safely ensconsed in the hotel de Jones and were left during the night to contemplate the truthfulness of that old, old saying, "the way of the trangressor, etc."

ALEX RICE

We printed last week, and are reproducing this week a large fifteen inch double column advertisement of that prince of merchants, Alex Rice of Montgomery. If you have not read it you should do so; it will entertain you. Mr. Rice has, perhaps, clothed more prominent Alabamians than any other merchant in the State; his name is a household word in his home town. He is recognized as a prince of good fellows, a merchant whose every effort is to please—and he says if he doesn't please in every particular he wants no money—and a gentleman who is behind every movement for the upbuilding of his home and state, not only with his efforts but with a generous wad from his pocket book.

The following marriage licenses were issued this week: Mr. Gust Albertson to Miss Eva Giles, Mr. C. O. Keen to Miss Cora Shurbutt, Mr. J. W. Smith to Miss Eula Traywick, Mr. A. J. Baker to Miss Annie Thomas, Mr. Chas. G. Gay to Miss Minnie O. Sutton, Mr. J. P. Smith to Miss L. C. Hall.

BLOUNT VOTES TO $150,000 ROAD BONDS

Oneonta, Ala., April 5.—Special—The election held in Blount county Thursday to determine whether or not the bonds of the county to the amount of $150,000 should be issued for the purpose of building roads carried by a small majority, about 56 out of a total vote of 1900. Every precinct in the Fourth Commissioners District, the district adjoining Jefferson county, went for the bond issue, while every precinct in the Third District, the one adjoining Etowah, went against it.

The campaign was one of the warmest ever waged in this county.

COURT HOUSE NEWS

The Commissioners have been in session for the past three days passing accounts, going over road affairs, hearing petitions and otherwise attending to the duties imposed upon them by law. They have been a very busy set of men this week.

Among other things was to engage the services of Mr. J. E. Poole of Birmingham, an expert machinist, to run the road machinery recently purchased. Mr. Poole has been for some years in the employment of the company which manufactures the machines and is the right man in the right place. We commend the Commissioners for their foresight in employing so competent a man for this duty. Mr. J. M. (Dock) Robinson was engaged as assistant.

The new cells for the jail have arrived and are being hauled to the jail; they will not, of course, be put in position for some days yet—till the addition to the jail is completed.

Among other things done by the Commissioners was to order a fire-proof vault of improved pattern for the safekeeping of the records of the county. This vault will be built in the north room of the Probate Judge's office and will be used exclusively for records, the old vault being used as a utility vault.

CONTESTED WILL.

Judge Deason was busily engaged Wednesday in the trial of a contested will case. The contest involves the distribution of quite a bit of property and seems to have attracted more than ordinary attention. It appears that one side claims that Mrs. Mary F. Bridges, a former resident of this county, died leaving a will in and through which she disposed of her property to certain parties. This will, however, was lost before it was probated, or submitted for probate, and a copy of the will was afterward presented, or an instrument purporting to be an exact copy was so presented. Those to whom property was left in in the supposed copy of the will contend that it should be accepted as the real will of the decedent, while others contend that Mrs. Bridges never made any will whatever and that the will presented is a bogus instrument.

The case came up for trial last week before Judge Deason, but a trial by jury was demanded and the case postponed till Wednesday of this week. Just what the outcome of the case will be the Press is unable to say as the case had not been decided when this was put in print. Messrs. Mullins & Smith, Middleton & Reynolds represent one side while the contending side is represented by Senator Curry and Messrs. Logan & Logan of Centreville.

Whichever way the case is decided it will probably be taken for final adjudication to the Supreme Court.

RAGING WATERS CAUSE DAMAGE

LEVEE GIVES WAY AT HICKMAN, KENTUCKY, AND FLOODS THE TOWN.

ALL PERSONS WERE WARNED

Western Section of the City Is Covered With From Fifteen to Eighteen Feet of Water.

Hickman, Ky.—As a result of the terrific beating of the waves against the dikes protecting the lower portion of this city, the levee gave way, the Mississippi poured through the gap at a mad rate of speed. All persons employed in the district had been warned out earlier in the day, and no loss of life is reported.

The break will not relieve the river situation at other points, the water coming through being turned back to the main stream by the government, or Reelfoot levee, two miles below the town. The section flooded is occupied by several factories, and the homes of several hundred workmen.

According to the report, the Reelfoot levee is withstanding the flood in good shape, no bad spots being reported.

The break came at a point near the Mongel Box company's saw mill, where a 'blow-out" occurred under a concrete wall. Within a short time, the forces watching the levee had cut the dike at six other places to equalize the spread of the water over West Hickman.

A large barge carrying machinery was in the river just outside the point where the blow-out came, and when the levee broke, carrying away about fifty feet of the bank, the boat went through the crevasse, tearing down a building on the inside.

The western section of the city is covered with about fifteen feet of water. Because of the advance notice given the residents, the property loss will be less than last year.

Reports from Columbus, Ky., state that a government quarter boat had arrived there and that the flood refugees have plenty of food and shelter.

SUFFRAGETTES USE TORCH

Large Country House Burned in England by Women.

London.—The suffragettes, continuing their campaign of retaliation against the sentence of Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, their leader, to a term of imprisonment, succeeded in destroying another large country house by fire.

As in several previous cases of the kind, the residence, which was situated at Cherleywood, Buckinghamshire, was unoccupied, but was being prepared for the reception of a tenant. The owners of the building, a firm of contractors, estimate their loss at $12,500.

Cards bearing the inscription, "votes for women," and other suffragette mottoes, were found on the grounds.

The police claim that some of the recent criminal acts attributed to the suffragettes, principally the attempts to destroy railway property, was the work of men engaged by the women. All the railway stations and tunnels are being patrolled to prevent miscreants from damaging them.

General Huerta to Resign.

El Paso, Texas.—To satisfy all factions in the Mexican melee, General Huerta has agreed to the naming of Pedro Lascurain as provisional president, said advices received here directly from the national capital. Lascurain would serve out the unexpired term of the late President Madero. As minister of exterior relations in Madero's cabinet Lascurain is entitled to serve as next in line, in view of the deaths of Madero and Vice President Suarez. The Huerta cabinet would be retained by the compromise.

Battleship Crashes Into Steamer.

Philadelphia.—The United States battleship Ohio was in collision with the steamship Frederich of the Merchants and Miners' line, while proceeding up the Delaware river.

Ghouls Open Graves of Fever Victims.

Griffin, Ga.—Disastrous consequences to the health of the city are feared by the medical profession here from the desecration of ghouls of graves of two white children who died of scarlet fever in 1855. Protest has been made to the police against the graves continuing open a minute longer than is necessary and demand has been made that the bodies be reinterred at once, as the disease of which they died is contagious. "There were enough germs in those coffins to kill a city," said a doctor.

Mexico Must Wait.

Washington.—President Wilson indicated informally what the attitude of this government would be toward Mexico, China and the Philippines. Pending a settlement of affairs in Mexico, holding of elections and establishment of a stable government, recognition probably will be withheld. The Chinese republic is to be recognized. Notice of this intention has been given to the diplomats of all foreign governments represented at Washington.

MATTER OF JUSTICE

HUMAN SIDE OF TARIFF ISSUE TO BE CONSIDERED.

Secretary Redfield Has Put the Matter Plainly, and the Democratic Party Is in Position to Rectify Errors.

William C. Redfield, the new secretary of commerce, recently spoke on the human side of the tariff issue. He said, in part:

"The result of the high tariff has been most serious on its moral side, because it has led to the belief that business success is the sole end of human endeavor, and because it has built up a commercial aristocracy. The fact that certain of our manufacturers receive favors through the workings of the tariff creates class distinctions. * * * The tariff has tended to destroy our confidence in our own powers. * * * The manufacturers who have thus had the mantle of protection thrown over them would be other than human if their moral nature did not suffer from this guardianship."

Secretary Redfield expresses not only his own thought, but that of President Wilson, and a great majority of the American people. The tariff is a moral issue. It must be settled, not on a basis of profits for trusts, but of justice for human beings. It is not a matter of involved calculations, but of plain right and wrong.

The Aldrich tariff has robbed consumers and made moral paupers of rich manufacturers. It has taxed warm clothing from the backs of the poor, and it has sent favored rich sniveling to congress to beg for more unjust privileges. If the Democratic majority in house and senate has the courage to do right, the American people will see that such courage is rewarded.

One Thing at a Time.

The house majority leaders are right in urging that only the tariff be acted upon at the session to be called for next month. Mr. Wilson is well advised in approving their policy. One thing at a time is a good rule. The most important thing first is a still better rule.

The Wilson administration is a tariff-revision administration. The Democratic party in congress is a tariff-revision party. Until the tariff is revised and justice done to the consumer neither will have time for other legislative business.

For the Democrats to allow themselves to be diverted from their main task and to devote time and energy to other matters would be a mistake. The correction of the abuses of the Payne-Aldrich schedules and the adjustment of revenues to the needs of the government are questions that will require all their attention for many weeks. Other legislation can well wait until next winter.

Must Be Aggressive.

Like Lincoln, Woodrow Wilson has no bitterness for the foes against whom he has led a victorious people. He admits the good that has come through generations of development; but he is more concerned with the evil which has come with the good, the evil which he feels the people have commanded him to eradicate. The victory which has placed him in the White House is not the culmination, but merely the beginning of the struggle. He would square every process of national life with the ideals set up by the American people at the beginning, and which they still carry at their hearts. To do this he must labor without ceasing. He must still be the aggressive leader of the army of regeneration. He needs the aid of all whom he can enlist in this army—"all honest men, all patriotic, all forward looking men."

Country Needs a Rest.

It seems clear that the Democratic party will do what is best and most prudent for the country and itself if it will get through its self-imposed task of tariff revision as quickly as possible, adjourn congress, and give the American people a rest. For eight or ten years political agitation affecting the foundations of industry and commerce has been incessant, and we all need a rest, a chance to get our breath and take stock of our situation, that we may find out whither we are going and what our state is likely to be when we get there.

Begins Administration Well.

The postmaster general is founding his administration on firm ground. He is rewarding merit and getting the benefit of a knowledge of postoffice business that few other men possess in the same degree as Mr. Chance.

More business men of a high grade in congress, and fewer commissions, would best solve the tariff question, the trust question, and all the other business questions about which we are now contending.

Trusts the Only Beneficiaries.

Coffee, tea, fruits, nuts and possibly fertilizers are imported in such forms as to be ready for use. These products came in free in 1913 to the value of $186,000,000. Consumers got the benefit of this much freedom from taxes.

Other things on the free list are handled by some trust before they are ready for use. Free trade in raw material profits the trust, and tariff on finished products helps up prices to consumers.

An American archaeologist is said to have solved the riddle of the sphinx by boring into its head and removing the sand. It is so with many other sphinxes.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Bear's Grease and Baldness.

In a recent volume of reminiscences the writer states that baldness is much more common now than in his early days, and ascribes the modern man's loss of hair to the decrease in the use of "bear's grease." TO REDUCE COST OF LIFE'S NECESSITIES

NEW TARIFF BILL WOULD REMOVE DUTY FROM MANY ARTICLES OF FOOD.

OF FAR REACHING EFFECT

Embraces Many Changes With Numerous Items on the Free List.

Washington.—Removal of all tariff from many articles of food and clothing; broad reductions in the rates of duty on all necessities of life; an increase of tariff on many luxuries, and a new income tax that would touch the pocket of every American citizen whose net income exceeds $4,000 are the striking features of the new democratic tariff revision bill presented to the House.

Sugar would be free of duty in 1916, the bill proposing an immediate 25 per cent reduction and the removal of the remaining duty in 1916.

Raw wool would be made free at once with a correspondingly heavy reduction in the tariff on all woolen goods.

All these other articles are put on the free list, namely:

Meats, flour, bread, boots and shoes, lumber, coal, harness, saddlery, iron ore, milk and cream, potatoes, salt, swine, corn; corn meal, cotton bagging, agricultural implements, leather, wood pulp, Bibles, printing paper not worth more than 2 1-2 cents per pound, typewriters, sewing machines, typesetting machines, cash registers, steel rails, fence wire, cotton ties, nails, hoop and band iron, fish, sulphur, soda, tanning materials, acetic and sulphuric acids, borax, lumber products, including broom handles, clapboards, hubs for wheels, posts, laths, pickets, staves, shingles.

The principal articles are taken from the free list and taxed. Rough and uncut diamonds and precious stones, furs, coal tar products, 10 per cent; volatile oils, 20 per cent; spices from 1 cent to 2 cents per pound.

Chairman Underwood of the ways and means committee in his statement accompanying the new tariff bill gave the following comparative table to show reductions in tariff duties, made upon necessaries. In each item both the present tariff and the proposed tariff had been reduced to an ad valorem basis:

Pensions are not the only things commanded and forgotten. An inquisitive member of the British house of commons was struck one day by the presence of a policeman in one of the lobbies. He wondered why this particular lobby should always have a guardian strolling up and down and made inquiries. The records of the house were searched and it was found that fifty years previously, when the lobby was being decorated, a policeman had been stationed there to keep members from soiling their clothes. The order never having been countermanded, the constable had kept his beat for half a century.

CHARGE ON THE COMMUNITY

Care of Those Afflicted With Tuberculosis Plainly a Drag on the General Welfare.

Dr. H. L. Barnes, superintendent of the Rhode Island state sanatorium, has recently demonstrated by some interesting studies of patients discharged as "apparently cured" from that institution, that a sanatorium is a sound investment for any state or city. The gross earnings of 170 ex-patients obtained in 1911 amounted to $102,752, and those of 211 cases in 1912 to $112,021. By applying the same average earnings to all ex-patients of the sanatorium living in 1911 and 1912, Dr. Barnes concludes that their incomes in these two years was $551,000. This sum is more than three times the cost of maintenance of the sanatorium, including interest at 4 per cent. on the original investment and depreciation charges. Dr. Barnes concludes, however, "While institutions for the cure of tuberculosis are good investments, there is good reason for thinking that institutions for the isolation of far advanced cases would be still better investments."

SHE TURNED GREENISH YELLOW

Her Sons, From Suggestion of Friend, Paved Way for Mother's Recovery.

Wicomico, Va.—In an interesting letter from this town, Mrs. Senora C. Seawell says: "I want to say that I cannot express the gratitude which I owe to Cardui, the woman's tonic. To me it was indeed a God-send.

Before I began taking Cardui, seemingly, my days were numbered, and my relatives and friends despaired of my life, and why not? I had always been so happy and cheerful, which changed quickly to misery and wretchedness. My complexion turned to a greenish yellow, I had no appetite, and, altogether, I was a wreck.

I had often seen Cardui advertised, and spoke of it to one of my friends. She told my boys, who sold Cardui, and next time they came home, they brought me a bottle. I had been suffering tortures for eight or more years. I commenced taking Cardui, and before I had used half of the first bottle, I felt like my old self again. I look so well now my friends tell me they don't believe anything would kill me. I certainly feel that I am a true friend of, and a living advertisement for, Cardui, the woman's tonic."

The above letter explains itself. If your health is low, and your strength is waning, take Cardui, the woman's tonic.

Something Seemed Lacking.

One of the best known London newspapers, in a review of "Lincoln's Own Stories," collected by Anthony Gross, commented on the anecdote which Lincoln was fond of telling of a family of such migratory habits that they were able to get everything into one wagon; and even the chickens were so used to being moved that when ever they saw the wagon sheets brought out they laid themselves on their backs and crossed their legs, ready to be tied. The British reviewer, with an insular sense of humor, remarked: "One feels a little as though something must have been accidentally left out of this and of many other stories in the book."

Thirteen Not Unlucky for Him.

Dr. Nansen has good reason to regard thirteen as a lucky number. The crew of the Fram, in which he made the most successful of his expeditions, consisted of thirteen men, who all, after an absence of three years, returned to their homes in perfect safety. Dr. Nansen arrived back in Norway on August 13, 1896, and on the same day the Fram emerged from her long drift on the ice into the open sea. Moreover, during the voyage, as the doctor records, "Kirk presented us with thirteen pups, a curious coincidence—thirteen pups born on December 13, 1893, for thirteen men."

Entered at the Post Office at Clanton, Ala., as second-class mail matter under act of Congress, March 3rd, 1879.

What's the latest from those Burns detectives employed by the state? Still on the tracks of Lacy? But, what the people want to know is where did Lacy make tracks?

Woodrow Wilson is the first President since the days of John Adams who exercised the right to read his own message to Congress. Woodsie wanted to deliver the goods himself—first hand—and he delivered them in a nice little package.

We have received a large mail pouch of garden seeds from Congressman Hobson, for which we are deeply grateful. Those wishing seed for gardening purposes will please call at the Press offices and receive a quantity with our compliments and those of Congressman Hobson.

Blount county, last week, voted for bonds for road improvement and the Birmingham Ledger has this to say, editorially, about that action: "Blount county again demonstrated its wisdom by voting a bond issue for improved highways. It is a move for the advancement of all interests in that county"

There are none so blind as those who will not see.

Cotton still holding its own and under a democratic administration! Gee, but isn't that funny? Who'd a thought it? Two full crop years, one right after the other, and then a democratic administration on top of that, and cotton playing tag with the thirteen cent notch!

Come on brethren, explain! What's the answer, huh?

The Superintendent of Education dropped from the list of eligible school teachers the names of one hundred and fifty four teachers in the state. Tuskaloosa came in for the largest drop—fourteen, though that county is the home of three colleges, the state University being one of them. The cause was non-attendance upon teachers' Institutes. Chilton lost but three for this cause, namely:—Mrs. Martha Mims, Clanton, F. Ivins Popwell, Clanton, and Jno. R. Scott, Lomax, The state puts its money in and behind these institutes and it naturally expects the teachers to measure up to their full duty.

The press and the public seem to be fearfully at variance with what is the true facts with reference to election of Senators by direct vote,

Most of the papers are contending, and some statesmen too—that three fourths of the states having ratified the constitutional amendment, it automatically becomes a law. That would be true, if true, but, as it hasn't been done, it isn't true.

When did Alabama, for instance, ever ratify any constitutional amendment of any kind? Never! It merely memorialized Congress to submit such an amendment. The democratic party, it is true, has committed itself to the direct election of Senators, or rather to their selection in that manner, but after all is done, the House of Representatives has to ELECT him.

The same is true in many other states. The direct election of Senators is yet afar off we fear.

Three fourths of the states have committed themselves to such a policy, it is true, but, there has been but few states that have voted upon the matter in such a way as the constitution requires, or in such a way as to make the law operative.

It will come, just as woman suffrage will come, but the time is not yet

BOND ISSUES FOR IMPROVED ROADS.

MARSHALL COUNTY LATEST TO FALL INTO LINE.

The Birmingham Ledger says that the good roads movement in Alabama has scored another victory by the people of Marshall county voting a $130,000 bond issue to build modern highways in that county. A few days ago the voters of Cullman authorized the issuance of $150,000 worth of bonds to build good roads. Blount county is to pass on a bond issue, and the good roads advocates feel that Blount will join in this progressive movement.

The good roads movement has reached an interesting stage in Chilton county, and it is believed that very soon a special election will be called to authorize the issuance of bonds with which to build good roads.

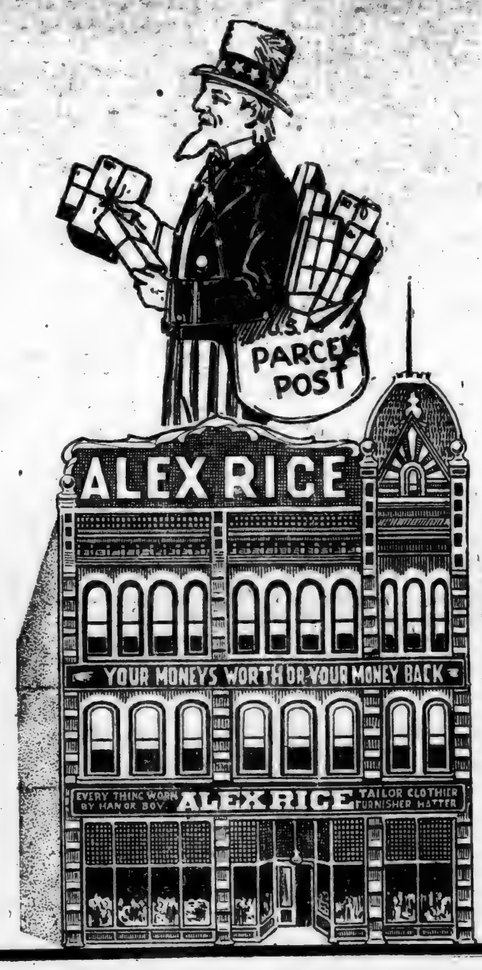
Must You Be Bald?

What have you done to stop your hair from falling? Have you tried Rexall "93" Hair Tonic? If not, we want you to try it at our risk.

If you have dandruff; if your hair is falling out and your scalp is not glazed and shiny, if you use Rexall "93" Hair Tonic according to directions for thirty days, and at the end of that time you are not thoroughly satisfied with the results and will tell us so, we will immediately hand back your money. We won't ask you to promise anything. We won't even question you. We will take your mere word and return your money.

Doesn't it stand to reason that Rexall "93" Hair Tonic must be a mighty good remedy and have given great satisfaction to our customers if we endorse it like this? We know of no similar remedy that is as good. It is because of what Rexall "93" Hair Tonic has done for others that we back it with our own money.

Why suffer scalp and hair trouble or be bald, when Rexall "93" Hair Tonic will remove dandruff, make your scalp comfortable and healthy, promote hair growth and tend to prevent baldness—when we will pay for the treatment should it fail to please you?



We don't obligate you to anything. You simply buy the treatment; use it, and if not pleased, come back to us empty-handed—and we will hand back what you paid us. Two sizes, 50c and $1.00 a bottle.

LOCAL & PERSONAL

Mr. Chas. Cox took in the greet violin performance in Birmingham last Monday night; or rather, he says it took him which probably is the more correct way of putting it.

Mr. N. J. Calloway was fined five dollars and costs recently for having hitched his horse across the sidewalk. This venerable old gentleman took "his medicine" quite philosophically and seemed to enjoy the predicament in which he found shimelf. Perhaps that will be a lesson to others.

Miss Knowlton Marcus was among the Montonites who attended the recitation given by the great violinist Ysaye at the Jefferson Theatre Monday night.

The many friends of Mr. Frank Crichton, former owner and editor of the Banner, will regret to hear that he is seriously ill and that there is now little hope of his recovery.

The Ladies Aid cleared exactly Seventy dollars last Friday at the bazaar and dinner given in the Mullins building. This is quite a tidy little sum to clear on a rainy day and shows what united effort and determination can do.

Mr. W. W. Fox went up to Birmingham Wednesday morning on a business trip.

The town has been full of our country friends all during the week attending the sessions of the County Court or Commissioners Court.

Mr. Marvin Aldridge came into town Monday afternoon with the finest string of trout ever seen in this section. Everyone was asking questions and before noon set forty people had arranged to go over fishin."

Mr. J. M. Morgan was taken to Montgomery Tuesday morning to consult a specialist. He received much encouragement and at last reports is resting well.

Mrs. P. I. Hopkins has been spending some days with her sister, Mrs. S. C. Matthews, in Mobile.

Remember that next Sunday is the regular service day at the Methodist church. The pastor earnestly requests all members to be present. Visitors are, of course, most cordially welcomed.

Elsewhere will be found the professional card of Mr. Victor J. Heard, who has come to Clanton to practice his profession. Mr. Heard's former home was in Montgomery; he comes to us most highly recommended and should find a warm welcome from the people of Chilton. Aside from Mr. Heard's handsome appearance, he is a gentleman well versed in the law, and, will doubtless succeed in building up a large practice in this his adopted home.

Mr. J. D. Sims returned last Saturday night from Birmingham, accompanied by Mrs. Sims, who has been for the past several weeks a patient in one of the infirmaries of that city. The beam of gladness and joy that illumined old J. D.'s face would have made the sun turn green with envy.

Mrs. Jno. W. Stanfield and Miss Alice spent Monday in Montgomery on a shopping tour.

Mr. E. F. Mead of Thorsby was in Clanton before the Commissioners Court this week in the interest of his concrete work. While here he presented the Press man with a handsome door stop for which we return thanks.

Miss Boshia McKee was a visitor to the capital city Monday, returning on the afternoon train.

Mr. Connor Wilson, who has been teaching school in Autauga county, returned home Sunday for the Summer vacation.

Messrs. Thos. D. Woods, Mack Broadhead, H. T. Pipes and Clyde Davis went over to Maplesville Sunday last to spend the day with the parents of the former, Rev. and Mrs. F. M. Woods.

Montgomery is fast becoming the Sunday Mecca for Clanton young men; last Sunday there were twenty-six of them to spend the day in the capital city.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Taylor of Verbena were circulating among Clanton friends Monday of this week.

Mr. Len Gullahorn was receiving the congratulations of his Clanton friends upon his almost complete recovery from injuries sustained in the recent boiler explosion at his mill near Verbena.

The Court of County Commissioners was in session for several days this week looking into various busiess affairs of the county.

Mr. H. B. Oliver of Verbena spent the day here Monday with friends.

Hon. F. A. Gulledge of Verbena spent Monday in Clanton on business.

THEATRE PARTY

Monday afternoon quite a jolly crowd boarded the north bound train for Birmingham to take in the great Ysaye, world famed violinist. After the theatre the party enjoyed a sumptuous dinner at the Florence. Those composing the party were:—

Madames Gamma Anderson and J. H. Middleton; Misses Elna Sartor, Anne Stallworth, Marguerite Chappelle, Willie Reynolds, Delene Hayes, Ruby Gore and Beverley Hester; Messrs Barney Roberts and Mack Broadhead. Master J. H. Hiddleton, Jr. went as mascot and thoroughly enjoyed the trip. The party (except Mrs. Anderson and Miss Chappelle) returned on the morning train and report having had a most delightful visit. Mrs Anderson remained over to do some shopping and Miss Chappelle to visit friends in the Magic City.

Mr. W. Hop Killingsworth of Jemison was here Monday attending court.

Mr. Roy E. Fitts of Stanton paid the Press a pleasant visit during his stay in Clanton this week in attendance upon court.

Miss Coleman of Thorsby, a most charming young lady, was a pleasant visitor to the Press offices this week.

Mr. W. A. Collier, Jr., of Paducah, Ky., spent a few days in Clanton this week mingling with old friends.

Cause for Alarm

Loss of appetite or distress after eating—a symptom that should not be disregarded.

It is not what you eat but what you digest and assimilate that does you good. Some of the strongest, healthiest persons are moderate eaters. Nothing will cause more trouble than a disordered stomach, and many people contract serious maladies through disregard or abuse of the stomach.

We urge all who suffer from indigestion, or dyspepsia, to try Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets, with the understanding that we will refund the money paid us without question or formality, if after use you are not perfectly satisfied with results.

We recommend Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets to customers every day, and have yet to hear of one who has not been benefited. We believe them to be without equal. They give prompt relief, aiding to neutralise acidity, stimulate flow of gastric juice, strengthen the digestive organs, and thus promote perfect nutrition and correct unhealthy symptoms. Three sizes, 25 cents, 50 cents, and $1.

CLIP YOUR HORSES.

A clipped horse will do more work and keep in better condition on same amount of food, than one unclipped, and he will do it with more vim and vigor—easier to keep clean and looks so much better in fact it makes a new horse out of him. Clip him this Spring and you will never let him go through another without being clipped.

We have a first class machine and experienced men to do the work. Our Vetenary Department is equipped with power floats for filling horses teeth without cutting or brushing their gums and mouth like the old style floats. If your horse isn't doing well or does not respond to feed as you think he should; in the majority of cases it is on account of rough or uneven teeth, and a dollar or so to spend toward the correction of the evil, will pay well in the horses rapid improvement, enabling him to properly masticate his food.

Remember we can take care of your horse clipping vetenary, dental work and horse shoeing. Come to see us, We guarantee satisfaction.
